Ickes Attacks Demagogues, Pleads Press Guard Rights

'Base' and 'Loathsome' Charge Hurled at Get-Rich Schemes.

False Doctrines Are Termed Cruel

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—The constitutional guarantees of freedom of press and speech and the right of free assemblage were characterized as "the Three Musketeers of our constitutional forces" by Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes today at the annual luncheon of the Associated Press.

"We might give up all the rest of our Constitution," he said, "if occasion required it, and yet have sure anchorage for the mooring of our good ship America, if these rights remained to us unimpaired."

He voiced the opinion that the fears of abridgment or denial of a free press were "without substance," but cautioned the American press against arbitrary attempts to close the doors to free assemblage and free speech while maintaining its own freedom.

Those three parts of the bill of rights are "the greatest safeguards of our liberties," Ickes said.

Sees United States Safe.

"So long as they remain to us as political vitamins, we can withstand the shock troops of fascism or communism or even of special privilege parading in the verisimilitude of benevolence and democratic concern for the common man."

The Secretary of the Interior, upon his introduction to the members of the Associated Press, was recalled by Frank B. Noyes, president of the Associated Press and publisher of the Washington Star, as a "bright young man" of 30 years ago who was then handling the disposition of public money in Chicago.

"(He) is today disposing of fabulous funds and in my opinion doing his darndest to do his stupendous job efficiently and well," Mr. Noyes said.

Charter Members Praised.

The president of the Associated Press, outlining after his annual custom the principles of the Associated Press, paid tribute to 275 surviving charter members of the organization who aided in its creation 35 years ago.

"Thirty-five years ago under one standard and with one spirit of loyalty is something in these changing times," Mr. Noyes said.

"Not all the compensation of newspaper making is in financial success," he said. "We may only secretly confess this. Yet without that being true, advancing years could not so happily record the success that comes to us.

"If each of you can read between the lines what I can not express you well understand why each of the charter members of the organization feels that for you of this and

The Solution

To the Radio Thriller, 'What Would You Do?'

The solution of the sixth thrilling "What Would You Do?" real life drama broadcast Monday at 5:30 p. m. from WJEJ, Hagerstown, Md., follows:

George decided this critical problem as he had decided all of his problems ever since he had met Sue and had made his avowal of love.

"You see, darling, it is because I love you more than all of the world that I come to you and tell you this."

Sue did not talk. She was thinking—thinking carefully.

"Claire is sailing on the Rex for Europe in a week, and I feel as if I owe it to her to give her answer before she sails. Won't you please tell me if my plans are in accord with yours?"

Sue arose from her chair and walked slowly to the large window which overlooked Central Park and from where she could see the piers with transoceanic liners at their docks.

"I think your plans are quite honorable, George. But tell me this — suppose — something—something should happen to you while you're away on this expedition! Oh, George, take me with you. I'd love it!"

Sue ran to George and threw her arms around him.

"From now on," she whispered, "I'm going to know the middle name and the ancestry of every little bug in your laboratory. Now run along and tell Claire—that—oh, well; you know what to tell her."

A week later a train sped West with a cargo of love. At the same hour a boat sailed eastward.

Nomination Approved

Harris & Ewing.

MARRINER S. ECCLES.

Senate Group Gives Up Fight Against Eccles

Glass, McAdoo Cast Only Votes Opposing New Reserve Head.

By a vote apparently of 6 to 2, the Senate Banking sub-committee which had held up the nomination of Marriner S. Eccles, of Utah, as governor of the Federal Reserve Board, reported it favorably yesterday to the full committee. This appears to mark the end of determined opposition to his confirmation.

According to sub-committee members, all eight members were represented with only two in opposition to the favorable report, one being Senator Glass of Virginia, the other, Senator McAdoo of California, who was not present but whose proxy was held by Glass. On this basis, the others, Senators Townsend, Cutting and Couzens, Republicans, and Byrnes, Bankhead and Bulkley, Democrats, were favorable. However, no official vote was taken and none was announced formally.

At the same time, it appeared, a move to order an investigation of what has been described by some Senators as a whispering campaign against Eccles was dropped. Senator Couzens, at yesterday's executive session of the sub-committee, pressed for a vote on reporting the nomination, and whatever disposition had previously existed to prolong consideration of the nomination further disappeared.

Stresses FDIC Aim.

The sub-committee thereupon continued hearing testimony of Leo T. Cowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, who stressed the FDIC's intention of preventing a return to the condition of 1920, when there were 30,000 State banks, whereas there are but 15,000 now. J. F. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, also testified, indorsing the plan to let assessments for the insurance fund accumulate until they reach $500,000,000, when they would be suspended until the fund was depleted by 25 per cent.

House banking committee members disclosed, according to the Associated Press, that they had written into the pending omnibus banking bill a provision forbidding the Comptroller or FIDC directors to have any banking connections

Long Assails Foes, Warns Of Secession

Threat of 'New Boston Tea Party' Answers Relief Action.

By Robert C. Albright.

Packed Senate galleries, daubed with Easter color, yesterday heard Huey Pierce Long counter the Administration's challenge of his Louisiana dynasty with something that sounded very much like a threat—secession!

Laying aside his cap and bells, worn while he lampooned the "royal prerogatives" of New Deal figures from President Roosevelt down, a deadly serious "Kingfish" warned of "another Boston tea party" and revived the ancient cry of State sovereignty.

He spoke to the Senators, not to the galleries. That's unusual for Huey. But he couldn't hold that serious pose. A few moments of it and he was court jester again, laughing, buffooning, spattering the New Deal with nicknames.

Calls Ickes "Chinch Bug."

Secretary of Interior Ickes, whose ears he had threatened to "pin back" for daring to threaten withdrawal of Louisiana's share in the Federal-aid jackpot, was labeled "Lord High Chamberlain Harold Ickes, the chinch bug of Chicago."

Other figures, he said, enjoying "a peculiar status in this third year of our reigning empire of St. Vitus" were:

"No. 1. The Prime Minister, James Aloysius Farley, the Nabob of New York. * * *

"No. 3. The expired and lamented royal block, Hugh Sitting Bull Johnson, who has now described himself as the new oo-la-la of Oklahoma.

Ickes Replies: "Despicable!"

"No. 4. The Honorable Lord Destroyer, Henry Almighty Wallace, the ignoramus of Iowa."

The scheduled personal reply to Secretary Ickes, as such, wasn't delivered. But shafts at the Public Works Administrator were sandwiched into a general broadside at the Administration. Ickes was "No. 2" on his list of New Deal characters.

The Interior Secretary, whose warning against Long control of Federal works funds in Louisiana provoked the attack, meanwhile, was not silent. Speaking in New York, he denounced the Long "share-the-wealth" plan as "despicable beyond my powers of description."

Huey's fanfare of criticism echoed down the Eastern seaboard to Atlanta, where Gov. Eugene Talmadge, reputed friend of Long and a New Deal antagonist, declared reelection of President Roosevelt would be "a national calamity." Talmadge, according to the Associated Press, adopted a new slogan, "Americans, Wake Up!"

Garner Cracks Down.

His speaking form cramped by a 30-minute debate limitation on the Bankhead farm tenant bill, Huey was up and down in the Senate a half-dozen times, availing himself of every amendment to edge in a few words.

Vice President John Nance Garner, in the chair, gave Huey free scope, but his gavel cracked sharply on each word over time. In the end he administered a spanking that brought a roar of merriment from colleagues, the galleries and Huey himself.

Long had made a point of order in a parliamentary set-to between Democratic Leader Robinson and Clipper on Way Home Carrying 12,000 Letters; Due at 2 P. M.

Honolulu, April 22.—Flying through a rainbow, the trail blazing clipper hopped from Pearl Harbor here today at 3:29 p. m. (8:59 p. m. Eastern standard time) on its return flight to California.

The, 19-ton flying boat got into the air with ease and Pan-American Airways officials announced its destination was Alameda.

It fle where last Wednesday from the California city in 17 hours and 45 minutes on an experimental flight to establish passenger and transport service to the Orient.

Water boiled from the hull and sunshine gleamed on the clipper's giant wing as the plane lifted from the choppy harbor wataers afte a 15-second run.

Climbing slowly, the plane banked over Luke Field, Army air base on Ford Island, then climbed gradually until it completed a full circle.

As th eclipper swept along the ocean front she flew directly through a long rainbow arching between the can fields adjacent to Pearl Harbor and the city.

A siren shrieked in the Aloha Tower on the waterfront as the Clipper passed over Honolulu. Residents rushed out to watch the start of the 2,400-mile flight to California.

Passing over Waikiki Beach, the plane then rounded Diamond Head and soon afterwards turned its nose toward its distant goal.

She didn't attempt to climb high as she passed Waikiki and wheeled to the northeast, but maintained a steady altitude of about 1,000 feet.

The plane, with Pilot R. O. D. Sullivan at the controls, ran 300 yards before taking off.

Ahead of the ship lay "reasonably good" weather for most of the trip, but airmen will encounter clouds through most of the journey.

They will have tailwinds off the California coast, but the weather bureau said it was unlikely there would be fog or storms.

Capt. Edwin C. Musick, veteran aviator in charge of the crew of five other fliers, was given his choice of two schedules which would bring the plane to its destination in between 17 and 18 hours.

Should he choose to fly above 16,000 feet, the plane is scheduled to arrive in Alameda at 11 a. m., Pacific standard time (2 p. m., Eastern standard time) tomorrow. The 18-hour schedule would be flown at about 7,000 feet.

Long before the Clipper's four motors began warming up, a crowd of some 15,000 persons stormed the Honolulu postoffice to place letters on the plane. More than 12,000 letters were finally loaded aboard.

The Clipper was guided by radio bearings from Pan American Airways stations at Hawaii and Alameda.

It was indicated that the Clipper may remain at Alameda for about a week and then repeat its flight to the islands.

51,391, Young and Old, At Annual Egg Rolling

Barbara Feldman, just 8 months old, climbed into an Easter basket at the egg-rolling yesterday on the White House lawn. And she certainly brightened the occasion.

The Roosevelts Greet Record Crowd on White House Lawn at Traditional Festival; 130 Kiddies Are 'Lost,' But All Ends Well.

By Frederic B. Tuttle.

Guided by parents, aunts and uncles, nursemaids and an extra detail of kindly policemen, tens of thousands of Washington children invaded the White House lawn yesterday for the traditional Easter Monday egg rolling.

When they left hours later, tired but happy, most of the multicolored hard-boiled eggs they had brought in their gay little baskets, had been chopped into a motley salad under foot.

Testifying to the good time the youngsters had were numerous chocolate bunnes, melting in the late afternoon sun; fluffy cotton chicks, forgotten in the day's excitement, and occasional Easter baskets, tilted on their sides amid mountains of cast-off picnic lunch paper.

The official attendance smashed all records for previous years, the White House reported last night, announcing 51,391 persons participated in the gala day.

Casualties were few. The White House Guard said 33 children were injured or taken sick, and 130 got lost. But, all in all, none of this was serious, and the lost were found in fairly quick time, while nobody was hurt badly.

It was the Day of Egg, although it might just as well have been a children's circus in Humpty-Dumpty Land,, a circus of numberless rings and ringmasters.

In the crowds mingled persons of all ages, tiny tots tugging at their parents' hands, and older children walking aloof, as though they needed no guidance.

Parents Join Children.

Here and there old ladies and gentlemen watched their grandchildren tenderly and tried to avoid the jostling crowds. A mother addressed her children in Italian and another reprimanded a blond urchin in a blue sailor suit in German.

Mrs. Roosevelt made three appearances among the egg-rollers, and on her last visit, late in the afternoon, was almost mobbed in her own back yard by the eager children.

Six husky policemen were required to make way for the First Lady, who waved good-naturedly at the youngsters crushing about her when ste stepped off the White House south portico to join the fun on the lawn.

She was garbed in a pretty spring dress—a printed red, with a red belt and a red collar. She first visited the children about 11 a. m., accompanied by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Paul Roosevelt, of Detroit, and the latter's daughters, Amy, 6, and Diana, 8.

"I am glad to see you all," Mrs. Roosevelt told the children, as she smiled and waved. "I hope you all have a good time."

Little Egg Rolling.

The President appeared on the portico to beam at the crowds at 2:30 p. m. He leaned on the arm of an aid, and with Mrs. Roosevelt, stood for several minutes smiling and waving at the thousands of youngsters, who waved back When he left he promised to see them next year.

There was little actual egg rolling, which, in theory, consists of rolling an egg downhill in an attempt to hit an opponent's egg, perched on the grass at the bottom.

For the most part, the youngsters tossed their eggs high in the air, ate them when they became hungry and listened to the music, which was furnished by Loew's Theater Cadet Band and bands from the National Training School for Boys and Gordon Junior High School.

Late in the afternoon, when the egg rolling was at its height, Louis McHenry Howe, secretary to Pres-

Ship Speeding Quake Relief; Dead at 3,065

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Taihoku, Formosa, April 23 (Tuesday).—A Japanese destroyer laden with doctors and supplies was speeding from Mako naval base to quake-stricken Formosa areas, where 250,000 homeless survivors of Sunday's disaster were plagued with parching thirst through destruction of water sources.

The latest official figures increased the death total to 3,065, with 7,889 seriously injured and 1,490 slightly injured, as casualties among the injured and belated reports from inaccessible districts swelled the total.

The scarcity of water assumed grave proportions. Virtually all pipelines and water reservoirs had been wrecked by the shocks which laid waste to 2,000 square miles of this beautiful island off the coast of China early Sunday.

Insanity Spreads.

Insanity among bereaved parents and children and injured sufferers was to be noticed by relief workers with more and more frequency. A scorching tropical sun beat down pitilessly all day yesterday on the misery-torn survivors, inflicting new suffering. Thousands stumbled with parched and swollen tongues among the ruins of their cities, seeking water.

The Japanese government sent 50 relief parties with doctors, water and food to the stricken districts in the northwestern section of the islands, where the quake damage was worst.

Carrier pigeons brought the news that relief was on the way, bolstering survivors with new hope. Military carrier pigeons were the only means of quick communication available. The Japanese army battalion stationed at Taichu co-operated in the relief work.

Aid Proffered.

[Offers of relief from many foreign sources poured in on Japanese and Formosan officials. Admiral B. F. Upham, commander-in-chief of the United States Asiatic Fleet, offered to send an American warship from Shanghai, but the Japanese declined with thanks, saying the situation was in hand. The American Red Cross at Washington, through Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, retired, cabled sympathy and offers of assistance to Prince Tokugawa, president of the Japanese Red Cross. British naval officials in Hong Kong extended the offer of British warships if needed.]

An airplane survey disclosed that 2,000 square miles of the island were affected by the quake, the epicenter of which was so close to the surface of the earth (about 6 miles) that the shocks were more terrible than any in the memory of the oldest inhabitants.

Taihoku, the capital, and Tainan,

Paris Scorns Hitler Offer To Negotiate

Fears Attempt to Break United Front of Ex-Allies.

New Blast From Reich Due; French Press Attacks Soviet.

The Situation Abroad.

France was reported refusing to negotiate directly with Hitler in the belief the Reich was trying to destroy the united tri-power front established at Stresa. Meanwhile, the French press launched a savage attack against Soviet propaganda.

In Berlin a new blast from Hitler at the powers which condemned Germany's rearming was promised.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 22.—France was refusing all offers today to negotiate directly with Reichsfuehrer Hitler in the belief that the Reich was campaigning to break the united front established by France, Britain and Italy at the Stresa conference and the council session at Geneva.

High authorities said the government was ignoring an obvious campaign to bring about separate German conversations with the representatives of the three nations.

The Nationalist press, which has [illegible] off publication of anti-Soviet articles while the signing of the bilateral pact seemed imminent, suddenly launched a savage attack against Russian propaganda institutions.

There have been frequent intimations that France's insistence upon cessation of Russian propaganda was one strong reason for the breakdown of negotiations and the return of Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff to Moscow on the eve of the scheduled initialing of the pact in Paris.

In an editorial entitled "Flowers On a Rubbish Pile" (referring to Soviet propaganda), the newspaper Matin said that inasmuch as "even the Bolshevik press" denied stories which were circulated in their propaganda machine in France, "that gives an idea of the value of the engagements to which these people subscribe."

The Journal des Debats, in an editorial on what it called widespread child criminality in Russia, said the problem was "the most characteristic feature of the Soviet regime and its love of humanity that one hears about in Moscow."

The Nationalist press also strongly criticized the recent visit to Berlin of Georges Scapini, the blind deputy, who conferred with German war veterans in an effort to bring the two countries together.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 22.—A new blast from Adolf Hitler at the powers which condemned Germany for rearming was promised soon by a foreign office spokesman today as the Reichsfuehrer deliberated over it at his mountain home at Haus-wachenfeld, near Berchtesgaben.

There was a growing impression here that further action following Saturday's brief note to member nations of the league can not be delayed much longer, although there was no prediction as to precisely when or how it would be taken. It was assumed there would be a detailed rebuttal of the Geneva condemnation in any case.

The belief that Hitler will act soon to emphasize his curt protest was voiced by a spokesman of the foreign office, who said:

"Our brief, emphatic protest had to be made quickly to show the world that we will not stand for Geneva's methods. But that is not enough. We must also seize upon this opportunity to pick the Geneva resolution to pieces in detail, and while so doing also restate our position.

"This requires detailed study, but our fuehrer is not the type to let the grass grow under his feet. You may therefore expect an additional reply soon."

Political Nazidom reflected a demand for more and more arms to forestall a "hazardous attack" against Germany, and indorsed vociferously Der Fuehrer's stand against the powers.

Receives Art Award

Thousands See Independents' Art at Stores

Headed by Mrs. Roosevelt, Crowds See Exhibits in Downtown Area.

Initiating a unique civic experiment which is virtually certain of becoming an annual event, if the volume of enthusiasm and response shown on the first day is a criterion, nine downtown stores yesterday opened the Greater Washington Independent Art Exhibit.

Thousands of persons participated in the premiere, among them Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who took time off from the Easter egg-rolling on the White House lawn to tour the galleries at Jelleff's, W. B. Moses & Sons, Woodward & Lothrop and Lansburgh & Bro.

Later Mrs. Roosevelt will visit the exhibits at Palais Royal, Julius Garfinckel & Co., Kann's, the Hecht Co. and W. & J. Sloane. She was accompanied yesterday by Miss Mabel T. Boardman, who is chairman of the patrons' committee; Mrs. Samuel A. Swiggett, art chairman of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of directors of the independent exhibition.

One Exhibit Opened Early.

At one store the demand to see the pictures and sculpture was so great that officials were compelled to open the exhibit at 2 p. m., one hour ahead of schedule.

In another store a black and white drawing was sold 30 minutes before the display was opened, the purchaser having slipped in prematurely and asked that the picture be reserved for him.

Many sales were reported by the various stores on the first day of the exhibition, which will be continued for a month. Among the pictures sold was Prentiss Taylor's "Experience Meeting," which won first prize in the black-and-white division. Its purchaser is Eben F. Comins, another Washington artist, who is himself an exhibitor, his

Shift to Red of Massive Stars Proves Einstein Was Correct

Prof. Albert Einstein has handicapped the stars.

When the Lord Mayor of Dublin was in Washington recently he astoundingly picked the order of the finish in the Grand National Steeplechase in England.

Yesterday, at the meeting of the National Academy of Sciences, a prediction made by Prof. Einstein years ago when he first expounded the theory of relativity, was reported proved.

As the lord mayor picked the horses, one, two, three, in the jumping race, so did the famous scientist make three predictions in support of his relativity theory. These were:

First, that rays of starlight would be bent toward the sun when passing near it during an eclipse.

Second, that the movements of the planet Mercury, which do not obey gravitational laws, would be explained by it.

Third, that the spectrum of massive luminous stars would be shifted toward the red directory proportional to their mass and inversely proportional to their velocity.

His first two forecasts have been proved, and yesterday Dr. Robert J. Trumpler, of the Lick Observatory, told the academy members that he has apparently verified the third.

Dr. Trumpler said that with certain very heavy and bright stars he has been able to determine a "red shift" which fits in with the relativity equations.

If one is a pronounced blond or redhead, try some other career than science. This might have been construed from the paper of Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, famous National Museum anthropologist, who gave the academy a pat on the back.

The pat was this: Membership in the academy represents both a physically and mentally select group. This was the conclusion of Carnell and Davis Bound Over to Jury by Rockville Judge.

Man Tells Judge 'I Was Rum-Dumb'

Women Fill Courtroom, Defendant and Beall Exchange Smiles.

By Edward T. Folliard.

The ugly cloud of suspicion hanging over the blonde head of Anne Lyddane, 29-year-old bank secretary, was partly dissipated yesterday in the Rockville Police Court.

Judge Donald A. De Lashmutt refused to hold her for the grand jury on a charge of conspiring to murder Mrs. Josephine Beall, of Darnestown, Md., who in 1933 named her as corespondent in a divorce suit.

The effect of the judge's decision was to void the warrant charging Mrs. Lyddane with this alleged conspiracy. However, she remains charged with plotting the death of her husband, Francis "Slom" Lyddane, Judge De Lashmutt having held her for the grand jury on this charge Saturday.

If the grand jury feels that she plotted the death of Mrs. Beall it will be free to so indict her, notwithstanding Judge De Lashmutt's action yesterday.

Accusers Bound Over.

"I am convinced from the evidence today," the judge said, "that there were not two conspiracies. If there was a conspiracy there was only one. Therefore, so far as Mrs. Lyddane is concerned, since she already has been held, I am not going to hold her again.

"I hold the other two defendants for action of the grand jury, with the same bond as fixed on Saturday."

These were John "Googy" Carnell and Edwin J. Davis, both former convicts, who from the witness stand earlier in the day had testified about the alleged murder plot.

"Googy," a dark complexioned individual with protruding black eyes, quoted Mrs. Lyddane as saying she wanted her husband and Mrs. Beall "put out of the way" quickly.

Two Men Called "Rats."

Davis, a tall, sad-looking former bootlegger, testified that Carnell introduced him to Mrs. Lyddane in November and that thereafter she drove him to Darnestown and pointed out a woman she wanted "taken care of." He said she gave him $26 and promised him $1,000 upon "completion of the job."

State Senator Stedman Prescott, chief counsel for Mrs. Lyddane, made a furious oratorical assault on the character and the testimony of the two men, referring to them as "underworld rats."

"Why," he shouted, "I wouldn't convict a yellow dog on such testimony. And you may be sure that no jury of 12 men in Montgomery County ever will convict on such testimony."

Judge's Belief "Immaterial."

Judge De Lashmutt said what he believed as to the guilt or innocence of the defendants in the case was immaterial in a preliminary haring. Then he added this cryptic statement:

"But I could make up my mind in three minutes."

After the judge declined to hold Mrs. Lyddane in the Beall conspiracy, lawyers pointed out that there was nothing to prevent the grand jury from indicting her on this charge if it should so choose.

Defense lawyers also pointed out that there was nothing to prevent the grand jury from indicting Carnell, Davis and John Martin Boland, who was held Saturday, on a charge of attempting to blackmail Mrs. Lyddane, because of her continued friendship for Arthur Beall.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh late yesterday sent for a list of the grand jurors and the supposition was that he would call them to-

New Deal Way To Prosperity Flayed by Byrd

Democratic Senator Asks 'Sound Principles,' Hits AAA and Spending.

Assailing government "by office holders, exercising more power under a straw hat than did the king of old with jeweled crown," Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, in a radio address last night called for return to "sound principles of government."

He demanded defeat of the AAA amendments, through which Secretary of Agriculture Wallace seeks to expand the Administration's farm licensing powers.

"Sweeping powers to license the farmers and all who handle food are impractical," he said. "Chaos and confusion to the farming industry will inevitably result."

Carrying his fight on New Deal spending to the Senate floor, Senator Byrd earlier had failed by a 37-to-44 vote to send the $1,050,000,000 Bankhead farm tenant aid bill back to committee.

Plan Expected to Pass.

The Bankhead plan to loan 3,000,000 farm tenants, share-croppers and laborers money to buy their own farm plots appeared headed for passage today or tomorrow, despite charges by Byrd that it involves an ultimate $15,000,000,000 spending.

Meantime, Chester C. Davis, farm administrator, defended the AAA amendments, forecast their enactment and struck at the American Liberty League for its assault on extension of AAA farm license powers.

"The Liberty League wants to convert the Agricultural Adjustment Administration into a processors' administration," Davis said. "The Liberty League is responsible not to the vast numbers of the farmers and the consumers, but to a small group of wealthy men. The league speaks primarily for property rights, not human rights."

Presses for Balanced Budget.

Senator Byrd's radio address opened his second Senate drive against the AAA amendments. Last session he was largely instrumental in blocking their enactment. A fortnight ago the Senate Agriculture Committee voted them out again. The report still is in the hands of the committee chairman, Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina.

But Senator Byrd did not confine himself to the AAA amendments. He asked the sidetracking of all temporary and emergency legislation.

"The way to permanent prosperity is the difficult path of economy and efficiency in Government, and the balancing of budgets of States and the Nation," he said.

"The people must be encouraged to go the way of independence, industry, economy and self-reliance. Business is ready to resume its forward march if the Congress would give assurance of sound legislation."

"Sympathizes" With Wallace.

Byrd voiced "sympathy" with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, and anxiety "to cooperate with him in all sound measures to improve the condition of agriculture." Like Wallace, but by different means, he said he would like to bolster export trade.

But he accused AAA officials of a lack of frankness in terming the AAA amendments merely "clarifying," when the legislation proposed gives to the Secretary of Agriculture dictatorial powers to license, upon such terms as he may determine, not only virtually every farmer, but every handler and distributor of foods as well."

He said this was "illustrative of the evil of creating a great bureaucracy that uses some power as a lever to get more power."

"Only the person who eats the food will escape this Federal dictatorship," said Senator Byrd. "Perhaps later the power of license will be extended to regulate what we shall eat and how much, and save us the trouble of attending to that detail of our daily existence."

Undersecretary of Agriculture Rexford Guy Tugwell, against whom Byrd led a confirmation fight last session, came in for attention. The Virginian charged the Tugwellian philosophy of "planned economy" is directed toward "first, Government regulation of all business, and then, Governmental operation of all business."

"Crime" to Aid Consumer.

Referring in passing to NRA, Byrd said it made it "a crime to give the consumer the benefit of a reduced price."

Instead of profiting by "trial and error" and the "failure of NRA," he said, "we are now asked to NRA the farmers of America.

"Taxes inevitably grow in burden and amount as the Government extends its activities and increases its control of private business," the Virginian said.

"The cost of these enormous bureaucratic machines will become too great to be borne. They are rapidly becoming Frankensteins, the contrivances of ingenious and idealistic political theorists that may grow so powerful as to destroy the very right of the individual to liberty and the pursuit of happiness. • • •

"The Federal Government has entered the door of every industry, has spied upon the operations of even the small fabricator; has declared that not one additional spindle may be added to a machine without its approval and it is now proposed to license the farmers of America and the distribution of all food."

Senator Byrd jumped into the fight on the Bankhead farm-tenant bill last week, charging it was merely an extension of Government farm experimentation, with a potential cost out of all proportions to its merit.

Moved to Recommit.

Yesterday he moved to recommit it to the Banking and Currency Committee. At the suggestion of Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, he revised his motion to send the bill back to the Agriculture Committee.

It was defeated by a seven-vote margin, after Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, author of the measure, said the motion would "kill the bill." Twenty-one Democrats and 16 Republicans voted for the motion.

Later the Senate defeated by a 47-to-32 vote an amendment by Senator Henry F. Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, to remove the tax exemption from $1,000,000,000 in bonds the new Farm Corporation would be authorized to issue. An amendment by Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, to remove the heart of the bill by striking out the bond issuing authority, was still pending when the Senate recessed.

Between You and Me

G. O. P. May Use Living Cost As Campaign Issue; The Demon Investigators.

By Raymond Clapper

WHILE the Administration looks expectantly toward the farm belt for approval of its efforts to raise commodity prices, it faces the possibility of having to meet a high cost of living issue from the Republicans.

Already the Administration has begun to anticipate that by stressing the small share of the city consumer's food dollar that goes into the farmer's pocket. The play is to blame the high cost of living on the middleman. Secretary Wallace and other officials are quoting figures.

On this point in their speeches Chester Davis, of AAA, said in a speech yesterday that out of every $3 spent by consumers for food, more than $2 goes to the processors and distributors and less than $1 reaches the farmer.

However, the makings of a political issue in food prices are appearing. Within the last few weeks gasoline prices have gone up. Butter stocks have reached record lows causing further price increases. Restaurants throughout the country are boosting prices. Housewives are beginning to resist and in Los Angeles several thousand joined in picketing of shops forcing the police to intervene to quiet disorders. Prices, especially on meats, are due to go higher for some time.

The Democratic Party had a similar situation on its hands during the 1920 election. Prices had continued high after the war and the criticism was so strong that the Wilson Adminisration took action to combat high prices and profiteering. The Republican platform that year asserted that the high cost of living was due primarily to depreciation in the purchasing power of the dollar because of currency and credit expansion and that reduced production, and burdensome taxation were among the contributing causes.

But the situation was not quite the same as it is now. Retail prices in 1920 were double those of 1913, reaching an all-time high. The retail food price index for March, using 1913 as 100, stood at 121.7. Taking 1923 as a normal year, food prices are now at an index figure of about 83. So that while prices seem high in proportion to what they were two years ago, they still are below normal. Administration officials say that critics of present prices merely want to go back to 1932, to 5-cent cotton, 32-cent wheat, 3-cent pork and to panic and widespread mortgage foreclosures.

So long as the price level remains below normal, the high cost of living will not be very firmly rooted, however attractive it may appear superficially as a political issue.

• • • •

AAA was the innocent bystander in a family argument over food prices the other day. A letter came in from an indignant husband declaring that prices were too high and AAA ought to stop its nonsense. The next day his wife wrote in saying that prices were not too high and that the farmers had to live. At the same time the husband sent a telegram retracting what he said in his letter.

The Government land purchase program has been slowed down because of difficulty over titles. Uncle Sam can not resort to the protection of title guarantee insurance as does the private purchaser. He must clear the title himself.

In attempting to buy land in some localities, especially in the old South where a parcel may have been held in one family for several generations, the Government has found it physically impossible to determine the exact property lines. Certain older parts of the country still follow the old "metes and bounds" rather than the exact surveys used in newer States where the land has been laid out in checkerboard sections. Titles describing property by metes and bounds will describe lines running from a given rock to a certain willow tree, thence to a creek, and on to other landmarks which may have been entirely obliterated by time, and the elements.

In sections where property passed down in the same families from one generation to another, such rough boundary definitions were accepted by common consent. But they won't go with Comptroller General McCarl when the Government wants to make a purchase. Last month FERA was empowered by executive order to purchase land by condemnation in order to short cut some of these title difficulties.

Republican National Chairman Fletcher urges return to a stable currency. If he means a return to a permanent gold standard, his plea falls on deaf ears so far as the Administration is concerned.

So far as can be judged, there is no likelihood in the visible future of any change in the gold value of the dollar by executive order. However, the Administration apparently is convinced that it should not foreclose the door to future action if conditions should make it seem advisable.

Belief here is that Great Britain has no intention of returning to a fixed gold standard, apparently preferring to continue indefinitely on a managed currency basis.

With the pound still footloose, the United States is not likely to return to a permanent fixed gold standard.

Except for members of the Supreme Court there is no retirement pay for higher Government officials who have served long careers. So recently, when an elderly member of one of the Government commissions retired, he was appointed a lawyer in the commission's bureau of law at a salary on which he can live comfortably.

The last Congress ranked close to the top in the number of investigations held. There were 31. In the Sixty-seventh Congress, when the Harding Administration came in just after the war, there were 32 investigations. The same was true of the Seventieth Congress, covering the last two years of the Coolidge Administration. Senators are the demon investigators. Since 1921 they have conducted 125 investigations, as against 50 in the House. Subjects, as listed in a recent survey, cover everything from abolition of useless offices to investigation of certain statements by Dr. William A. Wirt.

Huey Long is plenty mad about the "March of Time" newsreel which shows, with the aid of a double, the Sands Point washroom episode and other chapters in the life of the Kingfish.

His secretary, Earle J. Christenberry, says he warned the producers that they would show the picture at their own risk. When the newsreel was shown in New Orleans, the Long episode was not included, although the producers say it was in the reel when shipped.

Long's office force cooperated in permitting movie photographs to be taken of the senatorial offices here and some of the Kingfish's friends felt very much aggrieved when they went to see the picture and found that most of it represented the Kingfish in what seemed to them an uncomplimentary light.

• • • •

"Mr. President," he shouted, "point of order. I know nothing about the Senate rules——"

Vice President Garner, in the chair, interrupted.

"The Senator from Louisiana," he said, "makes the point of order that he knows nothing about the Senate rules. The chair sustains the point of order."

Even Long laughed.

Move to Write New NRA Bill Gains Support

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

A strong movement to rewrite completely the Administration's NRA extension bill, limiting it strictly to interstate business, was disclosed yesterday from within the House Ways and Means Committee.

The objects of the revision, it was stated privately by leading members of the committee, would be to minimize the Blue Eagle's effect on the little man and to answer assertions that the law was creating monopolies.

The committee has not yet officially taken up the bill. It was reported, however, that in private preliminary discussions, some of its most influential Democratic members had expressed their desire to strike from the measure language which might be interpreted as giving the NRA strong power over intra-State business.

To Meet This Week.

Representative Sam Hill (Democrat), of Washington, acting Ways and Means Committee chairman in the temporary absence of Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, said the committee probably would meet late this week to determine when it would begin consideration.

He declined, however, to predict what changes might be made in the bill as it was presented to Congress by Administration officials.

Other members predicted that when the measure finally did emerge it would:

1. Permit the use of codes only by businesses engaged in interstate commerce.

2. Perhaps specifically exempt the so-called "service trades," such as beauty and barber shops and cleaning and dyeing establishments. Fair trade practice provisions of some of the service codes already have been suspended by executive order.

3. Provide a method of code creation under which one manufacturer, because he controlled 50 per cent of the industry, could not be accused of dictating and the NRA consequently accused of fostering monopolies.

Permit Minimum Prices.

4. Permit the establishment of "minimum" prices, so defining "minimum" that the code operation could not be interpreted as "price fixing."

5. Possibly fix a "maximum" number of hours of work a week to forestall the expected congressional drive for the Black 30-hour bill.

Checks showed both the House Ways and Means and the Senate Finance Committee overwhelmingly for extension of the NRA.

The House committee has held no hearings on the bill; the Senate committee has completed its hearings and plans to take the measure up in executive session this week.

TownsSeekingTVA Power Must Wait

Inquiries Made by Eight Virginia Communities.

By the Associated Press.

Virginia communities which might wish to be cut in on TVA power lines must await completion of the Norris Dam development and conclusion of the litigation attacking TVA's legality.

Officials of the TVA made this announcement emphatic yesterday as they disclosed that eight Virginia communities had made inquiries regarding electric development. All of the inquiries were received by the authority prior to June 15.

The communities are Appalachia, Dungannon, East Bradford, Galax, Crewe, Danville, Abingdon and Marion. In the cases of the first four the authority had official correspondence with governments of those localities. In the cases of the last four correspondence was had with individuals but not with local governments.

Treasury's Offering Far Oversubscribed

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday announced that the weekly offering of $50,000,000 of nine-month Treasury bills had been sold at an average price of 99.872, which on a bank discount basis means an annual interest rate of 0.169 per cent. Subscriptions totaled $115,050,000.

Thus the Treasury is finding a plentiful supply of short-term loans at an interest rate of approximately one-sixth of 1 per cent. Mr. Morgenthau also pointed out that a slight rise yesterday in the price of the 3½ per cent First Liberties, called for June 15, indicated that the conversion plan announced over the week-end for those bonds had been well received in financial centers.

New Deal Flies SOS Signals, Declares Fish

New Yorker Raps Policies as Lewis Sees Ousting of Fletcher.

The New Dealers are "flying distress signals on the Ship of State and sending out S. O. S. messages and pleas to cease opposition." Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, told a radio audience last night. He said they are "as far away from the principles of Thomas Jefferson as it is possible to get."

"It is beginning to become more and more apparent that the American public have been elected to the role of Alice in Wonderland, or more properly speaking, Blunderland," he said.

The New Dealers, he said, "vainly endeavor to make unsound and unworkable plans work, merely to salvage their pride."

The works bill, he said, "has left Congress with scarcely any more legislative powers than Ghandi has clothing."

Speaking of the future of the Republican Party, he said:

"The Republican Party must have definite, clear cut policies and become a fighting, militant organization and purge itself of all who do not believe in our American system."

Meanwhile, Senator James Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, predicted that Henry P. Fletcher would be ousted as Republican national chairman.

An assertion by Fletcher Sunday that "the planned economy of the Wallaces, Warrens and Tugwells is merely a New Deal version of the Marxian philosophy," was described by Lewis as an attempt to "arrest attention and save himself and his associates from being thrown out of control."

Lewis said Western Republicans, for the most part, want to "praise the Administration for what they have approved in its relief and recovery program, and change only what they feel they can improve."

C. A. Arthur, Jr., Bride to Leave On Honeymoon

Grandson of Ex-President Weds Divorced Wife of John Strachey.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—Chester A. Arthur, jr., grandson of former President Arthur, tonight said he and Mrs. Arthur, the former Esther M. Strachey, divorced wife of John Strachey, would leave in a day or two on a honeymoon trip across the country.

They were married Saturday night at Harrison, N. Y., by Justice of the Peace Leo Mintzer, but only a few of their close friends knew until today.

Mrs. Arthur was divorced from Strachey, the English lecturer and writer, in London in 1933. Arthur was divorced from Charlotte Wilson in Los Angeles in 1923.

The marriage records give the bride's age as 37 and Arthur's as 34.

"We will leave in a day or two," he said, "on a motor trip to California. On the way we expect to stop at Colorado Springs, Colo., to visit my father and we will visit my mother at Santa Barbara when we reach California.

"We will take our time, stopping at several places to give lectures in behalf of the Utopian Society. My wife is a director of the society."

Mrs. Strachey confirmed reports of the engagement during the latter part of February.

Arthur formerly was editor of The Dune Forum, a magazine published in California. Before that he wrote and lectured on the Irish question. He became interested in this while a student at Columbia University and left school to go to Ireland. For several years he traveled in Europe and America giving lectures.

Argentina Now Threatens U. S. Cotton Grower

London Hears of Move to Develop New Center of Raw Industry.

By the United Press.

New York, April 22.—The United States cotton industry, already beset by increased competition in the world raw market by Brazil and in finished goods by Japan, faces a new threat in the Argentine, advices from the South American nation and Europe revealed today.

One of the largest London stock exchange firms, which follows developments in the United States closely and which was one of the first organizations to direct attention to possibilities of Brazilian cotton and the fact that it might result in the United States Government effecting a subsidy plan, said:

"With no idea of adding to the troubles which President Roosevelt has already brought on himself, we must record the fact that a movement is being started in the Argentine to make that country one of the greatest cotton-producing countries of the world."

Loans U. S. Disadvantage.

Growth of cotton, especially in South American countries where the "white gold" is indigenous, has been stimulated in the last few years by the fact that the Administration's 12-cent loan on the staple has placed American products in the world market at substantial premiums over foreign competitive staples.

But another fact, almost as important, has also been disclosed by recent developments. Just about one month ago cotton futures in the United States broke almost $9 a bale before a recovery set in and prices finished some $8 a bale below previous levels. The decline placed American cotton at a near parity level with competitive foreign-grown staples.

Rise Fails to Materialize.

Most cotton men expected exports to rise. However, this did not occur and while some improvement was recorded, shipments abroad have fallen far below most pessimistic forecasts at beginning of this season. The difficulty of obtaining American dollar exchange abroad is the primary reason for this fact. South American currencies are at great discounts in relation to the dollar and therefore are attractive to foreign purchasers of cotton.

Cotton men here said the present policy of the Administration with regard to processing taxes, the AAA loan program and refusal of this Nation to enter into barter agreements with foreign countries lacking the necessary dollar exchange, is nurturing competition from other countries.

Japanese Dominate North China Cotton

By the Associated Press.

Tientsin, China, April 22.—Japanese commercial expansion in North China reached today the point of almost complete domination of the cotton industry, most important enterprise in the area, with only one mill remaining wholly under Chinese ownership.

Threats of actual military penetration of this region, formerly the seat of the Chinese dynasty, have long since died down, but observers point out that Japanese conquest of the vast territory north of the Yellow River continues with Japanese capitalists, diplomats and businessmen taking up where the soldiers left off.

It is frankly stated in some foreign quarters that North China more and more is taking on the aspect of the northeastern provinces (Manchuria) as they were just before the Japanese military campaign that preceded establishment of the Japanese-advised Manchuokuoan empire.

A huge tract of land on outskirts of the Japanese concession of Tientsin recently changed hands and, although the transaction was not made public in detail, the real owners are believed to be Japanese. It has been widely reported that the area is to be used as a site for new Japanese cotton mills.

Preparations are in progress for reopening the Exchange Bank of China here. This is expected to become the financial headquarters of Japanese economic expansion in North China.

Purging of the municipal governments of Tientsin and Peiping (the former capital of China 80 miles north of Tientsin) to eliminate anti-Japanese officials is nearly completed and the last obstacle to virtual Japanese control was expected to be removed with the transference of headquarters for the province to less central Paoting.

Pope Pius Greets Reich Boy Scouts

Extends His Blessing to All in Germany.

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, April 22.—Even the non-Catholic and anti-Catholic sectors of modern Germany received the Apostolic benediction of Pope Pius today when the Pontiff welcomed 2,000 German Boy Scouts, members of the Catholic youth movement.

The Pontiff extended his ring to be kissed by each of the youths and then assured them they represented to him the greatest assurance that Germany "so dear to our hearts" will find its proper place in the comity of nations.

In blessing the group of young men the Pope extended his benediction not only to those present but also to all the organization and its directors in Germany; also "to all those who are with us because they will always be with us; to all those who are against us because even those will come to us."

The Pope was particularly pleased with an automobile presented him by the young Germans. After regarding it from a balcony of the Vatican, he extended to it his apostolic benediction.

Mrs. Lyddane Freed on Beall Case Charges; Two Accusers Held to County Grand Jury

'Rats!' Prescott Charges as Pair Tell Court Detailed Story.

gether in a special session to consider the Lyddane case.

Prescott has insisted from the outset that the three men, fearing they would be charged with blackmail, concocted the conspiracy charge so as to camouflage their own guilt.

Mrs. Lyddane came into the Rockville court yeterday attired in the same dark woolen suit she had worn Saturday. The women spectators in the packed courtroom craned their necks to get a glimpse of her.

With Mrs. Lyddane was her husband "Slom." Six rows in back of them was Arthur Beall, 185-pound garage owner, whose wife started to divorce him because of Mrs. Lyddane and then changed her mind.

Two Exchange Smiles.

After the hearing was over, Beall and Mrs. Lyddane passed each other outside of the courthouse. Both were smiling broadly.

"Googy" Carnell, who until his arrest was a bartender in the Lincolnway Inn at Rockville, was the first witness yesterday. Having been granted immunity by State's Attorney James H. Pugh, he agreed to waive a hearing and take the stand.

He said Mrs. Lyddane approached him at the inn last November.

"She said," he testified, "that she wanted Mrs. Beall put out of the way and she mentioned her husband at the same time."

Carnell told of taking Davis to Rockville and of introducing him to Mrs. Lyddane. He said Davis went away with Mrs. Lyddane and upon his return told him what had happened.

States He Was Rum-Dumb.

"What did Davis say?"

"He said, 'She took me out where this woman lives.' He laid out $26 on the bar. I took $13 of it."

Later, Carnell said, Mrs. Lyddane came to him and wanted to know if he had heard from Davis.

"She said, 'Do you think he's going to do that?' She said she wanted something done and done quick. Two weeks later she said she wanted somebody to attend to 'Slom' and that's when I got Thomas."

Harry Thomas, a former convict, testified Saturday that he had seen Mrs. Lyddane twice. He also admitted that he had signed a statement which was loaded with lies.

Prescott toop up the examination of Carnell.

"Have you ever heard of anybody bumping off a person for $13?" he asked.

"No, sir," said "Googy."

He asked "Googy" what he told the police when he was arrested April 1.

"I can't remember everything," the witness said, "I was about half rum-dumb at the time."

Admits Drinking.

"Weren't you drinking practically all of the time?"

"Why did you get somebody to kill Mrs. Beall and not Mr. Lyddane?"

"I did get somebody to kill Mr. Lyddane—I mean Boland."

"Didn't you testify Saturday that you didn't intend to get anybody to kill Mr. Lyddane?"

"Yes."

"You weren't rum-dumb then, were you?"

"No, sir."

Carnell said he couldn't remember anything that happened the second time the police questioned him. He explained that he drew an alcoholic blank.

"Were you still rum-dumb?"

Declares He Took $50.

"Didn't you once belong to the police department?"

"Yes, sir."

"You knew something about immunity then, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"You knew that you were in a tight spot, didn't you? And you decided to squeal."

"I don't know whether you'd call it that. I knew that the finger was on me—that I was being framed for blackmail."

"Well, it was true, wasn't it? Didn't she give you $200?"

"She gave it to me, but it was for Boland. I took $50 of it, but Boland knew about that."

When State's Attorney Pugh again took up the examination, Prescott complained that he was putting words in Carnell's mouth.

"Oh, there has been plenty of that here this afternoon," observed Judge DeLashmutt.

The spectators applauded, and the judge did not bother to admonish them.

Prescott obtained Carnell's confession from Pugh and began interrogating him about various statements therein.

"Didn't you say that all those fellows intended to do was shake her down?"

"It looked that way to me because there wasn't any action."

"You were just leading her on, weren't you?"

"No, she was leading me on."

"You never heard anything about any bank robbery, did you?"

"No, sir."

Prescott could find nothing in Carnell's confession about killing Mrs. Beall. Carnell, it developed, didn't tell the police about this until he had been granted immunity.

"Why didn't you mention Mrs. Beall in your statement?"

Prescott scoffed his disbelief.

Samuel Lipkin, a bald-headed taxicab driver from Washington, told of driving Davis to Rockville on two occasions. He testified that Davis told him recently that he "got $35 off that woman."

"What else did he say?"

"He said he got $35 shaking her down."

Detective Tells of Arrest.

Headquarters Detective Robert J. Barrett, of Washington, who initiated the investigation of the alleged double-murder plot, told of arresting Davis in a Pennsylvania avenue hotel.

Davis, he said, told him that Carnell had introduced him to a woman in Rockville named Lyddane and that woman drove him to Darnestown and pointed out another woman to him.

"Davis told me," Barrett continued, "that Mrs. Lyddane said to him: 'You don't look like a gunman; you look like a bum.' He said he told her he was a Philadelphia racketeer."

"Did he tell you he was shaking her down?"

"That was his idea."

County Policeman Joseph Nolte also told of interviewing Davis. He quoted the former bootlegger as saying that when the woman who drove him to Darnestown pointed out another woman in a house near a gasoline station, she said she wanted her "taken care of."

"He said," Nolte continued, "that he asked her why she wanted this woman taken care of and she said that she knew too much about the election."

Mrs. Lyddane smiled at this.

Nolte told how he and Police Chief J. W. Garrett drove Davis to Darnestown and how Davis identified the Beall home as the one Mrs. Lyddane had pointed out.

Chief Garrett corroborated Nolte's testimony, but added that they passed the Beall home twice before Davis identified it.

Davis took the stand after being reminded that he did not have to testify.

"Did you intend to kill Mrs. Beall?" he was asked.

"No, sir."

He said that after Mrs. Lyddane had pointed out the woman she wanted "taken care of," she asked him to come back the next day. But, he added, he decided to stay away.

Fails to Give Description.

"When did Mrs. Lyddane say she wanted this woman taken care of?" Prescott asked.

"Either on the way to Darnestown or on the way back."

"Now, as a matter of fact, isn't 'taken care of' an underworld expression that Mrs. Lyddane would never have heard of."

Davis wasn't so sure about this.

"What did this woman look like that was pointed out to you?"

"I don't know."

"Well, how could you have killed her?"

"It was just an empty gesture."

Unable to Describe Voice.

"Why didn't you come back and get the $1,000?" Prescott asked.

"Because killing isn't my business."

"Will you tell us what kind of clothes Mrs. Lyddane had on that day?"

"A black coat with a fur collar."

"What did she have on under that?"

The crowd laughed at this, and the judge demanded silence.

Asked what kind of voice Mrs. Lyddane had, Davis said he was unable to describe it. Nor could he tell what model automobile was used in the trip to Darnestown.

Peace Offered To Cotton Men By Roosevelt

McIntyre Named to Parley in Augusta as 'Envoy of Good-Will.'

By Leon Dure, Jr.

When Southern cotton manufacturers gather in Augusta, Ga., Thursday the White House will have present an "ambassador of good-will" in the person of Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre, it became known yesterday.

Mr. McIntyre will attend the meeting in an unofficial capacity, it was stressed, but significance was attached to his visit for two reasons. In the first place, the South has joined New England in a rebellion against the cotton processing tax, and, secondly, Georgia is the home ground of Gov. Eugene Talmadge, who is rivaling Huey P. Long in his attacks on the New Deal.

The fact that Secretary McIntyre should be spared by the White House for such a mission was seen as evidence of President Roosevelt's desire to heal the schism developing between the Administration and Democrats of the deep South. Observers fail to recall a similar instance in which Mr. Roosevelt has dispatched so close an assistant to act as a liaison officer with a business group.

Robert Also To Attend.

Another prominent New Dealist expected to attend the cotton manufacturers' convention is L. W. (Chip) Robert, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, an after-dinner speaker and story-teller of note. Both are Southerners, McIntyre hailing from Kentucky and Robert from Atlanta, and both have the added advantage of numbering many friends among the textile mill owners of the South.

Arrangements for the McIntyre trip were completed last week when Charles A. Cannon, president of the large Cannon mills at Kannapolis, N. C., called at the White House. He was accompanied by former Gov. O. Max Gardner, of North Carolina, who now practices law in Washington. The cotton manufacturers were anxious that Mr. Roosevelt send an observer to make a first-hand report on their troubles, and he acceded to their request.

This was the third instance in which the President has gone to unusual lengths to make his peace with the textile revolters. Already he has ordered an investigation of Japanese competition by the Federal Tariff Commission and only Friday he granted their desire for a full investigation of the cotton textile situation by a Cabinet committee.

Roper Named Chairman.

This committee held its first meeting yesterday in the office of Secretary of Commerce Daniel L. Roper, who was elected chairman. The other members are Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. Chester H. McCall, special assistant to Roper, was named secretary.

After organizing, the first move of the Cabinet group was to name a sub-committee to make a fact-finding survey which will form the basis for recommendations. The sub-committee consists of John Dickinson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, chairman; Isador Lubin, Commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics; Paul Porter, executive assistant to the AAA administrator, and Alvin H. Hansen, economic analyst of the State Department.

The Cabinet committee proposed that two regional conferences be held, one in New England and the other in the South, to which producers and manufacturers be invited. The committee further proposed that services of the Federal Trade Commission, Federal Tariff Commission, the textile planning committee of the NRA, the cotton and cotton goods committee of the Business Advisory and Planning Council and other agencies be utilized. The sub-committee was given the job of drawing up an agenda of subjects.

Have United in Drive.

Textile manufacturers of New England and the South have united in a drive against the cotton processing tax, which they claim throws cotton out of its normal price relationship with other commodities, and against growing imports of cotton cloth from Japan.

Faced with demands that the Administration step to the rescue of the industry by removing these two threats, Mr. Roosevelt directed his Cabinet committee to delve into all angles of the textile situation, including the degree of obsolescence of American plants. He is believed to feel that better methods and machinery may be the solution of the problem, and if this is found to be so new loans may be offered textile manufacturers to improve their plants.

The Augusta meeting will be the annual convention of the American Cotton Manufacturers Association, which speaks for the Southern industry just as the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers speaks for New England. A number of Eastern manufacturers are expected to attend the meeting, which was called by President William D. Anderson, of Macon, Ga.

Passenger Plane Loses Motor, Pilot Lands, Everybody Happy

Medal of Honor to Be Asked for Airman Who Brought Human Cargo Safely to Earth; Lost Engine Still Hunted by Searchers.

Drama in the air was enacted early yesterday when a Central Airlines transport plane, flying between Washington and Detroit with six passengers on board, lost a motor in the vicinity of Hancock, Md.

Airport attaches here were dozing lightly, their night's work done, when J. H. "Slim" Carmichael called them by radio and calmly announced that the tri-engined plane he had flown away from Washington airport 40 minutes earlier suddenly had become a twin-motored model.

He explained to his tense listeners that the left motor had torn loose and had fallen. The rest of the airplane seemed to be functioning perfectly, he reported. But, he added, for safety's sake he believed he would fly back to Washington. Would they please turn on all the lights handy, because he thought he might have some trouble landing? The falling motor had damaged the landing gear.

Immediately all other radio stations were silenced to await further word. But "Slim" was too busy keeping the unbalanced plane aloft to bother with further reports. He flew back to Washington, passed over Washington Airport, decided it did not look so good under the circumstances, and then elected to go on to Bolling Feld for his landing.

Carmichael's co-pilot, H. H. (Bat) Taylor, fastened the passengers' safety belts, reassured them, and went back to help Carmichael get the ship back on the ground with as little damage as possible.

According to veteran Army fliers, the landing "was a thing of beauty." Carmichael held the broken side of the landing gear high off the ground until the big ship lost most of its flying speed. Then as it settled slowly, the broken gear caught in the dirt, the ship spun half-way around, the doors opened and out walked the six passengers, praising "Slim."

After looking over the damaged ship, Carmichael, Taylor and three of the passengers went to Washington Airport, where another plane had been made ready, and took off for Detroit. They arrived at 7 a. m. yesterday.

The other three passengers, having already missed their connections to the West, spent the night here and continued on this morning in another plane.

Carmichael had the following passengers with him: J. H. McBride, of Cleveland; Kenneth Laird, of Tabor, Iowa; C. J. Strate, of Keokuk, Iowa; David Shelton, of Pittsburgh; Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Jennings, of Fredericksburg, Va. It was Mrs. Jenningss' first airplane ride. The first three—McBride, Laird and Strate—continued on to Detroit with Carmichael. One of the passengers remaining here stated that a recommendation would be sent to the Postoffice Department that Carmichael be given the highly coveted Air Mail Medal of Honor.

Meanwhile, somewhere near Hancock, Md., a party continues to search for the lost motor. They admit they do not know what they are going to do with it when and if they find it. They are just curious.

FERA Backer Of Night Clubs To Aid Key West

Efforts to Save Florida City Based on Luring Tourist Trade.

This is the second of a series of stories on Key West. Where the Federal Emergency Relief Administration is striking out on new and untried trails in an attempt to keep a town of 12,000 from being wiped off the map.

By Harry Ferguson

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Key West, Fla., April 22.—If all the United States were to find itself in the desperate situation that Key West was in eight months ago there would be 84,000,000 American citizens on relief rolls.

Four out of five inhabitants of this town were destitute and the ordinary formulas for relief work had to be scrapped. That explains why Uncle Sam struck out boldly and found himself in the surprising position of being a sort of partner in the night club business.

Key West is staking everything on attracting tourists; tourists like night clubs. New York has its "boon-doggling"—people on relief rolls who get paid for doing eurythmic dancing and for engaging in research on the history of safety pins. But nowhere else in the United States is the FERA encouraging wine, women and song.

Lend Club Murals.

Two night clubs—Raul's and the Habana-Madrid—are operating here. The FERA lent money to Raul Vasquez, sent murals out to decorate his walls and encouraged him to repaint the place. Juan Carbonell, owner of the Habana-Madrid, also began to spruce up under the encouragement of FERA. Last night 39 couples danced across his tiled floor, spent money for his rum drinks and applauded his orchestra. Night life is on the boom.

The FERA admits this is not an unmixed blessing. There are some persons who are spending their relief money on liquor when they should be buying bread. But nobody knows any other answer than to try to attract tourists. This is why hard-boiled business men and conservative citizens are not complaining when FERA does such unorthodox things as open up the Casa Marina Hotel, closed for two seasons, and tells the management it will pay all losses for the first year up to $16,000. The hotel claims it made money.

If you want to hear what the average man thinks of this situation in which an entire town is "boon-doggling," walk down to the corner of Fleming and Elizabeth streets, where the Pierce brothers run a hardware store. They have been in business here for 22 years.

"Ready to Quit."

"A year ago," said Emory Pierce, "we were ready to close up the shop. We even went up to Fort Lauderdale to look over the chances of moving our business there. Things were hopeless here and we couldn't see anything to do but give up our homes and go some place where we could make a living.

"My brother and I lost $600 apiece in this business in 1933. Nobody had any money. Then the FERA came in, sized up the situation and decided to try to keep the town on the map. We walked over and said we would string along and see if we could save our business. Well, the answer is that we paid income tax last year and people are beginning to come in and pay debts that are three years old."

Pierce is not a theorist or an idealist. He realizes, he says, that this experiment has not proved itself yet.

"There are other people who agree with me," he said. "I know a dozen folks who would build a house if they were sure of the future. We would put up a new store right now if we didn't fear that we might be left stranded. They do some funny things up there in Washington sometimes and nobody knows whether the Federal Government will decide some day to pick up and get out of here. If they do, it means the end of Key West."

Tourist Trade Decides.

Pierce thinks this autumn will tell the story. The American who makes a salary of from $4,000 to $8,000 a year, who puts his family in the car and gets away for a three-week trip each winter, holds the power of life and death over Key West. If he stays away Key West will die.

The FERA estimated it would cost about $8,000,000 to move Key West's population to other parts of the country, where there would be more opportunity to earn a living.

The relief program calls for the expenditure of $2,000,000 over five years. If the tourist experiment fails the Government will have to place this town's citizens on straight relief—the dole—and that is the thing FERA wants to avoid.

Officials think they already have built up morale to the point where people are willing to work rather than loaf in the sun and let the Federal Government support them. No one wants to make the admission that mankind has bungled the business of living to such an extent that people must be moved out of this country where nature is so warm and generous that Key West never has seen frost.

Tomorrow—Julius Stone, king of Coral Keys.

Steagall Tells Bankers Inflation Won't Come

Edgewater Park, Miss., April 22 (AP).—Representative Henry Steagall, of Alabama, chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, today told the Louisiana Bankers Association's annual convention here that "there will be no inflation."

He declared that the country is "on the upgrade and going strong," and predicted that President Franklin D. Roosevelt would be renominated and re-elected.

"What we need above all," Steagall said, "is the restoration of independent community banks in the United States. These banks have been the mudsill of our economic structure. They failed only when the country failed, but the chief evils and blunders in the banking world are traceable to the larger institutions and their management."

whatever or to make any such connections within two years after leaving office. Also the bill is being made more specific in directing that the Federal Reserve Board's policy shall be aimed at stabilizing production, trade, prices and employment.

Faces Floor Fights.

The measure is in for a battle on the floor of both House and Senate, Republican critics charging that the bill sets up a financial dictatorship under political controls. Progressives like Senator Borah, for example, also wish to avoid political controls by creating as independent a "monetary authority" in the Reserve Board as is possible.

Whether Senator Glass will succeed in splitting the bill into three parts is doubtful, since majority sentiment seems to be for vesting strong "nonbanker" controls in the board. Glass would enact Titles I and III of the bill dealing with extension of deposit insurance and amendments to the national banking laws, but would hold over Title II relating to the concentration in the Reserve Board of controls over open-market operations.

The Senate Banking Committee is expected to act promply now in favorably reporting the Eccles nomination to the Senate.

Mexico Is Feting Amelia Earhart

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Mexico City, April 22.—Amelia Earhart, famous American woman pilot, began attending today a series of official receptions and other functions in honor of her solo flight last week from Los Angeles to Mexico. She and her husband, George Palmer Putnam, publisher, attended a ceremony at the foreign office at which Emilio Portes Gil, foreign secretary, declared them the guests of the nation. A later reception was attended by President Lazaro Cardenas and other high officials.

Miss Earhart said today that Paul Mantz, her technical adviser, would arrive tomorrow from Los Angeles to make various adjustments of her airplane's propeller and motor, in preparation for the nonstop flight she plans to make from here, to either Los Angeles or New York. She became lost temporarily during her flight last Saturday and had to halt near Mexico City to ask her way.

"I am studying the possibility of flying nonstop to New York, in view of my failure to make a nonstop flight to Mexico City," Miss Earhart said today. She added:

"It will be difficult to leave this country, where all are so hospitable."

Rights of Press Not in Danger, Ickes Declares

Associated Press Editors Told Press Also Must Uphold Freedom.

future years the institution which we call the Associated Press is a heritage to be cherished."

"Restraints Worse Than Excesses."

Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, introduced in turn the charter members.

Stating that "freedom is not a matter of logic, but of feeling and being," Secretary Ickes said that legal restraints, however wisely applied, would be "far worse" than excess of free expression.

"Too much freedom," he said, "is better than even a little restraint imposed from the outside, because excesses, if indulged in, will in the end either cure themselves or kill themselves * * *"

"So conscious are the people of this country that the newspapers fill a useful purpose that no other medium can supply that they would not for a moment brook any attempt to infringe upon the freedom of the press."

Lashes at Demagogues.

Ickes mentioned no names, but voiced a sharp criticism of "share-the-wealth" plans and "the demagogue" preaching false doctrines.

"There is no limitation in the Constitution itself on the rights of free press, free speech and free assemblage," he said * * * "These rights were set up as sanctuaries for whomsoever might need their walls to shelter him. They are harbors of safety during a storm and, therefore, of greater value in proportion to the severity of the storm that may be raging * * *.

"Personally, I happen to be a man of strong convictions. Certain beliefs are obnoxious to me.

Calls "Share Wealth" Despicable.

"I despise the demagogue who hurls his voice through the pure air to advocate false doctrines, the acceptance of which by a majority of the people would destroy this America that I love.

"I have nothing but contempt for the man of crooked intellect who deliberately sets out to fool the underprivileged, who, during these last few years, have been having an especially tragic time of it, by holding out to them the hope that as a result of some fantastic 'share-the-wealth' scheme every man, woman and child is to have thrust into his hands the sum of $5,000, which is to come from God knows where.

"To inspire hopes that can never be realized in those who dwell in physical misery and mental despair is a base and loathsome thing. It is despicable beyond my powers of description."

Business Session Held.

Following the luncheon the Associated Press business session re-convened.

Four resolutions concerning administrative procedure as applied to the Associated Press wirephoto service were offered successively by a committee of 25, headed by John Francis Neylan, of San Francisco. Each was defeated.

A proposal to amend the bylaws of the Associated Press to provide for representation of member newspapers in cities of specified populations under 75,000 then was offered. After discussion, a resoluiton was submitted as a substitute referring the matter to the board of directors for study to the end tha it be given their earnest consideration. This resolution was adopted. All members having views of this subject were invited by President Noyes to confer with the board tomorrow.

Mayor William H. Malone, of Key West, paused for refreshments while working out some of hours he pledged. Mrs. Malone is behind him.

Painters Fall 80 Feet And Then Joke About It

New York, April 22 (AP).—Two painters today fell from a scaffold 80 feet high and then joked about it. Both were severely injured, however. They were Martin Bock, 39, and Peter Reimer, 35.

They fell when the scaffold canted to an angle of 45 degrees while they were painting eighth-story window sashes. The fall was broken by several screen-covered projections which they struck simultaneously as they tumbled through the air.

Talmadge Sees '36 Reelection U. S. 'Calamity'

Georgia Governor Adopts Poem and Slogan; Hints Own Candidacy.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, April 22.—The personal campaign of Gov. Eugene Talmadge against the national Administration gained impetus today with adoption of a poem and a slogan, and a statement by him that reelection of President Roosevelt would be "a national calamity."

The slogan, "Americans Wake Up," and the poem, which harked back to revolutionary days for a comparison with current events, were contributed to the Talmadge attack in communications from New Jersey and New York, respectively.

They were received by the Governor in a pile of letters and telegrams which he said carried indorsements of his anti-Administration stand from persons in 26 States.

Roosevelt a "Calamity."

His latest blast against the present Government set-up came in response to a question as to whether he believed President Roosevelt would be renominated.

"I hope not," Talmadge replied. "It will be a national calamity—a calamity to the Democratic Party and to America in view of what he has sponsored in Washington."

In opening fire on the New Deal again Talmadge predicted the 1936 election would revolve around the Democratic South in a "revival of Jeffersonian doctrines."

Giving some credence to rumors that he himself might head the third party ticket which he has forecast for 1936, he continued:

"I'm a good Democrat of Jeffersonian doctrines. That crowd in Washington are not Democrats. They're not even Republicans. They are a queer mixture of the wet nurse brigade, frenzied finance and communism."

The poem which the Governor adopted today came in a letter written on stationery of "the Empire State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution." It bore the signature "Oscar J. Smith" and was mailed from New York City.

The slogan, "Americans Wake Up," was selected from a telegram received from Westfield, N. J., and signed "Walter L. Day."

Mine Leader, Shot, Accused in Murder

Illinois Official Held After Clash Wounds 10.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ill., April 22.—Wounded and charged with murder, State President Ray Edmundson, of the United Mine Workers of America, was held in jail tonight for the death of a rival miner in Springfield's Easter Sunday riot.

No statement was made by the labor official as he was brought back to Springfield from Taylorville, where he was secretly held in a hospital after surrendering to the sheriff last night. He had a "fairly severe neck wound."

Edmundson, who has taken a leading part in his union's struggle with the Progressive Miners of America for labor supremacy in the Illinois coal fields, is charged with the murder of Edris Mabie, progressive organizer, in a gun battle in which ten were wounded yesterday. Already under arrest, charged with murder, are two men alleged to have been with Edmundson in his automobile when the riot broke out in front of the local progressive headquarters.

Fear of Insanity Heritage Drives Father to Kill 2

Slays Son, Daughter Before Youth Disarms Him; Ill Mother Watches.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 22.—His son and daughter slain, another son lying critically wounded by his mad spree with a pistol, a veteran Chicago bank teller sobbed pitifully in his jail cell tonight:

"All I did was try to help somebody."

For months William Gardner, 56, had brooded over the fear that he and his family were doomed to a heritage of insanity or disease.

He had lived a quiet life in suburban La Grange Park. He had been village treasurer. For 40 years he had been a trusted paying teller at the First National Bank in Chicago's Loop.

But the terror of madness was creeping upon him, closing in . . .

Vacation Is No Help.

He took a few weeks off from the busy grind at the bank to rest and regain his composure. But the thing was still there . . . his mother had died insane . . . a sister had been a sanitarium patient . . . would the same destiny fall upon him and his children?

He slipped a pistol under his pillow last night.

In the early morning he rose softly and stole to the bedside of Donald, 14. He killed him with a single shot through the head. He fired a second at Kenneth, 17, but the youth struggled to his feet, grappled with his father as the pistol blazed and, desperately wounded in the body, thwarted an attempt to kill the mother, Mrs. Elsa Gardner, an invalid for 15 years.

As they struggled, Gardner wheeled suddenly and sent a bullet into the head of Rita Jane, 20, his daughter. She fell dead.

Mother Watches in Horror.

The mother, a victim of tuberculosis, watched in horror as Kenneth, doubling up with a third bullet in the abdomen, leaped upon his father and disarmed him.

To the suburban chief of police, who had been his friend for years, Gardner cried bitterly "my God, Ed, what have I done?"

He told in grim detail of his plan to wipe out the family he thought was menaced by insanity and tuberculosis.

Said tonight, in retrospect, he said at the county jail:

"I'm no criminal. For 40 years I worked at the bank. All I did was try to help somebody."

Daughter, Son Slain in Home by Chicago Banker

In his home in fashionable LaGrange Park, Ill., William Gardner, Chicago banker, suddenly became demented and shot to death his daughter, Rita Jane Gardner, 20, and his son, Donald, 14. Gardner also wounded another son, Kenneth, 17, who disarmed him.

Boy, 8, Sleep Walking, Killed Mother, Police Told by Father

Youth Who Had Been Playing "Desperado" With Chums, Using Wooden Gun, Says He Can't Remember Anything.

By the Associated Press.

Greenville, Tex., April 22. — The strange account of an 8-year-old boy seizing a shotgun while walking in his sleep and killing his 32-year-old mother was related by the boy's father, S. P. Darden, filling station operator, to investigating officers today.

"I don't remember anything that happened," sobbed Jackie Glenn Darden, who played "desperado" with his chums yesterday, using a wooden gun.

Darden said he was awakened by discharge of the shotgun, which he had kept loaded after seeing two prowlers near the house recently.

"I jumped from bed," he related. "Jackie Glenn was standing about 18 inches from his mother's bed, with the gun in his hands. He was asleep and I shook him to awaken him. He did not know what had happened."

Relatives said the boy once walked several hundred yards one night while asleep to the home of his grandmother and there crawled in bed.

Darden said that seeing the prowlers, he loaded the shotgun nightly, but "I would unload it in the mornings."

Dr. W. C. Welch, justice of the peace, held an inquest, but the verdict was withheld. The Hunt County grand jury was expected to receive testimony of both the boy and his father.

Darden said that Jackie had slept with Mrs. Darden. A 12-year-old son summoned a physician, but the woman already was dead.

3 Men Accused In Bus Tragedy Called to Court

Hearing Is Set for Today in Manslaughter Case at Rockville.

Rockville's tragic school bus crash in which 14 Williamsport school children lost their lives and which focused the attention of the Nation on grade crossing elimination will be probed today in Montgomery County Police Court.

The hearing, which will begin at 10 a. m. in the courthouse at Rockville, will be in the nature of a preliminary hearing on charges of manslaughter placed against three of the principals. In fact it will be an inquest.

Those accused are: Percy Line, of Hagerstown, driver of the bus; James A. Shewbridge, of Sandy Hook, engineer, and W. F. Bussey, of Glenburnie, fireman, of the crack St. Louis-New York flyer of the Baltimore & Ohio which crashed into the bus. They are at liberty on bond of $1,000 each.

Line suffered a fractured jaw in the crash but did not know it until several days later. He refused treatment at the time of the accident, April 12. After the jaw began to pain him, he underwent an X-ray examination and the fracture was revealed.

Survivors, police, railroad officials and employes, volunteer firemen, the chaperoning teacher, Miss Anna Louis Funk, who kept her nerve and worked all night to identify the dead and compile lists of those saved and injured—all will appear before Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt.

Nice Will Sign Bill on Library For Hyattsville

Voting on Measure Slated May 6 in Municipal Election.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 22.—After twice reversing his position on the controversial Hyattsville library referendum tax bill, Gov. Harry W. Nice today asserted he would sign the measure Thursday at 11:30 a. m. in his Baltimore office. The Governor informed C. D. Anderson, member of the Hyattsville council, of his decision.

Gov. Nice stated he would be unable to affix his signature to the bill before that date because of a scheduled trip to Western Maryland.

Voting on the bill will be held Monday, May 6, in the annual municipal election. With only one candidate for mayor and one aspirant for each of the councilmanic seats to be filled, principal interest will center on the library question.

Sponsored in the recent session of the Legislature by Delegate Egbert F. Tingley (Democrat), of Hyattsville, and passed unanimously by the Assembly, the bill has aroused considerable controversy in the town. Opposition has come from the mayor and council, which, following a recent hearing before the Governor, obtained a statement from him that the bill would be vetoed.

At a later hearing, proponents of the measure presented facts to the Governor which caused him to say he would approve the bill as it contained a referendum clause. His stand again brought out a storm of protests and another hearing was scheduled for the latter part of this week. Yesterday's statement caused considerable surprise and it is not known what considerations caused his determination to sign the bill.

The measure provides for the appropriation from the annual tax levy by the mayor and council of a minimum of 5 cents and a maximum of 7 cents on each $100 of assessed property valuation for library purposes, subject to the May 6 referendum.

Hearing Set Today On Bridge Plans

Virginians Due to Oppose High-Level Structure.

Opposition to construction of a high-level bridge across the Potomac River to replace the worn-out Chain Bridge, is expected to be presented by a delegation from Virginia at a hearing before the District Commissioners at 10:30 a. m. today.

Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, will head the delegation. The plan of the National Park and Planning Commission to construct a high-level bridge, just above the present Chain Bridge, would cost $1,000,000 or more for the bridge alone. The District and Virginia and Maryland would have to spend much more for adequate roads.

Harrison Bonus Alone Can Win, Veterans Told

Patman Opposes Compromise at Senate Hearing; Tax Issue Raised.

By the Associated Press.

Assertions that only the Harrison bonus compromise would meet two essentials—acceptance by President Roosevelt and avoidance of new taxes—yesterday were flung by Administration spokesmen at veteran demands for full cash payment of service certificates.

They were heard as the Senate Finance Committee opened a two-day hearing on the bonus issue with veteran leaders ignoring threats of a veto to urge approval of the Patman currency-expansion payment bill already passed by the House.

Despite Mr. Roosevelt's repeated warnings that extra-budget expenditures must be accompanied by new revenue, Chairman Harrison cited the $130,000,000 already available in Federal funds for payment of the certificates and the recent increased tax collections. He added:

"I feel that my bill would not now call for an immediate raise in taxes."

Patman Presses His Bill.

The Harrison bill would advance the interest bearing period of the bonus certificates from 1925 to 1918 and on that new value offer to exchange negotiable Government bonds for them. The Patman plan would pay the fully matured value of the bonus in new money and was estimated by Harrison to cost $1,000,000,000 more than his compromise.

That Democratic strategy will be to hold out the Harrison bill as the best that can be passed in view of President Roosevelt's opposition to full cash payment also was emphasized at the hearings by Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina.

With Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, asking the committee to approve his bill, Bailey said he understood that neither the Patman nor the Vinson bill would be signed by the President, but that the Harrison bill would be.

Dislikes Harrison Bill.

"If that is so," Bailey asked Patman, "why pass a bill that will bring the veteran nothing instead of one that will get him something?"

"To be frank," Patman replied, "the soldiers won't get much under the Harrison bill."

Patman conceded the compromise plan would be a little beneficial for the veteran who held his certificate and did not borrow, but he said the average soldier already owed $600 on his certificate and would get only $150 or $175 under Harrison's proposal.

Patman was the first witness, and most of the committee was present to hear him, but the audience included few outside of the officials of the various veterans' organizations.

James E. Van Zandt, commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and several other speakers also urged the Patman bill. The American Legion, which stood for the Vinson bill in the House, will appear today, together with officials of the Treasury and the Veterans' Administration. Harrison expected to conclude the hearing by tonight and call his group together immediately to vote.

The legion payment plan would leave financing methods to the Treasury.

Hobart Opposes Payment.

One voice was raised at the hearing yesterday against any kind of a bonus payment. It was that of Donald A. Hobart, national commander of the American Veterans Association, who said a public demand was rising to "take the profits out of patriotism."

"When the veteran understands this situation," Hobart said, "when he realizes that he must continue in idleness and can not qualify for public works employment until he has used up his bonus money, he will not consider that the passage of a bonus bill is an act of friendship on the part of his country."

Van Zandt told the committee the Veterans of Foreign Wars was "standing pat for Patman." His entire statement, however, was a defense of the Patman bill rather than an attack on the Harrison measure.

Merger Planned By Presbyterians

Mission, Education Boards to Be Combined.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 22.—Plans for a $47,000,000 merger of all educational and evangelistic activities of the Presbyterian Church in the United States in a single administrative body were announced today at denominational offices here.

The announcement said the merger project, joining the Presbyterian Board of National Missions in New York and Board of Christian Education in Philadelphia, will be offered for approval at the Presbyterian General Assembly May 23 in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Assets of the missions board, which spends $3,200,000 annually, were listed as $43,000,000. Assets of the education board, which has a "co-operative relationship" with more than 50 Presbyterian colleges with $100,000,000 in assets, were listed as $4,000,000. The number of administrative boards and agencies of the denomination would be reduced to three. The other two are the boards of foreign missions and pensions.

Perjury Count Against Senate Witness Upheld

400,000 Boost In CCC Backed By Roosevelt

Entire Work-Relief Plan Set-up Slated to Be Revealed This Week.

By the Associated Press.

Indorsement by President Roosevelt of a tripling of the Civilian Conservation Corps forces engaged in combating dust-breeding soil erosion placed a new cog in his $4,000,000,000 spending machine last night.

Approval of the move followed indirect word from the President that before the week is out he will unfold the entire administrative set-up of his work-relief program.

Retiring from his desk in the executive offices, Mr. Roosevelt spent virtually the entire afternoon immersed in reports, recommendations and factual data pertaining to the works plan. He is not expected to throw the spending machine into high gear for a month or longer, however.

It was said at the White House, nevertheless, that plans for division of responsibility among a number of Government agencies, with the President closely supervising, had been completed.

CCC Distribution Approved.

Prior to leaving his office, the President, at a conference with Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, approved distribution of the 600,000 men who will make up the expanded CCC.

The threat of a repetition of last year's drought, coupled with ravages of dust storms in the Middle West, was said to be responsible for the decision to increase the number of men engaged in such activities from 42,000 to 116,000.

Fechner said other activities of the 600,000 would be: 290,000 on National, State and private forests, an increase of 110,000; 120,000 instead of the present 105,000 on National Parks; 74,000 on flood and drainage control, and wild life conservation.

Land has been acquired for 1,216 additional camps, and the War Department is ready to begin immediate construction, he added.

To Boost Expenditures.

Once an executive order transferring additional funds is issued, CCC officials said, $40,000,000 or $45,000,000 a month will be spent in an effort to have enrollment increased from 370,000 to 600,000 July 1, when the remainder of the program is to get under way.

More than 2,000 of the 2,916 CCC camps will be supervised by the Agriculture Department, whose Undersecretary, Rexford G. Tugwell, is to coordinate the land improvement phase of the 3,500,000-job program.

Other members of the advisory council which will assist the President in allocating projects are to be Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator; Secretary Ickes, Fechner and probably Thomas H. McDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, and Rear Admiral C. J. Peoples, Treasury procurement officer, who is to supervise purchases of materials.

At the White House it was said the President had determined upon surveys of the distribution and work aptitude of the employable relief population, and of the ability of States and localities to pay part of the cost.

How large a share was said to depend upon the individual capacities of the applicants, with details to be worked out later.

Astor Has Evidence Roosevelt Can Fish

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—President Roosevelt, said Vincent Astor tonight, "is a first rate and tireless fisherman."

Astor, tanned by the Caribbean sun, returned to New York today in his yacht Nourmahal. He tied up in Tebo's Basin, Brooklyn.

"Any statistics to prove that statement?" inquired a reporter.

"Yes, there are," said Astor, promptly.

"You will find the 'statistics' swimming around in the Bermuda Aquarium and also in my little aquarium here. The President caught most of the show fishes."

Treasury Suspends Pylon Construction

Life Pay Asked For U. S. Senate In Babson Talk

Revolution Is Seen Unless Outgo Halts; Roosevelt Policies Assailed.

By the United Press.

New York, April 22.—Senators would be given their full salaries for life under a plan advanced by Roger W. Babson, economist and statistician, in a talk prepared for delivery tonight before the Babson Institute Alumni Association of New York.

"Such a plan," said Babson, "would make the Senators free to use their own judgment and think first of their people at home. It would go a long way to offset the bullying and threats of blocs."

Babson's suggestion would not change the present method of elections or lengthen the Senatorial term of office.

"With the assurance of a salary for life, however, they would assume more the attitude of impartial judges," said Babson. "Such a plan would make the ultimate good of the Nation mean more to Congress than the immediate prospects of reelection."

Assails Spending.

Such a program, Babson said, would cost "only $1,800,000 a year, which is a mere 'drop' in the bucket, while it would immediately restore the confidence of all honest citizens of all groups."

Babson painted a black picture of the United States in the future unless the Government "begins to curtail its reckless spending" and look toward balancing the budget.

The economist said the only hope left for world stability and peace is the United States and Great Britain.

"If either collapses," he said, "democratic government, free speech, private property and other ideals for which our ancestors fought and bled will be wiped away."

Warns of Revolution.

Babson deplored the unbalanced budget. Its continuance, he said, will inevitably lead to inflation and the destruction of the national currency.

"There has never been one single instance where a national currency has been destroyd without leaving revolution in its wake," Babson declared.

"We are already in the rapids and are racing toward the falls.

"Unless our Government now begins to curtail its reckless spending this country will be in a stinking mess."

The threatened revolution, he said, would be made up of the 1,000,000 young men now unemployed. Over 600,000 of them will soon be training in the CCC camps "for the very purpose of revolution."

Sees Gamblers Financing Revolt.

"Such a revolution," he said, "would be financed by the same gamblers who in previous years have financed Wall Street pools, Florida booms and wholesale bootlegging.

"Heretofore, when the gold of the Nation was distributed among 25,000 banks, insurance companies and other institutions and 1,000,000 individuals, the stakes were not high enough to back a man like Huey Long on a 1-to-20 chance," said the economist.

"But now, with all this gold under the control of one man in Washington, backing a prospective dictator would be well worth the gamble.

Roosevelt Policy Called Destructive.

Babson said an elemental need of the day was a coalition Government for four or eight years, "whereby both political parties will forget themselves and unite for the common good."

"Washington has taken the profit out of everything except politics," he added.

Babson believed we are paying "too great a price" for legislation and relief.

"Roosevelt," he said, "should now think of recovery and quit his present destructive policies."

The economist pointed out that the Government deficit increased $195,000 during his 30-minute talk. "Never before in the history of the world," he said, "has any nation so deliberately unbalanced its budget as the United States is doing at the present time."

Most Senators Laugh At Babson Proposal

By the United Press.

Senators tonight refused to take seriously Roger Babson's suggestion that they be pensioned for life immediately upon election.

Most of them laughed when told of the proposal and would not be quoted. Comments included:

Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia—"I don't know whether in any case Senators would vote as their consciences dictated, because I don't know whether they all have consciences."

Henry W. Keyes (Republican), New Hampshire—"It sounds interesting; I don't know as I would want to advocate it right away."

Morris Sheppard (Democrat), Texas—"I wouldn't favor it. You don't need it. You can trust the average Senator to do the right thing."

Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina—"That's rather unique."

Food Stand Law To Be Enforced

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, yesterday issued instructions to health department food inspectors to enforce the law requiring outside stands on which food is displayed shall be not less than two feet above the sidewalk or ground.

His orders were issued, Dr. Ruhland announced, because of many complaints that foodstuffs were being displayed on outside stands too close to the sidewalk or ground to comply with the law. Complainants protested such foodstuffs were too liable to gather dirt.

Garner himself. In so doing he pleaded ignorance of the Senate rules.

Townsend Rebuffs Long.

Another rebuff to the Louisianan was administered by Dr. F. E. Townsend, author of the $200-a-month old-age pension plan, who had been invited to speak on the same platform with Long, at Des Moines, Saturday. The meeting had been heralded as an effort to unite the Townsend, Long and Father Charles E. Coughlin forces. Townsend asked to be "excused."

Huey made a gala return to the Senate, his light brown suit and ensemble tan and white shoes and straw hat mingling gayly with Easter's polychromes. In the galleries there was standing room only and hundreds lined stairways awaiting entrance.

Hints of Tax Strike.

"Don't you forget yourselves," he admonished, with waving arms and tossing head. "That Boston tea party can work both ways.

"When you strip the States of this Union of their sovereignty to supervise what they are to be held up for afterward, they can strip themselves of the sovereignty of becoming debtors for taxes. You strip them of the sovereignty in one way, they strip themselves of the sovereignty in another way. You have got to go into those States to collect your taxes, the same as you have got to go there to spend it."

This was his answer to Ickes, who had threatened to check the works fund flow to Louisiana if a Long-controlled State advisory commission, set up under the latest of Huey's so-called State "dictatorship" bills, attempted to pass on Federal allotments.

Long assailed the agencies through which Federal funds previously were administered in Louisiana.

"If we have to surrender the sovereignty of the State of Louisiana, we will surrender it into hands that are not reeking with confessions of fraud and graft that gang has composed," he said.

"They are not worried. They get all the money they want from the United States Government. They spend it in their filthy politics and in the rotten machinery from which we have relieved the State. That is known to the President of the United States.

"They get the funds under this Washington Administration, load our State government down, spend the money for rotten politics and then ride off and say: 'That is the result of the debauchery that has been inflicted on Louisiana as the result of Huey Long's administration.'"

Ickes did not mention Long by name in his New York address, but pointedly referred to "the Democrat who hurls his voice through the pure air to advocate false doctrine, the acceptance of which by a majority of the people would destroy this America which I love."

The public works administrator said it is "a base and loathesome thing" to inspire hopes that can never be realized by those "who dwell in physical misery and mental despair."

Secretary Ickes paid his compliments to Dr. Townsend (again not mentioning his name), as an "impractical visionary, * * * who dreams an effervescent dream of an unrealizable Utopia * * *."

World Conflict Held Unlikely By Envoy Saito

Japanese Scouts Danger of War in Address to Virginia Women.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 22.—A rosy view of world peace was taken today by Ambassador Hirosi Saito, of Japan, in addressing the local women's clubs.

"If I am any judge of American opinion, he said, "the unhappy consequences of the World War have made your people resolve, if possible, to keep out of the next European conflict—if one comes.

"But, incidentally, in my opinion, antoher general war across the Atlantic is not likely to occur.

"The same, I think, can also be said of the Far East. The United States would make every effort to keep out of a conflict across the Pacific. But fortunately one is even less likely to take place there."

Japan, he said, is dependent on the United States largely for raw materials and "our progress is of high benefit to you."

"We are a nation of 65,000,000 of people," he said, "which is about half the size in population of the United States. But in territory Japan proper is no larger than your State of California, while our entire empire is no larger than two of your 48 States. It is not as large, in fact, as your overseas possessions alone.

"We have, therefore, a problem of subsistence such as the American people have not. This we are solving by industrialization. We have not the wide extent of farm lands or the abundant supply of raw materials with which the American people are so richly endowed. We have to obtain these from abroad."

At a dinner tonight, Saito summarized American acts of good will toward Japan from the opening of "rusty door of feudal Japan" by Commodore Peary in 1853, to aid the Japanese earthquake victims in 1923. He mentioned Bishop Tucker, of Virginia, as a missionary to whom Japan was grateful.

Women Oppose Bill Allowing Child Actors

Federation Also Votes Smoke Nuisance Control in District.

Opposition to the proposed bill which would permit the appearance of child actors on Washington stages was expressed in a resolution adopted yesterday by the District Federation of Women's Clubs at Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A.

In other resolutions the federation went on record urging that Congress enact legislation to control the District smoke nuisance and indorsed recommendations of the advisory committee on playgrounds and recreation, except for the proviso that supervisors shall not hold other District or Federal appointments.

The playgrounds resolution was introduced by Mrs. Otto L. Veerhoff, chairman of the department of education. The action against smoke was introduced by Mrs. Horace J. Phelps, chairman of legislation, who also introduced the resolution regarding child actors.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president, was in the chair. The members heard a song program from Mme. M. F. d'Aulby, Italian operatic soprano, who was accompanied at the piano by Fulton B. Kan.

Mrs. George F. Dalwick was awarded first prize of $5 in the literary contest for her review of "Gosta Berling's Saga," by Selma Lagerlof. Second prize went to Mrs. Grace Sigourney for her "Treatise on Early Petworth and Vicinity." Third prizes went to Mrs. H. J. Harris and Mrs. E. Morgan Price, tied for the award.

Description Given Of 9-Lens Camera

Photogrammetry Society Holds Annual Meeting.

Details of the new nine-lens aerial mapping camera which is being built for the Coast and Geodetic Survey were disclosed yesterday at the session of the first annual meeting of the American Society of Photogrammetry (the science of making maps from photographs).

The camera was described by Lieut. O. S. Reading, chief of the section of aerial photography of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, which cooperated with the Bureau of Standards and the Fairchild Aerial Camera Corporation.

The nine-lens camera, Lieut. Reading said, will make it possible to photograph 130 degrees square at one instant compared to 52 degrees square for the old one lens camera. One exposure with the new machine will cover the area covered by 20 exposures of the one-lens camera or four exposures with the five-lens instrument.

Maid, Wife or Widow? That's The Mae West Problem Now

Frank Wallace, With Whom Her Name Was Linked on 1911 Marriage License, Is Dead, N. Y. Producer Says; Another Turns Up.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—Mae West—maid, wife or widow?

The marital status of the buxom blonde of the movies provided Broadway with swift waves of gossip tonight, with the high spot an assertion that Frank Wallace, who married a Mae West, had been dead two years.

"Sure, Frank Wallace is dead," said Jack Linder, producer of "Diamond Lil" on Broadway in 1928.

"He died a year and a half or two years ago up in the Bronx. He had tuberculosis, you know."

As to the report of Wallace's marriage in 1911 to a Mae West, actress, in Milwaukee, Linder could offer no confirmation.

"Miss West asked me to give Frank a job in 'Diamond Lil' and so I did, at $35 a week as a singing waiter," he continued.

Miss West from Hollywood has said she "never heard of the guy," and her sister, Beverly West, has issued an emphatic denial of Mae's marriage to any one at any time.

A second Frank Wallace, who also seemed to have known Mae West—the Mae West, that is—bobbed up tonight to add further confusion to the complex and rapidly complicating story.

The Daily News said it had found the Frank Wallace who was a singing waiter in "Diamond Lil," but that another Frank Wallace, he was an actor, too, had died two years ago in St. Joseph's Hospital, the Bronx.

He Can't Talk.

"I never heard that he was married to her (Miss West)," the News quoted Mrs. Mae Brancati, a sister of the dead Frank Wallace, as saying. "When he was dying we sent her a telegram to come and see him, but she never even answered it."

Frank (Diamond Lil) Wallace was described by the News as "a slim, bald man in his forties, slightly over medium height."

An agent, with fitting dignity, wouldn't let Wallace talk.

"Mr. Wallace," said the agent, Jack Carroll, "can not deny or affirm the report that he is the husband of Mae West."

The silence that followed this pronouncement was overwhelming.

"But——." Wallace finally said, only to be hushed by the agent, who preferred to be termed an artist's personal representative.

"I will do the talking, and I can only say that you"—looking at Wallace—"will say nothing about it."

Friends of Wallace around the Strand Building, where the attempted interview took place, said, however, they always had heard Wallace was the husband of Mae West, the movie star, that is.

Pictured Together.

Linder pulled down a bulky scrapbook from a shelf and pointed to a picture of the cast of the West drama—showing the performers in the Bowery saloon scene.

Other theatrical people along Broadway were skeptical about the West-Wallace marriage, doubtful that in 1911 Mae West was the movie star of today. But they always added—"you never can tell."

"Of course, people always talk about a couple being married if they work together in a vaudeville act," observed one agent.

But no record was available that the movie Miss West and Frank Wallace ever did work together, other than in "Diamond Lil."

In the office of a theatrical publication a reference was found to Mae's working in a song and dance act known as Hogan & West in 1908.

Later she did a "single," and again in 1912 she worked with a pair of dancers known as the Gerard Boys.

Appeared With Sister.

In 1916 it was "Mae West and Sister," the future siren appearing on the vaudeville circuits with Beverly West, her sister.

When Mae West produced her first play, "Sex," in 1926 she did so as "Jane Mast," which didn't prevent her (as Mae West) from serving nine days in the workhouse for what the judge called "an obscene stage performance."

"Diamond Lil" came along in 1928 and proved a tremendous hit, playing for a long run at the Royale Theater. Some years later it was filmed as "She Done Him Wrong." And Mae has since followed her fortunes in the movies, and has done quite well for herself.

But whether Mae West was ever married to Frank Wallace, the small-time hoofer, seems to be Mae's secret. In Milwaukee in 1911 the principals didn't have to sign the wedding certificate, and in the case of the disputed license the names of Wallace and a Mae West were filled in by the license clerk.

In 1910, too, the blushing bride gave her age as 18, though Times Square authorities recall the team of Hogan & West three years earlier, all of which leaves her age pretty much in doubt.

Idle in March Decrease 1.3% To 9,760,000

But Number Is 3.9% More Than Unemployed a Year Ago.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, April 22.—The total number of unemployed workers in March, 1935, was 9,760,000, according to the regular monthly estimate of the National Industrial Conference Board, made public today. This is a decrease of 125,000, or 1.3 per cent, from the preceding month, but an increase of 366,000, or 3.9 per cent over March, 1934.

From February to March, 1935, the decreases in unemployment, by industrial groups, were: manufacturing and mechanical industries, 164,000; transportation, 12,000; miscellaneous industries, 4,000, and domestic and personal service, 1,000. Unemployment in trade showed an increase of 16,000, and mining, 14,000.

Compared with March, 1934, unemployment in March, 1935, declined 2.3 per cent in mining; 0.9 per cent in manufacturing and mechanical industries; and 0.8 per cent in domestic and personal service. In transportation, however, unemployment rose 4.8 per cent; in trade, 2.5 per cent; and in miscellaneous industries, 0.8 per cent. The conference board's allowance of 321,000 for the net annual increase of gainful workers available for employment brought the estimate of total unemployment above the figure for March, 1934.

2,253 Weddings In Day at Rome

Fascist Party Pays $95,000 for 'Gift' Honeymoons.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 22.—The Black-Shirt Fascist Party turned cupid today and married off 2,253 Italian couples in another annual mass wedding, celebrating by offering to anyone who would get married enough money for a honeymoon.

It was rather costly for the party. Donations of 500 lire (about $42) to each couple from the city and province who would take the matrimonial plunge mounted to the equivalent of almost $95,000.

Junked Autos Halt Floods.

Leupp, Ariz., April 22 (AP).—Here's another use for junked motor cars—flood control. Indian agency officials said today that the dilapidated machines have been used successfully to reinforce dikes surrounding school buildings in this vicinity, which in the past have been threatened by the raging waters of the Colorado River. Rapidly melting snow annually swells the waters of the river.

A Business For Poets

THE milk business is not all science and certification.
It recognizes that cows are more than pedigrees.
It is rich in the distinctions which give life its color and meaning.
A well kept dairy farm provides its own accent of rural charm. The herds are distinguished with strains that signify the very cream of bovine aristocracy.
No mere number in a registration book is enough for a pampered cow. Your true dairyman is a realist; but more, he is a poet in blank verse. He chews the cud of romance and delights in picturesque names for his prize producers of butter fat. Breeders, too, dote on the imagery of pedigreed lineage. . . .

A General Motors Value

The first big rush to Pontiac was caused by Pontiac's sensational styling. Everyone was attracted by "the most beautiful thing on wheels"—and overnight, Pontiac sales began to soar.

But soon those new owners who had been won by Pontiac's beauty were happy to discover that the 1935 Pontiac is one of the most economical cars on the road today! Not merely the economy of freedom from constant adjustment and repairs, but an economy of gasoline and oil that is actually amazing to even those who are used to driving smaller, lighter cars.

In view of the fact that the 1935 Pontiac is a big, full-size, full-weight automobile, such economy may sound—and seem—incredible. But it isn't! It is based on reports from many sections of the country. We do not quote any sensational figures of miles per gallon—because such figures are usually obtained in special tests under conditions which never occur in everyday average owners' driving. But if you want PROOF of Pontiac's remarkable economy, we are ready to supply it. Come in—and get the facts!

Modern Sesames.

Any morning now the postman may deliver an envelope, probably bearing a Midwestern postmark, inclosing the names of six persons and a short message. Make five copies of the message, your unexpected correspondent will suggest, scratch out the top name on the list and add your own to the bottom. Mail the messages to five friends and one dime to the deleted top name. By the time these motions have followed through five cycles and your name has reached the top of the list, you will receive dimes from 15,625 persons. That is, if everyone has the "faith, hope and charity" mentioned in the message. Thus an investment of 10 cents plus five postage stamps will yield a return of $1,562.50.

Just why a dime and not a dollar was settled on for the medium of this system of redistributing the wealth is not vouchsafed. Certainly everyone could do with $15,625. Even as it is, of course, 50 friends could be written instead of merely five. Theoretically, a veritable Comstock lode of dimes would be forthcoming if a sufficient number of people were foolish enough to be thus victimized.

This pitiful combination of petty graft and major fallacy is most interesting as an indication of the temper of the times. It is a straw in the wind and it flies with a barnfull of others to darken the skies. Psychologists know well the individual who, under prolonged mental strain, reverts to the carefree attitudes of his childhood. Under the bludgeonings of the depression, men are thoughtlessly turning away from the time-tested principles of thrift, industry and fair returns. An economic infantilism becomes daily more and more evident.

Wealth is represented as being available to all by simply pronouncing a mystic formula. Many there are who would be only too delighted to apprise one of the necessary "sesame." Some swear it is "Share the wealth." Others believe it is "Pay the bonus." Advocates of "Repeal" as a shortcut to prosperity at one time were popular. Until recently many urged muttering the name of a kindly old doctor from California. And now, the latest theory on how to win entrance to the glittering cavern of prosperity may be tested by copying a letter five times and inclosing 10 cents.

Man And Nature.

Man stands revealed in all his minuscule proportions before the ravages of uncontrollable natural forces. The West has just recently seen the ambitious theories of crop control confounded by drought and billows of dust. And now, without regard for all the efforts of science to take the horrors out of earthquakes, a section of Formosa has been suddenly laid desolate.

The Nation's sympathy goes out to the thousands who died and the quarter million made homeless in this latest disaster. What matter air defenses and naval ratios when entire countrysides lie crippled and fires gut the crumbled remains of a capital city? As the catastrophe of 1923, which leveled central Japan, then called forth donations and aid from all America, so today the masks of distrust and suspicion are lowered to show real concern for the tragic fate of these, our fellow men.

Rolling Their Own.

For six and a half hours yesterday eggs were rolled, minor battles were waged and children were lost—all in keeping with the best traditions of Easter egg-rolling on the White House lawn. This year the rolling was "marked with simplicity," as the saying goes. There was no magician to pull rabbits out of hats and no Sistie-Buzzie combine to delight the photographers. Though the occasion was planned primarily for the pleasure of children, weary and harassed mothers got their share of thrills when the President and Mrs. Roosevelt made personal appearances.

Fortunately, the rulings concerning these egg-rollings, which had been issued last week by the National Park Service, were no more strictly enforced than an NRA code. In fact, the service was careful to announce that they were not to be regarded as mandatory. That is as it should be. What do grown-ups and Federal authorities know about drawing up a code of fair competition for children and Easter eggs and chocolate rabbits?

The weather acted as if made to order, hundreds of children had their fun, thousands of fancy colored eggs met their doom, and dozens of parents secretly rejoiced that egg-rolling, like Christmas, comes but once a year. Within a few days the White House lawn will have resumed its customary spick-and-span orderliness, the digestion of a goodly portion of Washington's youngsters will have returned to normal, and all will be quiet along Pennsylvania avenue until this time next year.

The Brookings' NRA Study.

The premature release of a section of the NRA study just completed by the Brookings Institution has given rise to some misconception of the character of the report. The conclusion that the NRA has "on the whole retarded recovery" sums up the views of one of the collaborators who is referred to by Donald R. Richberg as a "virulent" critic of NRA. It was this part of the report which was placed in the hands of members of the Senate Finance Committee engaged in holding hearings on the bill for an extension of the recovery act. To a certain extent that explains why Mr. Richberg regards the entire book as "political propaganda" designed to "influence congressional action in support of the pet theories of a few reactionary economists."

This characteristic official method of trying to impugn the motives of critics whose opinions are unfavorable to Administration policies may be dismissed as irrelevant. It is, however, disappointing to discover that a study which might have offered valuable guidance to Congress in the formulation of a new recovery measure is largely negative in its findings and inclined to challenge the validity of the principles upon which the recovery legislation is based.

A less opinionated report would have carried greater weight. Furthermore, it would have offered more assurance of constructive remedial action than a wholesale condemnation of present procedure which suggests, although it does not specifically recommend, a return to the unregulated conditions that prevailed prior to passage of the recovery act.

Despite some grudging admissions that there is a credit as well as a debit side to the NRA balance sheet, the liabilities are stressed throughout, lending support to Mr. Richberg's statement that the analysis is skeptical and the interpretation of statistical records hostile. This is especially unfortunate, since the Brookings' study contains factual data of great value and discusses problems of administration, trade practices, hours and wages, and kindred questions with a thoroughness and a grasp of intricate detail which only experts with inside knowledge could possibly possess.

The only logical deduction that can be drawn from the concluding observations of the investigators is that the NRA needs to be overthrown instead of being reformed. It is true that certain necessary reforms are listed, such as the elimination of unworkable codes, strengthening of the compliance machinery, and reorganization of the NRA to "achieve continuity of policy and method."

Hard upon the heels of these recommendations, however, follows an assertion that any attempt to carry out those reforms "in line with clearly determined public policy and to enforce such modified codes up to any reasonable standard of administrative efficiency" would probably precipitate a widespread collapse of the code system. It is further assumed that attempts to eliminate undesirable antisocial provisions from numerous codes which industrial groups regard as important, would completely undermine the existing scheme of code administration and voluntary compliance upon which the system rests.

In short, the type of cooperative organization encouraged by the recovery act is viewed askance as being the outcome of bargaining and dickering for special advantages that are considered detrimental to the public interest. That assumption of course raises squarely the question as to what system would protect the public interest. Is it desirable to return to a condition of unregulated competition without restrictions upon price and wage cutting? Or what other alternatives, if any, exist?

The Brookings study leaves these questions unanswered. But the implications of the study lend support to Mr. Richberg's complaint that a "reactionary program of wage cutting and price cutting and cruel deflation" is regarded as preferable to the cooperative activities encouraged by the NRA.

Haphazard Relief Policies.

Pennsylvania will "not get one thin dime of relief money unless it puts up $5,000,000 a month for its own relief." Illinois will be similarly treated until it supplies $3,000,000 from State funds for relief purposes. And Georgia has been warned that all Federal funds for direct-relief purposes will be cut off on June 1, because it has refused to appropriate its share of this expenditure. By such means, Administrator Hopkins seeks to revive a feeling of local responsibility for the care of the destitute.

Probably Mr. Hopkins is justified in demanding that Pennsylvania and Illinois contribute the sums stated to supplement Federal contributions. Certainly the noncooperative attitude of Georgia seems indefensible. Nevertheless, it is important to ask why Mr. Hopkins has singled out these and a few other States for discipline when delinquency on the part of local governments in furnishing relief is widespread. Furthermore, what tests are applied by the Federal Relief Administrator when he undertakes to determine how much the States can and should raise to finance relief outlays?

Mr. Hopkins can not be blamed for exercising the great and arbitrary powers which have been vested in him by law. But the Administration may justly be criticized for its failure to define and restrict his discretionary exercise of authority. With the proportion of Federal funds ranging from about 50 to 100 per cent of all relief outlays in the several States, the need for some systematic apportionment of such money becomes evident. In the absence of a defined policy certain sections have unquestionably received less than a fair allotment of Federal funds simply because other communities have evaded their responsibilities.

Mr. Hopkins evidently feels a profound disdain for the application of business methods to emergency spending. He reveals it by his extraordinary observation that Secretary Ickes must be joking when he asks the FERA to return a PWA loan of $262,000,000. But, relief funds are not inexhaustible. And it is essential to abandon present haphazard and arbitrary edicts in favor of a systematized policy of apportioning Federal grants in aid on some rational and equitable basis.

Duties Of A Neutral.

From various sources the need for a revised neutrality policy is being impressively emphasized. Dr. James Brown Scott, one of the most eminent authorities on international law, warns that the changing times have made obsolete this country's past attitude in event of war abroad. In his anxiety, he shares the views of such experts as Charles Warren, whose arguments for immediate revision have been heard recently. A thoughtful study of the problem has also been published by the Foreign Policy Association.

In his annual report on the Division of International Law to the trustees of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Dr. Scott emphasizes that "there is a generally recognized law of neutrality, but it is an old law, adequate to circumstances which once existed but which no longer obtain." War in its twentieth century mode has become the concern not merely of standing armies but of entire national populations. Under these conditions such commodities as wheat and cotton, lumber and copper become as vital to a belligerent as arms and munitions.

Warfare having developed into an economic as well as a military struggle, virtually all commodities may rightly be considered as contraband when fighting begins. With all the world today dependent upon imported products, the question of the relation between neutrals and belligerents becomes acutely delicate. To what extent will commercial rights of a neutral, based on the principle of freedom of the seas, impinge upon the natural concern of any belligerent to prevent its opponents from receiving necessary supplies?

Believing that the United States should keep aloof from foreign wars, Dr. Scott urges the Government to forbid the manufacture and export of commodities "the sole or indirect purpose of which is the destruction of the lives of persons who are not in the slightest degree our enemies." He would permit trade in other commodities to be carried on only at the risk of individual merchants, with the understanding that they would have no recourse to the protection of the Government in case of injury or attack. In short, he would have this country avoid war by taking every precaution against incidents that in the past have incited people and governments to active hostility.

This expert opinion, in which a number of leading students of international law concur, warrants careful consideration in formulating a policy to supplant the 1909 Declaration of London. Since the United States has become an important source of supplies for the world market, the responsibility of maintaining a realistic attitude toward the prospect of war abroad becomes all the more important. For, as Dr. Scott points out in his conclusion—> performance of neutral duties by the Government of the United States has kept us out of European wars. Insistence upon so-called neutral rights has more than once dragged us into European wars, and may do so again unless, like Washington, we lay emphasis upon neutral duties rather than upon neutral rights.

An Unknown Friend.

One of the many drawbacks of an editor's job is his inability to meet some of his contributors. It is even more of a distress than his inability to avoid meeting others who feel the ceaseless urge to burst into print.

There has been one who periodically—to use a hackneyed phrase sincerely—supplied this paper with a long-felt want. Perhaps the most difficult sort of editorial to produce successfully is the calendric kind. It is all too easy to comment glibly on unexpected news. But the inevitable turn of the season, the sure approach of Easter or Christmas or the Fourth of July, is likely to find the editorial quiver empty—and partly just because the event is expected.

For over a year now this page has been appreciatively publishing, and we have reason to know that many have been appreciatively reading, just such editorials, done with variety and freshness, with delicacy and with grace. They were the contributions of J. W. Richardson. They came in seldom. They were always welcome.

All that we know for certain of this contributor is that name, and the address of Roxbury, Mass. From there these little essays came, in the scholarly but slightly faltering script of a generation which was more accustomed than our own to reflect on the amenities of life. And now from Roxbury a formal communication from this office to Mr. Richardson has been returned. It is marked "Deceased."

Several States are considering financing relief work through lotteries. It's the best plan yet for setting up a permanent revolving fund.

It's An Ill Wind That Blows No Good.

During the temporary absence of Mr. Elderman, The Post's cartoonist, a symposium of editorial reaction to current national and foreign affairs will be published from day to day in this space. The reprinted drawings will not necessarily represent our own viewpoint, but are selected as reflections of considered opinions on the passing scene. The editors of The Post wish to make full acknowledgment of the courtesy of their contemporaries in granting permission for this procedure.

Letters To The Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Reply To Midshipman.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter which appeared this week in your columns, signed "Midshipman," is a good illustration of what happens when you expose a juvenile mind to the prospect of education and support for life at the hands of the taxpayers. Undoubtedly, as Midshipman says, the boys at the two academies would go to the front, if sent. Why not? That is the one chance in a thousand that they must take in return for being supported in luxury and idleness for the rest of their lives. I don't remember that many naval officers lost their lives, or even lost their hot shower baths, in the World War. And for every graduate of Annapolis and West Point who was killed there were 1,000 reserves or more. In fact, according to the historians, the United States has never won a war and never could without the civilians coming to the rescue.

As to the students' antiwar strike, more power to them. It takes more "guts" to stand for what a conscientious objector has to go through than to go to war. I had a hunch last time that the war was useless, but I didn't have the courage it takes to be a conscientious objector, so I took the easier way of having the girls admire my uniform and having the crowds cheer, and although I fought the Germans, the cooties and the rats in the trenches, I never got hit and am still here, sadder and a lot wiser as to what war is really about.

In spite of all the puffing for war by such people as the high officers in the Army and Navy, especially the retired generals, they still have to show that war is anything but a waste and a delusion, and if enough students keep on striking against war in all countries there won't be any more war because there won't be any suckers to die in trenches.

ONE WHO PAID FOR HIS OWN EDUCATION.

"The Vacant 15 Years."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: David J. Lewis made a great speech in the House on April 16 about the social security bill. The people have found an advocate. Those over 60, the voiceless—must have recognition in these days of economic change.

Capitalism has set a dead line for employment at 45 and Mr. Lewis shows how the Southern slave owner recognized his obligation to care for the slave by giving him work suitable for his age and proper care until death. Will our boastful civilization do less for the men and women of today?

Mark you, the dead line is set at 45, but the old-age pension does not begin until 60. That vacant 15 years of the best in a man's life is going to upset the whole order of progress. The sons of Israel know that civilization really depends on the wisdom and skill of age and experience, and it is so honored.

Valued Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My attention has been drawn to your editorial about the American Academy entitled "Granddad of the Forums." It is very delightful to read it and I appreciate very much its appearance in so important a place.

Misled Music Lover.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a lover of music, I am naturally interested in our symphony orchestra to which I contributed in the "save our symphony" campaign. It is true it was but a mite, but it entailed quite some sacrifice from my meager earnings as a clerk for Uncle Sam.

Now I have been informed from a fairly reliable source that the orchestra will be sustained by "public relief funds." If it is an actual fact that money from Mr. Hopkins will continue the orchestra the public has been sorely misled, and no more funds should be solicited from well-meaning patrons who can ill-afford contributing except in a case of dire necessity. Bore Contest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With all the talk about Public Enemy No. 1, Public Bore No. 1 has pretty much escaped attention. Couldn't you find space to run a contest similar to the one recently held in England for the title of the most tiresome public bore? To make the contest worth while, you might offer as first prize a one-way ticket to the Andaman Islands. I understand communication with the outside world from there is fairly difficult. ROBERT W. BURTON.

Two Birmingham Words

Two words were made in Birmingham that stuck. Some years ago the newspapers there, realizing that fog and smoke frequently annoyed the community, busied themselves with the task of finding a short word, of the kind that headline writers like, that described the evil combination. "Smog" was thought of and adopted, and smog it remains.

Some years ago John Graves, of The Age-Herald, a loving master of the language, was jarred by Birminghamians and Birminghammers, or whatever it was that the Jones Valley boys called themselves in those days. He proposed Birmians. The town ratified his choice, and today Birmian is in universal usage. The Birmingham papers and all the news agencies use it regularly.

It is understood that Alabama's headline writers were neutral in the race for Governor last spring. They were satisfied with all three names—Graves, McCord and Dixon. Two had six letters and one five.

Nearly all headline writers in the country are honorary members of the Liberty League because the word Roosevelt has nine letters in it.

If headline writers had had their way, Bryan would have been elected President three times.

Plainly it would be a mistake for the Republicans to nominate Senator Vandenburg, a 10-letter man. The headline boys always put him in the second deck, which is no place for a Presidential candidate to be.

Uncourageous Anonymity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At this point it is fitting to observe that the great majority of those who have criticized impartial efforts to secure the truth about Mexico have shrouded themselves in the cloak of anonymity. The most recent of these unknown critics has been "Decency." He apparently believes that those who form only one-sixth of the population have no right to engage in the task of lawful petition or to demand an investigation of facts. Would it be possible to conceive a more illiberal, unjust position?

Let it be further observed that none of these defenders of darkness are willing to answer a single question proposed by those who want the facts to come into the light of day. Some of these questions may be repeated. Has "Decency" any defense for the questionnaire which every applicant for public relief must sign in Mexico? Does "Decency" believe that a starving man or woman must equivalently deny his or her faith in order to get food? Does "Decency" believe in the atheistic oath which is required in the public schools of Mexico?

These are two clean-cut, straightforward questions. We challenge any one to discuss these in the open under a real, not an assumed name. FRANCIS E. HICKEY.

Washington, April 19.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent editorial Mr. Raymond Moley, editor of Today, expressed his deep regret regarding the excesses to which official Mexico has carried its religious policy. The present persecution, declared Mr. Moley, "is not a new deal for the people. It is the repetition of the most unlovely deal conceived by the selfishness of arrogant man."

It is regrettable that your recent correspondent, "Decency," has not the manly courage to sign his name to his communication. Mr. Moley is not a Catholic. Mr. Robert Hammond Murray, whose articles in Today on Mexico's war on religion, are attracting widespread attention, is not a Catholic. The American people, of whatever religious affiliation, are deeply concerned about the Mexican government's barbarous and inhuman assault upon the inalienable rights of a defenseless and long-suffering people. The American people are neither deaf nor blind to the cries and sufferings of outraged humanity in Mexico. There will soon be a new deal in Mexico; but it will not come from Canabal's "Red Shirts." JOHN J. O'CONNOR.

The Post Impressionist

"Would Smell As Sweet."

Post Office, Tuesday.

OUR Alexandrine correspondent who used to sign himself "Clerk" has abandoned the habit—under protest. His protest is against that other Alexandrine correspondent who said that nobody who was a clerk would write like Alexander I.

He says—

But we'll start with his protest.

* * *

He protests:

"I am a clerk, in spite of your young man of Alexandria who was at such pains to conceal the fact that his friends think him a monstrous clever fellow. However, since even you object to occupation-signatures, I have chosen the name of 'Maxwell Clerk James.'

"In a world that thinks Thomas Edison and Luther Burbank types of the super-scientist, it is not probable that the more commonplace order—'James Clerk Maxwell'—would be remembered. Not by any save a few stuffy chemists and physicists, anyhow."

* * *

* * *

"This 'Night' business in movie-titles," says he, "is driving me off my chump.

"First there was 'It Happened One Night.' That proved to be a very swell opus and, I imagine, one of the greatest money-makers of all time. But just because of its success, it had to be followed by several merely indifferent—or worse—opera (which me dictionary assures me is the plural of 'opus') all titled after sundown.

* * *

"I have no particular objection to this practice per se. If the colossi of Moviedom wish to cash in, by title imitation, on the success of a rare combination of clever writing, good direction and sympathetic acting, I can at least learn enough from experience to stay away. But I must say that the gaining of the requisite experience is a tax on the digestion.

* * *

"You see, right after 'It happened One Night,' there came along 'One Night of Love.' And one look at that 'One Night'—I mean, at its title on the bill-boards—sent me to a secluded spot to be sick.

("I restrict that verb in the British sense.")

* * *

"Of course, I wouldn't go to see the second 'One Night'—at first. However, with the passing of time, friends whose judgment I could not disregard enticed me into a second-run theater to witness (or hear) the thing. That is, I agreed to give it fifteen minutes.

"The result was, to put it mildly, upsetting.

* * *

"When the first scene showed Miss Moore mooing into a microphone about 'wuuunightuv luuuv,' I had to be restrained in my seat. Then a rapid succession of sure-fire master-works culminated in the aria with which Butterfly breaks our hearts every night at eleven, and I was in a fever of enthusiasm until——

* * *

"Don't you understand? 'Upsetting' is the word. A fly-bitten, imitative title thrust under a work well able to stand on its own merits! My last criticism gone—and me thrown back into the old hit-and-miss era when Cecil (or was it William?) De Mille made a picture-version of 'The Admirable Crichton'—and called it 'Male and Female'!

* * *

"The powers that be in fabulous Hollywood have evolved a powerful syllogism: (1) Both 'One Night of Love' and 'It Happened One Night' were smash hits; (2) but their only apparent common quality was the phrase 'One Night;' (3) therefore every picture with a title embodying this phrase will be a smash hit, too.

* * *

"With tears in my eyes as big as hedge-berries, I ask you to move Mr. Hays to proclaim one last picture, to be made by all the producers massed in a single lump, the title to be "One Night's Nightie-Night'—and the word 'Night' thereafter to be forever proscribed."

* * *

Thus Mr. Clerk.

* * *

We wish he had seen—and heard—Lilian Harvey in "Let's Live Tonight." He might have appreciated, as highly as we did, her performance of a role that is far more (technically) emotional than she usually plays. He would certainly have agreed with us that she would draw bigger houses, gain more applause, by appearing as the heroine of some Zenda-merry romance like "The Azure Rose" or "The Blood of Kings."

* * *

Doubtless Miss Harvey can spare Mr. Clerk's opinion.

* * *

For our part, we rather incline to agree with him in his proposal for one great and forever final "One Night" production. It might be called for the Arabian Nights: "The Thousand and One Nights"—

Royal Dutch Aviators Rush Pacific Service

Manila May Develop Into Aerial Gateway To The Orient As Rivals Push On.

By Vincente Albano Pacis.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila, P. I.

BY sea, Europe came to Manila ahead of America by 378 years; by air, however, the United States has an even chance against the Netherlands. The race to link the Philippines aerially is on, with the finish, according to the contestants, likely to take place next July.

The odds are about even, but the Netherlands has an edge on the physical advantages, the United States on the political, The Dutch, being already aerially established as near as Java, are only 24 flying hours from Manila; the Americans are still some 60 flying hours off. The Netherlands has only Manila for goal; the United States wants Canton for an Eastern terminus without which she may not care to cross the wide Pacific. But the Dutch have made the indispensable test flight from Sourabaya, Java, to Manila, while the Americans are still installing base facilities in Hawaii, Midway, Wake and Guam Islands. America, however, owns the Philippines but the Netherlands does not.

An advantage possessed by both in the same measure is their ownership of the indispensable intermediate bases on the way to Manila. America owns the islands where the Pan-Pacific is now installing facilities for test flights west of Hawaii, and the Netherlands also owns the Balikpapan and Tarakan Islands off Borneo where the trial flight made stops on its way to Manila.

• • • •

THREE Dornier Whal flying boats of the Royal Dutch navy finished the test flight on March 8, making the Sourabaya-Manila distance in 38 hours in four easy stages with stops at Balikpapan, Tarakan, Borneo and Puerto Princesa in Palawan and the Philippines. While Lieut Comdr. W. H. Tetenburg, World War ace and head of the party, stated with some suspicious effort at emphasis that the flight was not in anyway connected with any commercial plans, he frankly admitted that the Knilm, the well-established Royal Dutch line from Holland to Java, is greatly interested in extending its service to the Philippines and will have at its disposal all the facts and findings of his party. He added that the Knilm has plans for the opening of a Sourabaya-Manila line within eight months. As a bargaining point, he declared that the Knilm will not insist on owning the service all the way to Manila, but that a local aviation firm may well carry on to Manila from Puerto Princesa, Palawan.

"I shall be ready," the flight commander stated when his squadron left for the return hop on March 12, "to recommend extension of the Knilm Line. We have found the geographical and the atmosphere conditions on the way ideal for flight. If the Philippine government gives the necessary permission, there is no reason why the Knilm can not start service by next July."

• • • •

IF there is any possibility of a political hitch for the Dutch in the Philippines, there seems also to be some difficulties being encountered by the Pan American in China. The Chinese, it is understood, would prefer to continue the service themselves from Canton to Manila; under such an arrangement, the American transpacific service will have to be linked with Canton or Shanghai directly, whereas, under present plans, Manila will be the aerial gateway to Asia. Two Chinese aviation experts have recently come to Manila avowedly for an investigation of conditions affecting aviation between China and the Philippines.

Mail contracts and the availability of cargo and fares will, of course, enter into the situation.

While for the present the commercial traffic between the Philippines and the Dutch East Indies is much less voluminous than those with the United States, there are indications pointing to a possibility of certain readjustments. For instance, if the projected American-Philippine trade reciprocity fails, and the economic provisions of the independence law take effect, American-Philippine commerce must necessarily shrink in tonnage. On the other hand, even before any noticeable change in American-Philippine economic relations has taken effect, a significant change in Dutch-Philippine trade has already taken place.

• • • •

BECAUSE of the recent blight which has crippled about half of the coconut trees in the islands and the recent typhoons which destroyed still part of the remaining half, the local supply of copra this year—and for several years to come for that matter—has dropped radically with the result that Philippine coconut oil mills have begun to import their raw material from Singapore, Sumatra and Java. The Philippines importing copra—this is almost a startling thing to happen. But some such quirks in the islands' commerce may be expected to happen if efforts being exerted in Washington by Philippine nad American officials to circumvent them fail.

It will, therefore, be interesting to watch the air race to Manila. Europe, through Spain, reached Manila in 1521; the United States came to Manila only in 1899. At this time, however, America, with its giant Clipper already successful in the first leg of the transpacific hop, may not be behind. Lindbergh or Tetenburg—who will be the ultimate aerial hero of the Philippines?

Rappahannock Spellers Hold Match in Week

Schools in Six Counties Join List of Entries in National Bee.

Less than a week remains for Rappahannock County schools to enroll in the national spelling bee. The match, for this county, will be held in Washington High School auditorium next Tuesday at 7:30 p. m., and principals or teachers wishing their pupils to take part must notify The Post at once. Washington and Sperryville, because of their size, will be allowed to send their four best spellers and other schools may send two.

Mayor W. E. Compton will pronounce the words and the judges will be Mrs. Hill O'Bannon, Woodville; Mrs. W. F. Moffet, Washington, and the Rev. Harris Chelf, Flint Hill. Milton C. Hollingsworth, principal of Washington School, who is in charge of arrangements, will preside.

More Schools Enter.

Schools entered yesterday, with the name of the principal or teacher in charge, are:

Fauquier County—Bealeton High, John P. Guy.

King George—Dahlgren, L. H. Settle.

Loudoun—Waterford High, Miss Katherine Bridges.

St. Mary's County—Leonard Hall, Brother Rogatus, C. F. X., A. M., and Hollywood school, Miss Mathilda Croll. The champions from the latter school are John Dean, seventh grade, and Fay Washer, sixth.

Nancy Lee School Champion.

Prince Georges County—Glenn Dale enrolled by Miss Rebekah Gladng, principal, who reports that Nancy Lee will represent the school in the county match.

Vera Knode, sixth grade pupil, will represent Mount Briar in the Washington County match, Charles T. Reese reports.

Extra copies of the word list are available and will be sent on request. They may be obtained by writing Alice Fox Pitts, spelling bee director, The Washington Post.

Three Motorists Hurt In Eldersburg Crash

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., April 22.—Arhur P. Reese, of Westminster, was taken to University Hospital, Baltimore, yesterday afternoon, suffering from head injures, and two members of the family of the Rev. The collision occurred at the intersection of the Westminster-Sykesville road and Liberty road. Mr. Huffman escaped injury, but his wife and their small son received slight lacerations.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

The Weather Vane

A LOT of people were becoming imbued with this Republican optimism until Senator Arthur Capper took to the air Sunday night. For several weeks reports from the Middle West and also the South were to the effect that the Administration was slipping, that pronounced change of sentiment had come about. Visitors to the city from these parts seemed to be of one accord. They shook their heads and gravely said: "Yes, the worm is turning." Democratic scouts were said to have made similar reports to the White House.

BARGERON

But it can't be any serious slipping on the Administration's part, not in view of the remarks of the Senator. He is the country's most outstanding political weather vane. Well, he and Louis Howe. There is no one more sensitive to the currents and trends of the day. Both he and Louis are psychics. When there is the slightest change in the country's temperature they feel it first. Some authorities think Louis is perhaps more psychic than the Senator because he registers the currents through the thick walls of the White House while the Senator, of course, gets around. But the result is the same, the indentation on them, so to speak, is equally pronounced.

• • • •

Now this is not to say that Messrs. Hoover, Fletcher, William Allen White, et al., should lessen their efforts to get their compatriots out of the storm cellar. It does, however, emphasize the pioneer nature of their work. The thousands in this country who look upon the Senator as their barometer will need more convincing, they will have to be worked upon considerably harder. Those who had overcome their cautiousness to the extent of peering out will be inclined to immediately draw their heads back in. There may be something to those optimistic reports but they are not yet strong enough to register upon the Senator and if they are not that strong they are very weak, indeed. Because he records the faintest murmur. He has never failed.

It isn't that the Senator denied the reports, poo-poohed them, or even discussed them in the slightest. The Senator does not make known his barometric readings in this way. It was just in the course of a radio speech that the Senator said:

"The New Deal of today is working the trial and error system on such a large scale that it seems beyond comprehension, but in the long run the American people should learn from these experiments, learn as much from the failures as from its successes."

• • • •

Now a close study of that paragraph reveals a perfect balance between the New Deal and the Republicans. The liquid of the barometer is equally divided. There is neither a tilt toward the Republicans nor the New Dealers. If the reports of the New Deal's slipping are to be taken seriously the liquid would extend at least slightly over to the Republican side.

The impression is that had the tide really turned away from the Administration the paragraph would have read simply "The New Deal of today is working the trial and error system on such a large scale that it seems beyond comprehension." There it would have stopped. That the tide has not changed is indicated by the balancing phrase.

It is discouraging to the Republicans of course, but they should look facts in the face. The Senator can't control his recordings. They record and he reveals them, that's all. And he is never wrong. When the Republicans will have real reason to crow is when that paragraph shows the adjective "reckless" just before "trial and error system" and the balancing phrase of the paragraph is left off. Mr. Roosevelt may as well make ready to move from the White House then.

• • • •

The Republican leaders have frequently sought to tamper with the Senator's periodical recordings. But his instruments while sensitive are resistant to an outside touch. In fair weather and foul they are faithful. It would be of immeasurable worth to the party if the leaders could control them for just once. It would constitute a major upheaval in this country if they could make the Senator exclaim "To hell with the New Deal."

Millions of people would say then: "In spite of Mr. Roosevelt's personality there is really something wrong."

No End of Books

Love Affair A La Mode, In Spite Of What Keats Said About Beaver Hats.

By Theodore Hall.

JUST because he says so well a number of things which need to be said, I want to make a sizable preamble to a novel today by quoting from Aldous Huxley in that most intelligent and exciting of anthologies, "Texts and Pretexts" (Harper, $2.50).

Mr. Huxley puts these comments under the heading of "Love and Literature," and as they run on let their point grow in your mind without any footnotes from me. First of all he quotes from Keats—the method, you see, is an anthology selection, then Mr. Huxley's remarks.

". . . Fools! If some passions high have warmed the world,
If Queens and Soldiers have played deep for hearts,
It is no reason why such agonies
Should be more common than the growth of weeds.
Fools! Make me whole again that weighty pearl
The Queen of Egypt melted, and I'll say
That ye may love in spite of beaver hats."

• • • •

WHEREUPON Mr. Huxley takes the floor: "If it were not for literature, how many people would ever fall in love? Precious few, I should guess . . . The difference between great lovers and (the garden variety) is not a difference between the untaught and the taught; it is a difference between those who have responded whole-heartedly to their erotic education and those whose response is inadequate and forced. The latter, as Keats insists, are by far the more common.

"Let us remember, however, that genuine Antonys and Cleopatras may be more numerous than would at first sight appear. No observer has any means of directly gauging the quality of other people's emotions. He can only infer it from their actions and words . . . As for their words—these are generally of a pretty poor quality. But this does not necessarily mean that the emotions they express are correspondingly poor . . . Keats is surely wrong in supposing that ordinary people—people in beaver hats—cannot love. They can, in spite of the hats, in spite of the atrociously flat and silly love letters which most of them habitually write . . .

"Only on the rarest occasions have I read one which I felt to be intrinsically moving. What follows—to quote one of these rare examples—is not a love letter, but a death letter, a letter written by a man just before he killed himself. The imminence of death leaves most men's style as feebly inexpressive as the burning presence of passion. The poor wretch who wrote these lines was a most exceptional suicide. Here they are:

No wish to die. One of the best of sports, which they all knew. Not in the wrong, the boys will tell you. This b—— at Palmer's Green has sneaked my wife, one of the best in the world; my wife, the first love in the world.

"And that is all. But how moving it is! And, in its way, how beautiful! The rhythm of the sentences is perfect. And those repetitions at the close are managed with what, were the writer a deliberate artist, would be a most exquisite felicity. Reading this letter, we are made to feel that the man who wrote it was something more than an Antony of Brunswick Square—that the passion which made him kill himself was a genuine agony on the tragical scale. But it would be possible while preserving the sense, so to alter the phrasing of this letter that it would seem perfectly commonplace, flat, 'insincere.' We should read it with indifference and, if we thought about its author at all, say that he was a dim little man incapable of anything but a dim little suffering."

Then Mr. Huxley adds this crescendo sentence: "And yet, in spite of beaver hats and bad style, there is such a thing as suicide."

• • • •

JIMMY was a young man in New York with a slim job, and on the verge of losing that. Kay was a girl in New York with no job. "Like her roommates and a great many of her friends, she existed chiefly by 'dates,' when she ate enough to carry her through until next evening when some one else would donate another dinner in exchange for being saved from a pointless and lonely evening. You can live that way if you have to. Breakfast costs almost nothing if you fix it yourself in the house, and the subway takes you anywhere for a nickel, and if you know enough men to date every evening, the only problems are clothes and the rent." And Kay and Jimmy were in love. And all they could do was to have an "affair."

It is to explore that "dim little suffering" of people who know themselves, with a grim smile, to be "just a statistic," that Emily Hahn writes this simple and moving little novel, "Affair" (Bobbs-Merrill, $2). Amid our equivalent for Keats' "beaver hats"—25-cent lunches, a spree at the movies, occasional gin and ginger-ale, stocking runs and wan shirt collars—Kay and Jimmy go on with their love, face the biological consequence, solve it in the oldest and most drastic fashion, come out on the other side with the sickliness of compromise upon them, and find that they have nothing together.

There is no "grand style" in this for Mr. Huxley's fine ear. Miss Hahn (of "Congo Solo" and "With Naked Foot") tells their oh so ordinary tale with clarity and restraint, with a contemporary simplicity like that of putting a nickel in a telephone. What you feel in the story lies all beneath the prosaicness.

For in spite of subways and the white-collar job-line, there are still Kays nad Jimmys, still such things as their love affairs.

Brenizer Firm Given Tiber Sewer Contract

Warren F. Brenizer & Co., 1501 South Capitol street, was low bidder for the contract of lowering that portion of Tiber sewer below Union Square, C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, announced yesterday. The bid was $17,000.

Lowering of the old sewer, which once was Tiber Creek, is necessary to permit planting and landscaping of Union Square, immediately west of the Capitol. Three companies submitted bids.

Will Shakespeare

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

APRIL 23 is sacred to the memory of William Shakespeare, because he was born either on the twenty-second or twenty-third and died on the twenty-third.

Seven years after his death, two of his fellow actors, who had appeared with him in the London theaters, collected 36 of his plays and published them in one tall volume (1623).

This book is called the First Folio. It is the most important book of any kind that has ever appeared in the history of the world, with the one exception of the Bible.

The two actors who prepared this volume for the press should ever be held in grateful remembrance. Their names were Henry Condell and John Hemminge and how fortunate that they did not postpone this undertaking because four years after it was completed Condell died and seven years after came the death of Hemminge.

• • • •

Condell was a joint proprietor in two of the London theaters, acted in many plays by Jonson and others and received as a legacy from Shakespeare a mourning ring. Hemminge was a joint proprietor of the Globe Theater and acted in Shakespeare's "King Henry IV;" it is believed that he played Falstaff.

The First Folio contained 20 plays that had never before appeared in print and it contained all the plays now assigned to Shakespeare, except "Pericles."

The first edition probably was from 500 to 600 copies. About 200 are extant today and only 14 in perfect condition. A good copy is worth $40,000.

The quartos were single editions of the plays, the texts varying greatly in value; some of them were undoubtedly stolen and pirated and some were apparently taken down in shorthand from the players' lips.

• • • •

The Sonnets were first published in one volume in 1609. Only 12 copies are known to exist today, of which one is in the Elizabethan Club at Yale University. A copy was sold in 1919 for $10,500. Some years ago Julia Marlow was kind enough to read some of the Sonnets to us from this first edition.

In the present year two interesting editions of the complete works have appeared. The Oxford Press (New York) has issued a very attractive edition in one volume, printed in good type. And E. P. Dutton & Co. (New York) have the New Temple edition in 40 small volumes, clearly printed, very cheap and edited by M. R. Ridley of Oxford.

Phenomenon Of Long Fascinates Galleries

By Elliott Thurston.

EASTER, egg-rolling and cherry blossoms, all on a fair day, explain the surging crowds in Washington, but they are not enough to account for the mob scene at the Senate wing of the Capitol yesterday. That was due to Huey Long. Except on inauguration day the Senate never draws such a throng as pressed into its corridors and lined its marble stairways yesterday. They pushed and shoved toward their goal—the galleries of limited space. Yet they were patient. Men and women sat for hours on the hard steps while the long lines were motionless. They waited in the crush, ignoring the beauty of the day outside, all for a chance to get into the gallery for sight and sound of the Senator from Louisiana. He pronounces it "Loosey—anna."

Veterans of the Senate whose memories go back to some of the real Titans, the noted orators of other days, shake their heads in wonder at the amazing drawing power of the dictator of Louisiana. He is not a thrilling speaker. He was far from being in his best form yesterday as he returned to his attacks on the New Deal for denying him the public works and other patronage destined for his State. Yet he exerts a strange fascination for the crowds. They were crushed into the galleries yesterday as never before. They invaded even the section usually reserved for the Diplomatic Corps. They sat in the aisles and stood two and three deep in back of the rows of seats. Outside the corridors were so full of milling humans that Senators or others could not get through.

• • • •

AND they were there to see and hear Huey Long. Of that there was no doubt, for when he had ended a ten-minute tirade, to which he was limited under the rules yesterday, and left the chamber the crowds rapidly melted away, only to return with the rush of a tidal wave when it was bruited about that he was returning to the floor for another ten minutes of fireworks. That went on most of the day. What he had to say could not have been especially interesting. It was a rather monotonous attack upon New Deal appointees in Louisiana—all crooks, acording to Long. Except for an occasional phrase hurled at Secretary Ickes, or Secretary Wallace, or Relief Administrator Hopkins, there was no sparkle of wit in the rivers of words.

Even so it is, curiously, a good show. Always vivid, even in dress, Long was as colorful in appearance yesterday as the gayest of Easter eggs—and in manner at least as hard-boiled. He wore a light brown linen suit, double-breasted, ornamented with pearl buttons. His shirt was a deep purple. So were his socks. His necktie was more autumnal than vernal, but its flowered pattern and effects in brown were anything but sombre. Other Senators were dressed in the sort of clothes they have worn for winter days. But Long was abreast of the spring. His shoes were of white buckskin with brown trimmings.

• • • •

HE stands in the narrow space between his front-row desk and the adjoining one, and gesticulating with first one forefinger, then the other upraised, pivots rapidly from the waist, often bent forward with chin outthrust and eyes sweeping a large panorama of the galleries, then fixing for a moment on the Vice President's dias as he puts in the stereotyped, "Mr. President," phrase by which Senators pretend that they are addressing the chair and that the oratory-drenched presiding officer is listening. Long had a flattering senatorial audience yesterday as well as the packed galleries. His colleagues seem to fall under his spell, though not many of them speak to him and none is his real friend. However, of late some of them have taken him up and struck up something approaching friendship with him.

But their impulse appears to be largely curiosity, for this man's undoubted ability to interest the masses holds some secret which they would like to unravel. They, too, are or would like to be showmen. This one lacks some of the familiar tricks of the trade, yet at the moment, anyway, outranks them all. True he speaks in a vernacular familiar to the ordinary ear. He has the common touch. Yet clearly his appeal is emotional, and strangely so, for there is always the suggestion of something inexplicable.

The expressions on the faces of Senate veterans, like Senators Borah or Norris or Robinson, are remarkable as they watch rather than listen to Long. They sat there yesterday, eyes intent upon him. They do not look upon him as a clown. He is too clever for that. There is not contempt or disdain in their eyes, but an unsatisfied curiosity. Nobody has yet succeeded in explaining satisfactorily this political phenomenon, though countless millions of words have been written about him.

• • • •

AND there in the once august United States Senate, on a bright Easter Monday, with the restless life all about the Capitol, the throngs of children rolling eggs on the sloping green lawns, with all the movement and color, the sunshine and fresh air—there on the floor of the Senate stood this strange figure, delivering his tirades, while the masses, deserting the beauty and brilliance outside, pushed and shoved, stood or sat on hard steps, waiting, hour after hour, for a chance to get in to see if not to hear. Urgent legislative affairs, affecting the lives and destinies of millions of Americans, waited while the performance went on. Here was no Webster—nor even a Heflin—but a strange sort of figure on the American political stage, not a masterful orator, nor a clown, capable of drawing record-breaking audiences in the Senate—bigger than Presidents or great orators attract. Perhaps the psychiatrists could explain—the politicians can't.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Believe it or not, there are signs that Herbert Hoover wants to run for the Presidency again. And it isn't as funny as it seems. Herbert's great mistake was that he called a panic a panic and not a social experiment.

• • • •

Things were pretty bad under the engineer, but you could always tell whether it was a blizzard or a revolution.

• • • •

The former President is making one of those old-fashioned swings around the circle, walloping the New Deal and urging a return to fundamentals and the minimum use of initials.

• • • •

There is a growing disposition to attribute his failure to the fact he faced the facts of life, was old-fashioned enough to believe in the balanced budget and made the mistake of assuming the Treasury Department had doors on the safes.

• • • •

The Republicans have come around to the notion that if what the peepul want is strong spending and weak bookkeeping the G. O. P. can do it as well as the Democrats.

• • • •

By the end of another two years, Republicans are saying, the need of expert engineering to get the country back into working order will be so urgent that the country could use two Herbert Hoovers, with a Cabinet made up of insurance adjusters.

• • • •

The people had their troubles under Hoover, admits the Grand Old Party, but you could interpret the signals, locate the ball and get a reasonable idea where the goal posts were, if any.

• • • •

Everybody was in a hole, but Herbert admitted it was a hole and didn't tell 'em it was a new road to Happiness.

• • • •

When the lights went out he called it a period of darkness and not a preview of a more abundant life.

Herb got his start in public life as the hero in a great war, and that's where he may get his resurrection.

If he got Americans safely back to America from Paris, asks the G. O. P., why can't he get them safely back to America from the United States?

What With the Babe and Everything

It begins to look as if the European war would have to be postponed until the end of the baseball season.

Secretary Ickes strikes this department as the best wise-cracker of the Administration. "The trouble with Huey Long," he says, "is that he has halitosis of the intellect."

Electricity in the brain aids thinking, Harvard scientists have demonstrated. But you have only to listen to some of our present-day agitators to realize that a lot of supposed thinkers are still operating on gas.

In an address full of warning against unpreparedness in naval equipment, Brig. Gen. George Richards, U. S. Marine Corps, last night told members of the National Society, Daughters of 1812, that adequate naval forces were vitally necessary in guaranteeing American foreign trade and commerce as well as national security.

Speaking to approximately 500 delegates, here for the forty-third annual council of the organization at the Willard Hotel, Gen. Richards declared that after every war in which the United States has been engaged, the people have been prone to weaken the Navy.

"There is a lack of understanding of the peace-time functions of our Navy," he declared. "The Navy is not merely an instrument of war, but it actually promotes the general economic welfare of our people. The influence of overseas trade upon the prosperity of a great body of our citizens has been too little recognized."

Commerce Safeguards Stressed.

Gen. Richards pointed out that American production greatly exceeds home demands, and that the protection by the Navy of foreign commerce was a vital necessity.

"Without a naval force adequately equipped to safeguard at all times our foreign trade," he said, "our merchantmen would be unsafe in venturing out upon seas ruled by other powers. People in the Mississippi Valley, for instance, can not see how seaboard defense affects their prosperity, yet without an adequate Navy their prosperity would rest on shifting sand."

By special courtesy of the Secretary of the Navy, a model of the Constitution owned by the Navy Department, was on display at the society's clubhouse, 1461 Rhode Island avenue northwest, during the afternoon. Musician H. S. Vaughn, of the United States Navy Band, sounded "assembly" and "call to colors" during the flag ceremony. Historic documents owned by the society were also on display during the afternoon.

Earlier in the day the national board held a business session at the Willard Hotel, when details for work during the coming year were planned and matters of policy decided.

At the evening session the invocation was given by Mrs. Harper Donelson Sheppard, national chaplain. Mme. Cantacuzene-Grant led in a pledge of allegiance to the flag, and Mrs. Charles Thrush sang the "Star-Spangled Banner," accompanied by the United States Marine Band.

James Langford Wharton, New York radio artist, gave several vocal selections, and Lieut. Col. Randolph Coyle, United States Marine Corps, presided at the presentation of State flags. Greetings from the General Society of the War of 1812 were given by George Holden, president of that organization.

At today's morning session, which will begin at 9, reports of the various committees, charter trustees, and national officers will be given. These reports will be continued through the afternoon session which begins at 2, and at 6:30 a reception for the national officers will be given in the Willard.

The high spot of the program will take place tonight.

The grave of Mrs. Francis M. Gibson, one of the earliest members of the Daughters, was marked in Arlington Cemetery yesterday afternoon with an insignia placed on the gravestone by the Andrew Jackson Chapter of the society of New York, with Miss Minnie Wade, president of the New York Society.

Later in the afternoon a mast from the frigate Constitution was dedicated as a flagstaff in front of the national headquarters building.

Guffey, Roosevelt Meet on Coal Bill

Pennsylvanian Is Seeking White House Support.

Accompanying him on a call on the President were Senator Matthew M. Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia; John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and Walter Jones, presidential member of the National Bituminous Coal Code Authority.

Guffey declared after the meeting that he hoped to obtain early consideration for his bill, now that it has been reported, 14-3, by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, and that Senator Neely will handle it on the Senate floor. He would not say if the bill has the President's indorsement.

ident Roosevelt, sat in a White House window and watched the party. He has been dangerously ill for weeks. From where he sat he could not see the presidential family, but could hear the tremendous response given them by the egg rollers.

Until 4:30 p. m. admittance to the egg rolling was restricted to children and accompanying grown-ups. So, sensing an opportunity, hundreds of youngsters auctioned themselves off to adults outside the gates, and got them inside. Companions cost from 5 cents to a quarter.

Harvest for Vendors.

The balloon vendors outside the gates reaped a harvest with their gaudy gas bags, from the sides of which grinned likenesses of popular comic-strip characters. There also were vendors of canes, ice cream and popcorn.

Among the entertainments that amazed the children was a magician who cooked an egg stew in a covered cooker, then drew forth a live, kicking rabbit.

Opinions among the children varied as they went home.

But hers was no minority opinion.

Among the lost was John Kennedy, who announced his father was Representative Kennedy, of New York.

No sooner had the last pair of tiny feet scampered through the iron gates late yesterday than 40 men, armed with rakes and baskets, sadly surveyed what Easter Monday had done to the White House lawn.

'Average' Man Excites Wonder of Crowds.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—Just because he is so "average," Roy L. Gray, of Fort Madison, Iowa, was the center of wondering attention by New York crowds today at the industrial arts exposition.

Gray was selected as the "average man" by a magazine in 1927. He lives in an "average" city in an "average" State, has an "average" family of two children, drives an "average" car, and makes an "average" income from a clothing store he runs with his brother, E. H. Gray.

From an "average" $5 room at the Hotel Roosevelt, selected by his sponsors as "average," Gray wandered over to the exposition. Before going on to Washington tomorrow he will head a consumers' jury of 100, chosen at random, to select the best product in the show from the viewpoint of the "average" buyer.

Probers Named To Sift Affairs At Maryland U.

Student protests against dismissal of several members of the Maryland University faculty yesterday resulted in the nomination of a special committee "to thoroughly investigate and review" affairs at the school.

Appointment of the committee came several hours after a board meeting was called in the home of George M. Shriver, chairman, to review charges against the school president, Dr. Raymond A. Pearson.

Although Mr. Shriver would not reveal the names of the committee members, he said the alumni body presented information which reflects unrest among faculty members.

Mr. Shriver said:

"Evidently much of the dissatisfaction grew out of the question of the reduced compensation, for which it seems the president was held accountable."

Shriver explained the matter, in the last analysis, was the board's responsibility, and that any further reduction in State appropriations for the school would present difficulties which the board and president have been making every effort to avoid.

The committee was appointed at the request of Dr. Pearson to review affairs at the university, its organization, scholastic standing and the extent and character of services being performed and their general effectiveness.

The discharge of several faculty members by Dr. Pearson several months ago led to sharp rebukes in front-page editorials by Marshall Mathias, editor of the school publication, "The Diamondback," and a threatened walkout of a large part of the student body.

Members of the alumni association who appeared before the board were Theodore J. Van Doren and J. W. Chambers, of Washington, and J. Hanson Mitchell, Baltimore.

a former capital, where most of the American and European residents live, were not seriously damaged, the survey disclosed. From the airplane the ravages of fire could be seen in many tumbled villages where oil lamps and primitive lighting devices had been upset by the shocks, causing flames to spread.

It had not been reported that any American or any foreign residents of Formosa suffered injury in the disaster.

Early estimates of property damage ranged from $3,000,000 to twice that amount. The humble character of most of the destroyed dwellings and buildings, many made of mud and grass as they are on the mainland of China, prevented greater damage as counted in money.

Governor General Kenji Nakagawa of Formosa announced that 16,000,000 yen (about $4,560,000) in Japanese government funds was to be made available to the victims under his rule. It was understood that Emperor Hirohito also was to make a donation from the privy purse.

Early official estimates placed the number of homeless at 230,000, and the number of dwellings destroyed at 16,493. At least 20,000 other structures were damaged.

The devastated area extended from Chinchiku City on the north to Taichu City on the south and from the sea coast on the west as far as the mountain ranges where primitive head hunters dwell.

Savages Spared.

Official reports indicated these people, some of them known as "the Green Savages," escaped the most serious effects of the earthquake.

On the broad central plain the shocks opened fissures three and four feet wide across roads and highways and twisted the rails of railroad lines, shattered oil pipe lines, gas mains and water conduits.

With all normal transportation disrupted, make-shift litters and bullock carts were employed to carry the injured to first-aid centers. There was great need for as many doctors as the government could assemble.

A representative of the Tokyo newspaper Asahi who penetrated the center of the stricken district related harrowing accounts of what he saw. Describing what he found left of the town of Naiho, he said:

"Eight hundred houses all crumbled at the first shock. Not one was left standing. Of the town's 5,000 inhabitants, at least 1,000 perished in the ruins, although at nightfall only 200 corpses had been recovered.

"Cries frequently arose from the ruins, showing that living victims were imprisoned beyond immediate help. There were poignant scenes of women and children lying upon the corpses of relatives and weeping.

Doctors Hard at Work.

"Forty army doctors and nurses reached Naiho and worked unceasingly, but still many of the injured could not be attended. Night found thousands of homeless without a single tent, nothing to eat and little to drink."

Another Asahi staff man reported reaching Koryu, where "only two physicians were available to minister to hundreds of injured. I saw many men carrying injured women and children seeking help. Many have gone insane."

Formosa's principal industry, the cultivation of sugar cane, was virtually unscathed, a single bright spot in a picture of devastation. The majority of mills and can fields were outside the affected areas.

The government railways were probably the heaviest losers. Several long and costly tunnels between Chikunan and Taichu were filled with debris. Bridges were shaken from their bases and stretches of the roadbed sunk so deeply that engineers feared it would require months fully to restore traffic.

Zihlman Rites Held by Moose At Cumberland

Nice and State Leaders to Attend Service Today at Silver Spring.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., April 22.—The body of former Representative Frederick N. Zihlman, western Maryland Republican leader and former chairman of the House District Committee, outstanding labor spokesman, lay in state in Moose Hall tonight as fraternal memorial rites were conducted by members of the organization.

Services were conducted by the Rev. George E. Baughman, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Cumberland, of which Zihlman was a member. Associate Judge David A. Robb, of the Allegany County Circuit Court, delivered the eulogy. Gov. Harry W. Nice, State leaders and national and State executives of the Loyal Order of Moose, of which the former Representative was past supreme dictator, will attend additional funeral services at Silver Spring Wednesday morning.

Zihlman will be buried in St. Michael's Cemetery beside his wife, the former Margaret C. Dahl, of Cumberland, who died in 1932.

The labor leader, who served seven consecutive terms in the national House of Representatives, died yesterday at the Cumberland Memorial Hospital from a form of sleeping sickness. He had been ill several months. He was 56 years old.

Zihlman lost his first race for Congress to the Democratic incumbent, David J. Lewis, in 1914. He won the seat in 1916 and served continuously until 1930, when Lewis defeated him.

Dr. Hrdlicka after a study of 150 academy members—100 of whom were of American descent for three generations and 50 of whom were European or recent American descent.

Dr. Hrdlicka's conclusions were that the two groups show a remarkable similarity; that the membership as a whole represents a remarkably normal group above the average of the general population; that both groups show tall stature, that their heads are larger, both absolutely and in relation to stature; that all facial features tend toward reduction; that the groups show absence of pronounced blonds or marked reds, and frequency of dark hair.

Two scientists from the University of Virginia presented a paper purporting to prove that the Milky Way—the galaxy of 30,000,000,000 stars—rotates on an orbit as a single unit. They were Drs. Piet van de Kamp and Alexander N. Vyssotsky.

Their conclusions were the result of a six-year study, made from a Virginia mountain top and involving more than 18,000 precise measurements. They furnish independent proof of the fact that the Milky Way, which includes the earth and the sun, has a celestial orbit on which a round trip takes 200,000,000 years.

Blood Awakens Plants.

Human blood will return sensitiveness to a plant cell, Dr. J. V. Ousterhout, of the Rockefeller Institute, told academy members in another address. This experiment was one in this scientist's search for an unknown substance which is thought to be the principal factor in the response of living things to their environment.

Dr. Ousterhout is working with cells of nitella, a fresh water plant. These cells are large and respond to electrical stimulation in the same manner that animal nerve tissues do.

By soaking the cells in distilled water, Dr. Ousterhout said, they anesthetized, and will not respond to stimuli. This, he believes, is because the water has dissolved out the unknown substance, called "R."

If human blood or adrenaline is added to the water, or if the water itself is concentrated, the cells will quickly "awaken" and once more respond in a normal manner. This means that blood, adrenaline and several other substances contain "R." Whatever "R" is, Dr. Ousterhout said, it must be one of the most vital factors of life. If it is necessary for nervous activity, its absence or deficiency might lead to serious disturbances, he said.

New Disease, Remedy, Found.

Dr. Thomas M. Rivers, of the Rockefeller Institute, told the academy of the discovery of an entirely new disease—an affliction almost identical with spinal meningitis, but caused by a filterable virus rather than meningococci bacteria.

In the past this new disease has probably been mistaken for cerebrospinal meningitis. Dr. Rivers and his associate, Dr. T. F. McNair Scott, of London, isolated the virus from two men, apparently suffering from meningitis. With it they have been able to produce the disease in mice, guinea pigs and monkeys.

In discovering the disease, these two doctors also found a remedy. Through their experiments they learned that serum from the men who were convalescing from the attacks tended to bring quicker recovery to the experimental animals which had been inoculated with the virus.

Nevils to Speak At Last Rites For 2 Teachers

C. E. Roach and Registrar Hurney, of Georgetown Faculty, Dead.

The Rev. W. Coleman Nevils, S. J., president and rector of Georgetown University, will be called upon to deliver sermons today and tomorrow at funeral services for two members of the law school faculty who died within a day of each other.

Prof. Charles Edward Roach, teacher at the school for 30 years, died Saturday night at Georgetown University Hospital, soon after the death of Thomas J. Hurney, registrar of the school, whose funeral is to take place at 9:30 a. m. today from the Immaculate Conception Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

The law school and the District of Columbia Bar Association have appointed honorary pallbearers to serve at each service.

The law school committee, which will attend both services, is composed of the following professors: George E. Hamilton, dean; Justice Jesse C. Adkins, Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, Hugh J. Fegan, assistant dean; Charles A. Keigwin, John E. Laskey, Robert A. Maurer, James A. Toomey and Judge Michael M. Doyle.

Wheatley Heads Committees.

H. Winship Wheatley, president of the District Bar Association, will head the two committees of that association which will attend the funerals. For Mr. Hurney's funeral the committee comprises in addition Frederick Stohlman, Harry R. Gower, Thomas J. Fitzgerald and Victor S. Mersch. For the funeral of Prof. Roach, the pallbearers will include John J. Hamilton, Henry W. Sohon, Leo P. Harlow and Frederick A. Thuee.

Services for Prof. Roach will be held tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. in the Church of the Blessed Sacrament in Chevy Chase, followed by interment in Arlington National Cemetery. During the World War Mr. Roach served as a captain in the Quartermaster Corps. A cousin, the Rev. Edward Roach, will officiate.

Prof. Roach was 61 years old and was born in Washington. He had been ill since last November, but had expected to return to duty in a few days when he suffered a relapse. A blood transfusion failed to save his life.

Graduate of Georgetown.

He was a graduate of Georgetown College in 1895, having been a football player and also an honor student in his classes. He attended the Georgetown law school immediately after his graduation, receiving the degrees of bachelor and master of laws. From 1899 to 1928 he practiced law and at one time was connected with the firm of Hamilton & Hamilton.

In 1905 Mr. Roach was made a part-time professor of law at Georgetown and in 1928 was appointed a full-time professor. During his 30 years as a teacher he was actively connected with many of the law school organizations.

Mr. Roach resided at 301 Montgomery street, Friendship Heights, Md. He is survived by the widow and seven children, one of whom, Charles E. Roach, jr., is in the United States Consular Service in London, England. His other children are Richard Earle, William N., Catherine Elizabeth, Roseanne Louise, Mary Manning and Helen Josephine Roach, all of Washington.

House Rejects Pacific Air-Mail $2,000,000 Aid

Delay May Be Temporary With Plan for Subsidy in Deficiency Bill.

A $2,000,000 subsidy for trans-Pacific air mail was rejected yesterday by the House.

The action delayed, perhaps only temporarily, plans for linking the United States and China via the Pacific skyline trail partly blazed last week in the record-smashing flight of the Pan American Clipper from San Francisco to Honolulu.

Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, tacked the subsidy to the Postoffice-Treasury appropriation bill in the Senate. House conferees, headed by Representative William W. Arnold (Democrat), Illinois, recommended that the House fail to concur in the amendment.

Mrs. Kahn Urges Haste.

Representative Florence P. Kahn (Republican), California, immediately moved acceptance of the amendment.

Arnold argued no investigation had been made by Congress or any department. He said the appropriation could be inserted in a deficiency bill due to be acted on later.

"Congress should have something to say on the matter of a subsidy," he protested.

Mrs. Kahn urged haste. She said the effect of the new route would be felt throughout the country. New York business men, she reported, would like to avail themselves of the proposed air service.

"We started the railroads across the continent with a subsidy," commented Representative Thomas F. Ford (Democrat), California. "We have the chance here to grasp great trade opportunities by starting our planes across the Pacific to the Orient."

Mead Cites Other Nations.

Chairman Mead of the Post Office and Post Roads Committee conceded the appropriation could be voted later in the session, but urged Federal help to Pacific Air Transport.

"The nations of the world," he said, "are engaged in a race for trade in the Orient. Germany with her Zeppelins, Italy and France with their flying boats are not only going into Asia, but are attempting to build up markets in Central and South America.

"The Pan American is the only air line that is decreasing cost to us and increasing revenue in carrying air mail (between the United States and Central and South America) and unless we acquire these rights in the Pacific our competitors will beat us to it.

"In the early days of our country the clipper ship traversed the Seven Seas to the glory of American shipping, and the American clipper of the air is pioneering in flying to China and other parts of the world."

Arnold replied he was "personally favorable" to the proposal, but said he did not want to endanger this country's air future in the Pacific by acting too hurriedly.

The Kahn motion was rejected, 70 to 45. The subsidy amendment then was stricken from the bill on a motion by Arnold without a formal count.

Pacelli, a Vatican Diplomat, Is Dead

Cardinal's Brother Victim of Heart Disease.

Rome, April 22 (AP).—Marquis Francesco Pacelli, 61, one of the leading statesmen of the Holy See, general counselor of the Vatican state and brother of Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, died today from a heart ailment.

Marquis Pacelli was regarded as one of those chiefly responsible for the conclusion of negotiations which ended in the Lateran Treaty of 1929 affirming the sovereign status of the Pope in the Holy See.

In the closing stages of the negotiations, Pacelli served as the sole mediary between Cardinal Gasparri, the late papal secretary of state, and Premier Mussolini who, with Pope Pius, had initiated the efforts at settlement.

By the treaty, the Italian government recognized the complete independence of the Holy See, and Vatican City was formally constituted as sovereign territory. As a reward for his labor, Pacelli received from the Pope the hereditary title of marquis. Three years later, in 1932, he was invested by King Victor Emmanuel with the grand cross of the Order of Saints Maurice and Lazerus.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bedford, Pa., April 22.—An addition of 1,236 acres to the Pennsylvania forests, raising the total area to 1,649,225, has been announced by Secretary Ralph M. Mashore of the Department of Forests and Waters.

The addition consists of unappropriated or vacant land in Bedford County, title to which was held by the Commonwealth because a warrant to survey it had never been asked. The area is located in Southampton Township, just north of the Maryland line, and is part of the Buchanan State Forest, which also includes land in Franklin and Fulton Counties.

This Duck Offers Black Easter Egg

By the Associated Press.

Hornell, N. Y., April 22.—Friends of C. N. Sutton are wondering if his duck was trying to lay Easter eggs.

The duck shattered all traditions by laying black instead of white eggs. And what's more, the black egg was the sixth of its kind.

Sutton plans to let the duck hatch the egg just to see what's in it.

The State Department of Agriculture said this was the first time it had heard of black duck eggs.

Dionne Appeals For New Doctor

Says Quintuplets' Condition Is Serious.

By the Associated Press.

Callander, Ontario, April 22 (AP).—Olivia Dionne, farmer father of the quintuplets, appealed to the Ontario government today to bring in another physician to examine the ailing sisters, asserting their condition was more serious than he was told.

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the country practitioner who has guarded the health of the babies since their birth, said if the guardians wished he would gladly call in another physician.

"If I had ever thought it necessary I would have called in another doctor without waiting for the government to tell me to do it," said Dr. Dafoe. He admitted Marie was a "little bit under the weather," but said the other four were progressing nicely to recovery from head colds which they caught last week. He predicted improvement in Marie, the tiniest of the babies, next week.

More Millions Will Be Sought Today for Ships

House Action Is Slated on Funds to Build 24 New Vessels.

By the Associated Press.

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday completed drafting a bill, to be brought up for floor debate today which would supply more millions to start construction of 24 fighting ships.

The Navy appropriation bill, carrying a total near the half-billion mark, also will provide cash for adding 11,000 tars to the Navy's manpower.

The fund for the new ships was left intact in the bill only after the Administration brought pressure to bear on a sub-committee which wanted to set aside only enough money to lay down an even dozen war vessels in the next fiscal year.

The sub-committee proposed to let the Navy make commitments for the other 12 vessels, but not put out any money for them. There were some hints that this difference of opinion might be carried to the floor.

The exact amount to be provided for ship construction will not be made known until the bill is brought out formally just before the House meets today.

Funds also must be appropriated to carry on construction of some 30 vessels previously laid down.

The Administration has recommended an appropriation of about $490,000,000 for the Navy's needs next year. Reliable reports circulated on Capitol Hill, however, indicated that this had been reduced, but not greatly, by the Appropriations Committee.

A bill to confine construction of Army, Navy and Coast Guard aircraft to American firms having American citizens as employes was drafted yesterday by Representative Brunner (Democrat), New York, for introduction this week.

He said the proposed measure was inspired by information "indicating that American citizen laborers were not getting the preference in all firms in the manufacture of airplanes for Government use."

Two Davis Sisters Wed In New York

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Of interest to Washington society are two weddings which took place in New York yesterday afternoon. The brides were Miss Alida Davis and Miss Patricia Davis, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William Hammatt Davis. The Davises spent last year in Washington when Mr. Davis was serving as a national director of the Compliance Board of the NRA, and have many friends here.

The marriages took place at separate ceremonies performed by the Rev. Charles L. Pardee, D. D., in the Church of the Resurrection. Miss Alida Davis became the bride of Senor Don Alonso Irigoyen, Financial Attache of the Argentine Embassy, and Miss Patricia Davis was married to Mr. William Peters Blanc, son of Mrs. Edward Blanc, of New York, and the late Mr. Blanc.

Miss Alida Davis was married at 4 o'clock. Her sister, who became a bride at 5:30 o'clock, served as maid of honor. Camilla Winship, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Winship, of New Caanan, Conn., was flower girl. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and wore a gown of white chiffon over taffeta, fashioned in Empire lines, the square neckline and the long train being edged with finely pleated chiffon. The veil of white tulle fell from a cap of chiffon and was held in place by a cluster of orange blossoms in the front. She carried a cascade bouquet of Belmont gardenias. The maid of honor and the flower girl wore frocks made similar to that of the bride. They were of pale pink chiffon, and in place of hats they wore wreaths of pink camellias in their hair and carried bouquets of pink roses.

Consul General Best Man.

A small reception for those who attended the wedding took place immediately after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

Miss Patricia Davis and Mr. Blanc were married before the same altar, Senora de Irigoyen acting as matron of honor for her sister. The bridesmaids were Miss Flora Blanc, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Anne Rosen, Miss Alice Otis, Miss Allison Bruere, Miss Jane Perry and Miss Suzanna Wilson, daughter of Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor.

Mr. Langdon Geer, of New York, acted as best man for Mr. Blanc, and the ushers were Mr. Eaton Davis, brother of the bride; Mr. William Kilkullen, Mr. Spalding McCabe, Mr. Willi Pestalozzi, Mr. Cyrus Salzberger and Mr. John Lockwood, all students at Harvard University.

Bride Wears Ivory Satin.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a gown of ivory satin, shirred at the waistline and made with a V neckline trimmed with rare lace. The gown was fashioned with long-fitted sleeves ending in points over the hands, and a long train falling from the waistline. The tulle veil fell from a cap of rose point lace and extended over the satin train. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Senora de Irigoyen wore her bridal gown and exchanged her veil for a wreath of green leaves, and her bouquet for one of feathery greens.

The bridesmaids wore frocks of green net with sashes of darker green taffeta, and wreaths of leaves in their hair. They carried bouquets of green leaves and ferns.

The church was decorated with spring flowers. An aisle formed by white satin ribbons led to the chancel and altar, which was banked with ferns, forsythia and Easter lilies. Large clusters of lilies decorated the chancel rails. The church windows were adorned with Alabama smilax and the pews with bouquets of Easter lilies.

After the second wedding there was a large reception at the home of the bride's parents, after which both young couples left on wedding trips.

Simple Remedy Frees the Skin Of Blemishes

Beauty Specialist Puts Out Medicated Pack After Long Experiments.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IF YOUR complexion isn't what it ought to be by a dozen or more blackheads—here's good news for those of you with acne troubles, and oily, sluggish skin!

No creams, no lotions this time. Nothing intricate nor involved. Just one little simple something you'll love using. It's a delicately perfumed, medicated pack for cleansing the skin, curing acne and uprooting those pestiferous blackheads!

A certain beauty specialist had experimented for a long time with hundreds of preparations, seeking always that one thing which would actually help a bad complexion. One day her grandmother remarked that she couldn't understand so much bother about nothing, that when she was a girl it was considered very simple to rid one's face of blackheads and pimples. Suddenly it occured to our specialist that grandmother might be leading her to the right track. And so it turned out. She was told about certain herbs which were compressed, mixed with a bit of oatmeal, and sewn into little sacks. These sacks were soaked in warm water and then used for cleansing and clearing the skin. They never failed to do their work.

Straightway the beauty specialist sent for the herbs and set about preparing the packs. She could scarcely believe her eyes when she saw how wonderfully they acted on the skin. Feeling that she had found something which would prove of value to every woman, she immediately put them on the market at a price within easy reach of any budget.

They're simply grand little things. Easy to use and sure to have thrilling results. They're sold now in a downtown store, five packs to a box. Each pack may be used three times before its healing properties are exhausted.

With such a remedy on hand, why not resolve here and now that you won't put up a minute longer with blackheads or pimples?

Devon Violet Perfume.

There's something irresistibly springlike and lovely about the dainty scent of Devon violets. This perfume is brought to you in fetching little carafe-shaped, raffia-covered bottles by a certain English company.

You'll love the quaint little bottles for themselves. And you'll simply go into rhapsodies over the perfume. It's one of the lightest of all fragrances and one with the truest flower scent. It's as though it were specially made for whispering taffetas, picture hats and exquisite lace handkerchiefs.

Shampoo in Dual Form.

There's a certain shampoo with a dual personality. It can be used either in powder form or as a liquid, and it's equally good both ways.

It comes in little envelopes, and one holds enough for a thorough cleansing. Such a cleansing as it gives! After you've used it you won't recognize your hair, it will be so glossy and lovely.

Blondes may buy this shampoo prepared especially for them with a bit of camomile added. This aids the hair in retaining its natural color and prevents it from becoming dark and dingy.

Versatile Cleansing Cloth.

The "glad rag" of the season is a versatile little cleansing cloth which will clean anything from silverware to plate glass windows.

You'll need no paste, powder, or liquid polish to use with it as the cloth is sufficient. You simply dampen it and set to. In no time the silver, aluminum, copper gold or glass will look like new. It's a grand little house aid for the maid to use when she's giving the house the spring once-over.

The "glad rag" may be used for polishing if it is not dampened. It's a fine little brightener for mirrors, or kitchen wear or table service.

It only costs 10 cents and lasts forever.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

A hundred years ago it was inconceivable that women would ever talk in public anywhere except at strictly feminine prayer meetings. Today, women are at home before the radio and on political stumps and lecture platforms. Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey (right), has, each week, more invitations to speak than she can accept.

A familiar figure on the lecture platform in the 70's, 80's and 90's, Susan B. Anthony was the most logical and most forceful speaker of "the four giants of the early suffrage movement." The sketch above was taken from Miss Anthony's scrapbook.

Proof that "the skirt has a place on the rostrum" lies in the fact that Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, left, has delivered four important addresses in the last 10 days. She spoke twice over the radio, once on the floor of the House, and once before an audience of 5,000 textile workers in Fall River, Mass.

These 3 Rules Assure Flaky Crust for Pie

Keep Them Tacked Up in a Conspicuous Place in the Kitchen.

By Dorothea Duncan.

TACK UP these infallible rules for flaky pie crust in a conspicuous place above your kitchen work table, and give them more than a casual glance each time you make pastry, just as a reminder of the things to do and the things to leave undone. Here they are: First, use cold ingredients and handle them lightly. Second, cut the shortening into the flour until the pieces are about the size of peas—coarsely cut shortening makes flaky crust. Third, add water cautiously. Sprinkle one teaspoon of cold water over a portion of the mixture and toss lightly with a fork—just enough to make it hold together—then leave it. Add water to another portion and form another damp ball. Continue until all flour is dampened. Be careful not to add too much water or handle pastry more than necessary, for these are common causes of tough pastry. Fourth, chill dough before rolling. Turn dampened balls of dough onto waxed paper, fold paper over, press together and chill.

What Kind of Steak?

Q. Sometime ago I was served a delicious steak. It was neither sirloin nor porterhouse, but it was very tender and apparently baked rather than fried or broiled. The steak was about half-inch thick. Do you know what kind of a steak it was and how it could be prepared?

A. This steak, no doubt, is what many call a chicken-fried steak and is a piece of top-round, which is prepared in the following manner: Have the steak cut one-half inch thick. Pound it well on both sides with a wooden potato masher or mallet. Rub the steak on both sides with flour which has been mixed with a sprinkling of salt and pepper. Sear it quickly on both sides in a little grease in a frying pan. Then cover and place in a moderately low oven (325 degrees F.) for about 20 to 30 minutes or until tender. This type of steak is excellent when served with mushroom or tomato sauce. The pounding tenders the naturally tough fibers of the meat.

What TODAY Means

"Taurus."

IF APRIL 23 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m. and from 10:15 p. m. until midnight.

Failure to control on this date what you recognize to be one of your weaknesses may cause future regrets at a time when you should have nothing to annoy or disturb your mind. If you wish to use good judgment avoid self-indulgence. Egotism in business on this day will produce unsatisfactory results, so the business man, as well as salesman, had better be tactful in what he says, and how he says it.

Enmity will be the outgrowth of intentional slights, so allowing personal dislikes to manifest themselves is likely to be an error.

If a woman and April 23 is your birthday, avoid getting into the habit of taking a back seat when social or business matters are being discussed. It is all very well to be a good listener, providing at the right time you will also show you have the ability to do your share of the talking. To gain advancement in either a social or business way, it is important that you are a little more inclined to take the initiative.

The child born on April 23 usually as soon as it passes through adolescence fulfills its parent's fondest expectations.

If a man and April 23 is your natal day, by being absolutely honest with yourself, you can overcome short comings through striving earnestly. If you do this, your reward should be more than ample.

Review of Pioneers of Platform Recalls the Four Giants of Feminism, Mrs. Stanton, Lucretia Mott, Lucy Stone and Susan Anthony.

Women no longer are content to sit back and be the audience while men blare their voices, wave their arms, and—from an oratorical point of view—"run the country." In Congress, in political campaigns and on the radio, women are becoming increasingly prominent. Are the Portias coming into their own? As orators, have women ever, or will they ever, equal men? This is the first of a series of articles on women public speakers.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHEN THE SOCIAL security bill was recently being discussed in the House of Representatives, the three Congresswomen who took the floor were accorded as much courtesy, attention and personal commendation as any of their male colleagues.

Without resorting to the artifices of oratory, Representative Florence Kahn, of California; Representative Isabella Greenway, of Arizona, and Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, took the stage of the House for brief speeches, stated their ideas with at least as much crispness and clarity as the men who preceded or followed them, and retired to their seats in a thunder of applause.

Within the last few days Representative Rogers made two addresses over the radio regarding Japan's war on United States textile industries. Last Sunday she went by plane to Fall River, Mass., to address 5,000 textile workers on the same subject. Yesterday Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, spoke on the floor of the House regarding hospitals in the District.

"Golden Age" Rivaled.

Not since the "golden age" of Greece—when Aspasia was a familiar figure pleading causes in the Athenian Forum, and Hortensia was the spellbinder of the Roman Senate—have women voiced their opinions in public so often and so effectively as they do today.

"Women will play an increasingly prominent part as public speakers in the coming election," Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said yesterday. With examples set by such outstanding speakers as Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mme. Cantacuzene-Grant, and many others, Mr. Fletcher is confident women will take to the platform in 1936 as never before.

Mrs. James H. Wolfe, head of the women's division, Democratic National Committee, also is sure women public speakers will play an important role in the approaching political fray "because we are already training them to carry on our educational program. Dr. Harriet Elliott, an authority on political science, now is on the Pacific Coast, where she is speaking before crowded houses every day. Before long, we will have many other women in the field."

In America a hundred years ago, a woman expressing herself publicly (except in strictly feminine prayer meetings) seemed beyond the bounds of possibility. Denied the privilege of speaking before "mixed" meetings, women of that day were but silent partners in building the outer temples of thought.

When, in 1836, Sarah Moore Grimke and her sister, Angelina Emily Grimke, began to lecture against slavery before groups of women, both were adjudged "bold females." "The skirt has no place on the rostrum!" cried critics from soap boxes and pulpits.

But this diatribe could have carried no weight a few years later when Amelia Jencks Bloomer became an advocate of the Turkish-trouser outfit. If the skirt had no place on the rostrum, maybe bloomers would get by. Accordingly, Mrs. Bloomer and her friend, Dr. Antoinette Brown appeared in a bifurcated costume before a "mixed" audience to deliver the traditional Fourth of July orations. The result was a sensation—in an age when a sepsation and a scandal were one.

By this time, however, the ice of public speaking was broken for women, once and for all. Soon "female orators," objects of either polite scorn or open ridicule, were invading the platform, on all sides.

One of the pioneers on the stump was Lucretia Mott who became interested in woman suffrage in London where she went with her husband to attend the World's Anti-Slavery Convention.

Later, convinced that women should be free to talk in public, she—with Elizabeth Cady Stanton—called a Woman's Rights Convention to meet in Seneca Falls, N. Y., in 1848.

Worked on Speech 5 Years.

Mrs. Stanton, who as a speaker became more of a star than any of her contemporaries, spent 5 years preparing the speech she delivered at that convention. A self-taught lawyer, she wrote a digest of discriminations against women in the laws of all nations in all ages. When the meeting convened, she was ready. Stepping to the center of the platform, she turned loose on the house a magnetic oration, couched in eloquence and backed by long years of thought and study. The audience was so much impressed that before the meeting closed Mrs. Stanton had passed a charter of woman's rights modeled on the Declaration of Independence.

From then until her death, she was regarded as the "queen and statesman" of the woman's movement. But she was by no means the only important woman orator of her time. There were three other "giants of the woman's movement"—Lucretia Mott, Lucy Stone (of maiden-name fame) and Susan B. Anthony, "The Napoleon of woman suffrage."

In an age when oratory was a major art, three of these "four giants" needed no odds from any man. Lucretia Mott, with a zeal for justice, a command of language, and a sincerity that was unsurpassable, was recognized as the best and most popular of the Hicksite preachers.

Feminine Lucy Stone, with her turned-up nose and generous mouth, her large gray eyes and abundant brown hair, was as eloquent as she was graceful.

Wittiest of the Four.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton could raise an audience to its feet or dissolve it in laughter, for she was the most eloquent, the most charming and the wittiest, of the four.

Susan B. Anthony had neither the beauty nor the eloquence of Mrs. Stanton, whose regular features expressed the contemporary ideal of feminine pulchritude. Tall, with a warmly-curved figure and cameo features touched with severity, Miss Anthony's appearance least matched the standards of loveliness in those times.

In her speaking as in her writing she struggled with a verbosity probably acquired at the Quaker school she attended. Yet when a case had to be argued soundly and by pure logic, her associates chose her. Her wit demonstrated the chary understatement common to New Englanders, she resorted to no dramatic tricks, and she never approached a platform without knowing what she was going to say. By modern standards, when oratory has declined to simplicity of expression, directness of illustration and absence of high-sounding phrases, Miss Anthony would probably be the most effective of any of "the four giants" of the early suffrage movement.

Tomorrow: The great woman orator who said Susan B. Anthony was the torch that illumined her life.

By Mary Haworth.

"Oh, wad some power the giftie gie us
To see oursel's as others see us!
It wad fra monie a blunder free us
—Robert Burns' "To a Louse."

THESE OFT-QUOTED lines of the great Scotch poet provide the perfect keystone for a discussion launched last Friday by a local saleswoman. Signing herself "Jaundiced," she delivered an ironic and somewhat bitter broadside against alleged ill-mannered inconsideration of a majority of well-to-do-women shoppers for those other women who spend their days behind counters in shops and department stores.

* * * *

Like a tidal wave comes the denial and cross-petition of the great shopping public of women, who feel themselves unjustly accused. In phrases of matching irony and bitterness, yet cheerfully striated with wit and humor and even philosophical understanding and acceptance, women are writing in by the dozens to defend themselves from "Jaundiced's" charge.

* * * *

Following is one such letter, and, as space permits from day to day, I shall print the most representative of the others.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am moved to reply to "Jaundiced," as you have so kindly suggested that you would be interested in hearing the woman shopper's side.

Perhaps I have "so-called social standing" (whatever that is!) although I fully realize that social standing, like everything else, is purely relative. I am not Queen Marie, nor yet Mrs. Roosevelt. I do sometimes shop, although unwillingly, as it is such an endurance test, especially in Washington. But I am a native of San Francisco and pine for bracing air and efficient saleswomen. If they are as well-born and well-educated as "the queens of democracy," so much the better.

* * * *

Having always felt a certain zest for life, it seems to me that if I were a saleswoman, I would try with all my heart to be a good one. For instance, if the customer said (as I did today): "I should like to see a printed silk dinner dress, size 20," I should not reply: "Would you like this pale blue lace, Moddom?" (I wonder, by the way, if well-educated persons do ever say "Moddom?") But I replied politely, although wearily, "No, thank you. I asked for printed silk." I really think I was "doing my bit."

* * * *

I do thoroughly believe in the Golden Rule, but it should work both ways. Too many saleswomen in department stores seem bored, indifferent and unfamiliar with their stock. I think if "Jaundiced" and her downtrodden friends would put a little zest and amiability into their work they would find the average customer more than ready to reciprocate. Like so many questions, this question of shopping has two sides.

SHOPPER.

Whey Treatment Cuts Blood Pressure

Effectiveness Is Reported in San Quentin Prison Tests.

Substance Used to Good Effect in Many Gastric Conditions.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

SAMUEL PEPYS, writing in his diary on the 10th of June, 1663, said: "Thence to the whay-house, and drank a great deal of whay, and so by water home."

Years ago whey was used not only as a popular social drink, but was considered to be of great value in all forms of illness, particularly with patients who were thought to have "delicate stomachs." Many of the century old books on medicine describe its use in liver and digestive diseases and in different parts of Germany and Switzerland there were special establishments where chronic diseases of the heart, the kidneys, etc., were treated by the use of ordinary or flavored whey.

Because of its low protein content and its rather high percentage of milk sugar, evaporated whey has been used in recent years with good effect in many gastro-intestinal conditions, and now comes a report from San Quentin prison, California, that indicates that high blood pressure has been markedly reduced in a considerable number of prisoners. One group, confined to the infirmary, consisted of men in the older ages who presented numerous chronic disabilities. Leo L. Stanley, prison physician, points out that members of this group were under identical conditions as to regular hours and similarity of food. Furthermore, they were not influenced by mental or physical strain.

Fifteen of these patients were given a rounded tablespoonful of powdered whey dissolved in water three times a day. Prior to making the test, daily blood pressure readings were taken for several weeks with the result that the average pressure (systolic) for the group was found to be 180. Whey was then administered for a period of three months. Within two weeks after taking it the average systolic pressure had dropped to 165, a week later to 161, then to 156. Subsequently there was a slight increase in the average pressure to 164 but a later drop to 154. Whey was discontinued for six weeks and its absence from the diet was followed by a gradual rise of the average pressure. On resuming its administration for another period of three months the average pressure dropped to 148.

There seems to be no adequate explanation for the drop in blood pressure other than a change in the intestinal reaction with the prevention of absorption of certain toxins formerly present.

In the manufacture of cheese, except for the salvaging of milk sugar, whey for the most part has been a rather useless by-product. The possible beneficial effects of evaporated whey should be further investigated. This substance may be a valuable source of important mineral salts, particularly calcium.

Object—Not Matrimony

By Lillian Barker

THROUGHOUT luncheon, which she and Melvin had at the Plaza, those three words kept coming back to Katrina, "security in marriage." All during his pleadings for an affirmative answer—the answer Rosa Lombardi had counselled her to give. During her silent comparison of this "pleader" with Taz Branson whose object, so far as she was concerned, had never been matrimony while Mel's had never been anything else since they'd first started going together. The difference in those two men! The oppositeness of their intents and purposes!

"Well?" Melvin's gray eyes, after a whole hour of urging, beseeching, entreating were hopefully expectant. "Have you decided, loveliness, in my favor or against me?"

How could she, Katrina demanded of herself and her conscience, have the heart to disappoint him? Hadn't he done everything for her? Wasn't she indebted to him in a thousand ways? And he was so good, so fine, so upstanding, so honorable!

Might as Well Marry.

Besides, what was there to be gained by further vacillation? With Aunt Julia dead . . . with no close flesh-and-blood ties left . . . with Tazewell definitely engaged to that Italian girl, why shouldn't she become engaged, too? To Melvin. Why shouldn't she have—and enjoy—security in marriage?"

After moments of prolonged reasoning and self-persuading Katrina smiling very sweetly, said: "My answer, Mel, is . . . is in your favor."

"You sweet thing!" Melvin's ready right hand, swift as a juggler's reached into his pocket for a white satin jeweller's box which he triumphantly passed across the table. "Hoping for and half expectating that answer," he explained, "I stopped by Tiffany's and bought you a ring. Hurry, open the box, Trina, and tell me how you like it."

It was the next day that Elma Holt rushed breathlessly in to see Katrina.

Elena Was Delighted.

"You lucky, lucky girl, Trina! Engaged to Melvin Edwards! I just got the big news over the phone and here's your little school chum with congratulations! Didn't lose a second . . ."

"The same old excitable, impulsive Ellie. But say, honey, I'm just tickled pink to see you after all these long months." Katrina, helping her visitor off with a mink coat, gave her an affectionate hug. "I'd intended to invite you to lunch tomorrow," she went on, "to meet Mme. Lombardi who just left for the Metropolitan to rehearse 'Traviata.' Since you're here, though, why don't you stay and lunch with me today? You aren't in a hurry, are you?"

"Not a bit. Nothing on till evening. I have a thousand and one things to tell you, too, and you certainly must have at least that many to tell me. So it's a date."

"Swell! Now sit down wherever you like. I'll run to my room with your coat and hat; also, to the kitchen to notify the cook you're staying. But all that won't take more'n a jiffy—or two."

"O. K., darling!"

Sid Had Told Her.

When Trina returned she found her caller curled up in a lounge chair, the personification of comfort, and all primed for a chummy exchange of confidences.

"Suppose, Ellie, you first tell me how you learned of my engagement to Mel. Who phoned you, I mean?"

"Sid. Your fiance, you see, just bursting with the news, dropped by my fiance's studio this morning and 'spilled' it. Then Sidney, amazed and overjoved . . . he always thought you were grand . . . rang me up, repeated it to me . . . said you were at last back in New York and in this penthouse across the park from our house. And did I make tracks for the penthouse? Connie tried to stop me, argued I had no right to burst in on you without phoning. She was afraid you might be busy. But I was so crazy to see you I just took a chance."

"I'm glad you did. I am not busy and it's been such ages since we've been together. How long has it been, really?"

Couldn't Be Angry.

"Months. Since the day you ran out on us. I should never forgive you for taking advantage of my absence like that, Trina." Elena tried to look stern and reproving, without too much success, however. "But I'm big-hearted. Besides, I'm going to Europe for a year at least and I couldn't shove off, could I, angry and cross with my dearest girl friend? That wouldn't be a nice thing to do, would it?"

"I should say it wouldn't, devoted as we've always been to each other." Katrina paused, leaned over, treated herself to the fragrance of a bowl of gardenias on a teakwood stand in front of the canape. "And as for my 'running out,' it was pride, nothing else, that drove me away. But back to you and this European trip you've just sprung on me. When will you leave and with whom?"

"Next Tuesday, with my husband."

"Your husband! You and Sid aren't married—yet?"

To Be Married Soon.

"Not yet. We will be, though, Tuesday morning. Very, very quietly. Then we'll sail on the Mauretania. And," hazel eyes sparkling, "won't we have great times doing the world's most famous museums together? Oh, Trina, I'm in ecstasies over the idea of marrying and living the life of an artist's wife abroad!"

"I can imagine. You and Sid will be so congenial and I'm awfully happy for you, Ellie. You've never loved anybody but each other, have you?"

"Never," with plenty of emphasis. "I'm happy for you, too, kid. You couldn't marry a grander man than Mel Edwards. He's so different from that sheik, Taz Bronson, who seems to have gone in for titles like his snooty sister."

"Then," Katrina interrupted, "you must know about him and the Italian countess."

"Know about them!" in utter disgust. "Who doesn't know about them? They're the talk of the town. Only yesterday Madeleine . . . you remember our maid . . . brought in a newspaper with my breakfast tray. A tabloid, mind you, with a paragraph in the gossip column marked especially for me to read. A whole paragraph, several lines, devoted to Tazewell and the Countess Maria Luisa San Marco—can you tie it?

Told of Romance.

Trina, her cheeks blanching, inquired: "What did the marked paragraph say?

"That, acording to latest reports, Taz and the San Marco girl are off on a Mediterannean cruise with friends and that the columnist's prediction of some time ago was about to be fulfilled. For beyond all doubt wedding bells would soon be ringing in Rome for Tazewell and the countess."

"So—they're off on a cruise?" Why was she trembling so? Katrina asked herself. After the Princess Dell' Aquila's letter to Rosa shouldn't she be shock-proof? If only she had enough money to pay Taz that $625 she owed him before those wedding bells rang! But with all her economizing...and hadn't she put aside every possible penny in order to discharge the obligation?...what did her savings total? Less than $400. Two hundred and twenty-five more to accumulate...$225!

Having considerably allowed Trina time for reflection, Ellie repeated: "Off on a cruise! And did that tabloid stuff about Tazewell burn me up? Recalling the raw deal he'd handed you—I've never known the cause of the split between you, but the fault was his, that's certain—I regretted ever having introduced you to such a deserter."

"You warned me he was a philanderer," exonerated Katrina. "I should've known better than to take such a man seriously. I was just a fool, Elena—the biggest fool in existence."

"I don't agree with you. Not at all, for in spite of my warning Taz Bronson gave every evidence of being cured of his flittings and flirtings and of falling for you hard and permanently. Everybody said so. Then he let you down, trotted off to Italy and got himself engaged to a countess, the title-chaser!" Contempt underscored Ellie's words. It also blazed in her eyes.

"Still," giving vent to her ire, Elena was also trying to console a very sad-faced Trina, "the title-chaser may have done you a good turn at that. For, married to Mel, you'll probably be loads, loads better off than you ever could've been married to Tazewell."

Well meant as was the consolation it brought tears to Katrina's eyes and as she wiped them with a wisp of handkerchief, pulled from the cuff of her black-and-white print dress, Ellie spied the new engagement ring. An octagonal diamond in a platinum setting.

Confidences Exchanged.

The luncheon gong sounded and hostess and guest passed, arm-in-arm, through French doors which opened into the dining-room.

With the exchange of confidences running on unabatedly, with Katrina giving, on demand, "a strict account" of all that had happened to her since her long-time-before flight from the Holt mansion, the afternoon fairly sped away.

"Would you believe it's a quarter past five already?" For the first time since arriving Elena had thought to look at her watch. "I'll have to be toddling. But before I leave, kiddy, do me a big favor, will you? Play and sing for me those same Southern songs you 'wowed' all our guests with last Easter. It'll be 12 months at least before I get a chance to hear you 'tra-la-la' again and you know how nutty I am about your singing."

Trina graciously obliged with the melodies and, winding up with "Suwanee River," she slid around on the piano bench and beheld Rosa Lombardi, of all people, in the doorway.

Rosa Was Pleased.

"Brava, brava, child!" applauded the famous coloratura. And after an introduction to Elena, Rosa—on the bench beside Katrina—enthused on: "You gave me a real treat and a great surprise, child. Standing in the foyer, I heard three of your selections and could hardly believe my ears. Your voice is so uniquely beautiful, so appealing . . . in Italian we'd call it 'molto simpatica' . . . and you put across your Southern folk songs just like a professional. When you sang "Old Black Joe" you actually had me weeping. But what I want to know is why you never let me hear you before. I feel like spanking you for denying me the pleasure."

Ellie, on her feet in a great flurry to go, piped up with: "You have me to thank for 'the pleasure' today, Mme. Lombardi. I begged for the program you just listened to, for our little girl friend is one Southern songbird you have to make sing. Otherwise you'd never hear a chirp out of her."

Mel Had News.

Trina, smiling amusedly, raced to her room for Elena's coat and hat, then accompanied her departiny visitor to the elevator—the same elevator, as it happened, which brought up Melvin Edwards to a dinner engagement.

A moment of greeting, chatting and Ellie was out of sight and Mel, beaming, was dragging Katrina across the hall "to show her something."

The "something turned out to be an eight-room penthouse across the corridor, their "future home," he announced, if Trina thought she would like it.

"Like it!" she exclaimed, as they, following tours and retours through all the rooms stood, for the third time, in the drawing room with its hardwood floor, cream satin panelings and wide windows overlooking Central Park, "I think it's heavenly."

"Fine!" Melvin swept her into his arms and kissed her delightedly. "And now tell me, loveliness . . . I intend to grab the place right away before someone else beats us to it . . . when shall I have the lease dated? In other words, when will you marry me?"

Culbertson on Bridge

With all four hands exposed in what is known as double dummy play, many contracts may seem obvious to our readers and somewhat pointless. However, that is not the way declarer can visualize the holdings of the other three, and therefore every play is a problem.

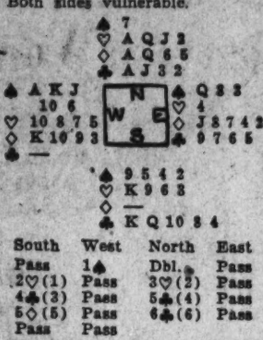
South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



South	West	North	East
Pass	1♠	Dbl.	Pass
2♡(1)	Pass	3♡(2)	Pass
4♣(3)	Pass	5♣(4)	Pass
5◇(5)	Pass	6♣(6)	Pass
Pass	Pass

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

1—In responding to a takeout double, a four-card major suit is preferred to a longer or stronger minor suit.
2—Showing support.
3—South now shows a strong hand and a club suit.
4—North might bid four diamonds at this juncture, but for what purpose? South holds at least nine cards in hearts and clubs. He wants North to confirm the club suit. North risks letting the bidding die at five clubs, and in match-point play four hearts would probably be a more profitable contract. If South is looking for a slam, the risk is worth taking.

The Play.

The club slam is, of course, a laydown. The natural lead is the spade King, which holds, and declarer can make the next twelve tricks against any defense, taking five clubs, four hearts and a diamond and ruffing two spades in the dummy.

A very interesting problem of play arose at one table. South played a contract of five hearts. West opened the spade King and followed with another spade. The question was: can South make his contract?

The contract can be made at double-dummy. North must ruff the second spade with the Jack of hearts. North leads a small club, and if West refuses to trump South will lead a third spade for ruff with the heart deuce. North will cash the Ace of diamonds for the discard of South's last spade, following with the Ace and Queen of triumps, then declarer will lead clubs until West chooses to ruff.

If West trumps the first club lead, depriving South of quick entry, he can do no better than to lead a trump. The deuce is played from dummy, letting South win the trick. South leads a spade for North to ruff, cashes the Ace of trumps, the Ace of diamonds and continues by ruffing himself in with a diamond to cash the King of hearts and pull West's last trump.

Dr. Tabler Slated To Head Maryland Roads Commission

Wilkerson and Luthart Are Expected to Be Named Members.

Everhart, Jacques Due to Get Posts

ThirdConservation Body Appointment May Go to Swepson Earle.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., April 22.—Dr. H. E. Tabler, of Hancock, Md., will be appointed chairman of the Maryland State roads commission this week, it was learned today from an unimpeachable source.

The same source revealed the identity of the other members of the commission, and also the Republican members of the three-man conservation commission. The appointments will be announced by Gov. Harry W. Nice this week.

In addition to Dr. Tabler, the Republicans will be represented on the roads commission by Nice Wilkerson, of Cumberland. Frank Luthart, of Baltimore, will be the Democratic member. Nathan S. Smith, temporary chairman of the commission, will be appointed its chief engineer.

The majority members of the conservation commission will be Dr. David G. Everhart, of Frederick, and Lancelot Jacques, of Smithburg, both Republican leaders. Who the Democratic member will be was not learned, but it is believed likely the post will be offered to Swepson Earle, present conservation commissioner.

Headed County Campaign.

Dr. Tabler, who controls one of the strongest Republican districts in Maryland, directed Gov. Nice's campaign in Washington County in the primary election. He obtained a majority of 9,000 for Nice over U. S. Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough. In the general election, Dr. Tabler assisted the Washington County Republican committee to give Nice a 3,000 majority over Albert C. Ritchie. This majority was about five times as great as the usual Republican majority in the county.

Dr. Tabler will succeed another Nice appointee as chairman of the powerful roads commission. Mr. Smith was appointed by Gov. Nice shortly after taking office. At this time it was announced that the Smith appointment was only temporary, and that Smith would be made chief engineer when a permanent chairman was named.

It is understood that the new members will be sworn in by Gov. Nice personally before May 15. It is though the new conservation commission will also be inducted into office at that time.

Commission Re-established.

The conservation commission was authorized by the Legislature early this year to replace the post of conservation commissioner. Conservation work began with a three-man board in 1915. In 1922 the board was abolished and the work consolidated under one commissioner. The re-establishment of the board was asked by Gov. Nice in his inaugural address, and the bill setting it up was subsequently maneuvered through the Democratic Legislature.

It is understood that each member of the commission will be given charge of some phase of conservation work. One man, it was learned, will handle the game and fresh-water fish activities, while another will take care of the seafood industry, including the highly controversial oyster question. How the commission will organize itself on these lines is not yet known.

The success of the Conservation Commission bill in Annapolis was partially due to the activities of the oyster inspectors, some observers hold. Early in the session a number of oyster dredgers in the upper waters of the Chesapeake Bay were arrested for taking oysters under the minimum legal size of 3 inches. Blame for this fell largely on Mr. Earle.

Oystermen Invaded State House.

A fleet of oyster boats came to Annapolis and swarms of rubber-booted oystermen invaded the State house to ask a reduction of the minimum size to 2½ inches. Representatives of counties bordering on the bay were impressed by the delegation and by the strength developed by them. Led by Senator Harry Phoebus of Somerset County, the oyster-county delegates succeeded in passing several bills favoring the industry.

The animus against Mr. Earle was a powerful influence for the passage of the bill which would decentralize his powers and give them to three men. Consequently the Republican suggestion for the re-establishment of the commission was negotiated through both houses in the face of an overwhelming Democratic majority.

While Mr. Earle is still considered a possible candidate for the Democratic membership, it is thought that E. Lee Lecompte, of Cambridge, may be named. Mr. Lecompte is State game warden and familiar with the problems of conservation in Maryland. Appointment of either Mr. Earle or Mr. Lecompte will carry over into the new Commission some person familiar with the work and difficulties of the present Conservation Department.

Two Maryland Counties Take Health Honors

Kent Is Placed as First in Contest; Washington, Honorable Mention.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 22.—Two Maryland counties —Kent and Washington—placed first and honorable mention in the annual Inter-Chamber Health contest, held under the auspices of the United States Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with the American Public Health Association.

Maryland was the only State in the United States in which two counties in the same State placed in the awards.

Dr. Ralph Beachley, formerly of Hagerstown, is health officer of Kent County, and Dr. W. Ross Cameron, is health officer of Washington County.

The Maryland counties, which have full time health officers, competed in the area which included counties in West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania, North and South Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Delaware and Maryland.

The contest is conducted annually to determine the best public health units in the country, and is for the purpose of eliminating premature deaths and the reduction of economic losses due to unnecessary illness, and seeks to accomplish the purpose by enlisting the interest of business men in public health and to encourage a more unified program by groups interested in promotion of public health.

Washington County won its place for results obtained in communicable disease control, its campaign against diphtheria in which over 10,000 children were immunized with the assistance of the Washington County Medical Society, its campaign against undulent fever and reduction in tuberculosis mortality rate.

Science Body Sets Session For Virginia

National Academy Will Meet in Fall at University.

First Selection Made for Gathering in Southern Area.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 22.—The National Academy of Sciences will hold its fall meeting at the University of Virginia November 18, 19 and 20, it was announced yesterday at the semi-annual session of the academy here.

President W. W. Campbell of the University of California, noted astronomer and president of the academy, in making the announcement called attention to the fact that never in the more than 70 years of the scientific body had a Southern institution or city been designated for a meeting.

The University of Virginia was selected in recognition of its prestige, and also because of its beautiful and historical setting, it was said.

Meets Twice a Year.

The academy meets twice a year. The annual meeting in April is held in Washington and November meetings held elsewhere.

Two astronomers from the University of Virginia, Dr. Piet van de Kamp and Dr. Alexander N. Vyssotsky, yesterday described to the academy how they have, for the first time in the history of astronomy, definitely confirmed the rotation of the Milky Way system from exhaustive studies of the motions of very faint stars.

Other Information Provided.

Making their observations at the Leander McCormick Observatory on Mount Jefferson, Dr. van de Kamp and Dr. Vyssotsky have devoted six years to studying and measuring more than 18,000 stars in the galactic or Milky Way system.

In addition to the discoveries made on the rotation of the galaxy, which has been estimated to rotate once in every 200,000,000 years, the measurements provide valuable information on solar motion, procession, absorption of light in space, and stellar streaming.

Cuts in Services Sought by Rails

Maryland Commission Plans Hearing on 2 Pleas.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 22.—Hearings were planned by the Public Service Commission on applications received today from two railroads for authority to discontinue certain services.

The Emmitsburg Railroad seeks to abandon all passenger services and the Pennsylvania Railroad wants to eliminate two schedules on its Northern Central branch.

The widely protested plan of the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Electric Railway to abandon all services, already set for hearing April 29, was protested again today. The Wellham Building & Loan Association, of Ferndale, asserted the abandonment would work "incalculable hardship" on suburban communities in Anne Arundel County.

James Alvey, general manager of the Emmitsburg Road, a steam line which has operated over a 7½-mile route since 1867, asserted that unless relieved of the expense of its unprofitable passenger services "we can no longer operate the road at all."

Horror House Yields Frame Of a Woman

Accused Doctor Jailed After Calvert (Md.) Mother Vanished.

By the Associated Press.

Lancaster, Pa., April 22.—Grim new discoveries were turned up today in Dr. H. E. Zimmerly's "house or horror" as authorities announced they had found in the eerie farmhouse the broken skeleton of a woman believed to be Gladys Lawson.

Still more bones, teeth, blonde hairs twisted about a bit of wire and a rusty pail containing an acid-burned substance resembling flesh came from the cottage in quiet Mechanics Grove.

Awed residents of the thrifty countryside say they have heard groans and shrieks of horror from what they called the "haunted house."

Form Complete Skeleton.

Today's finds were made a few hours after District Attorney Paul A. Mueller had announced that fragments of bone uncovered in the littered farmhouse formed a virtually complete skeleton and "solved the whereabouts of the body of Gladys Lawson."

Mrs. Lawson, 26, the mother of two children, disappeared March 16 following an operation in the farmhouse. She was a resident of Calvert, Md.

The 67-year-old physician, who served a prison term in 1919 for performing an illegal operation, will not be confronted with the skeleton immediately, Mueller said. He faces two charges of illegal operations and three of violating the narcotic laws.

Search of the strange farm, with its small frame house, its modern tile garage and its faded barn will continue, State police said. Today they photographed the muddy back yard where persistent reports assert other skeletons may be found.

Has Terrified Community.

The village doctor long has terrified the Mechanics Grove community, police said, but there was no complaint against him until he had ordered Mrs. Lawson's relatives off the place with the statement that she had been taken to Lancaster after her recovery. He set the date as March 16.

County detectives broke into the place April 3, finding Mrs. Lawson's clothes and also another patient, 17-year-old Elsie Miller, of Rising Sun, Md., upon whom Zimmerly had performed three operations in surroundings squalid and insanitary.

The doctor, who has defied State police who sought to question him, is held in Lancaster Jail in $10,000 bail.

State police say that, under Pennsylvania law, the only charges that can be made against the physician are those of performing illegal operations.

Richard Parker, handyman of the aged physician, also is held on a narcotics charge, and Blanche Stone, who was Zimmerly's nurse, is at liberty on bail as a material witness.

$11,000 Benefits Paid By AAA at Frederick

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 22.—Checks totaling $11,000, the final payment to farmers who participated in the corn-hog curtailment program, were distributed by Henry R. Shoemaker, county agent, at the courthouse today. Five hundred landlords and tenants were listed in the 368 contracts for 1934. The total amount received in this county, including the present installment, was $72,000. The corn-hog and wheat reduction program combined resulted in more than $300,000 being paid to farmers in this county.

Four hundred and ninety-one contracts have been signed for the corn-hog program for this year.

Sunshine Brings Large Crowds For Garden Week Opening Day

Hostesses at More Than 100 Places Thrown Open to Sightseers Reported Pleased With Receipts for Benefit of State Landmarks.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., April 22.—Sunshine followed the rain of Easter Sunday for the opening of Garden Week in Virginia. Hostesses at more than 100 homes and gardens, thrown open to the public this week, reported that the number of visitors was large.

Permission has been secured through the Garden Club of Virginia for the opening of many privately-owned homes and gardens as well as the historical shrines open at stated times. Local garden clubs have representatives in each of the homes listed in the showing. Proceeds go toward the restoration of publicly-owned historic gardens.

Many Sections Represented.

Almost every portion of Virginia is represented in the list of homes and gardens which may be seen this week. In the Alexandria district are the famous old buildings as Gadsby's Tavern, Wellington, Gunston Hall, and Rippon Lodge.

The Fredericksburg district is particularly well represented with five gardens open. Included are Kenmore, home of Washington's sister; the law office of James Monroe, and the home of Mary Washington.

Stratford, home of the Lee family, is found in the Tidewater group together with Gay Mont, Wakefield, recently built to represent the birthplace of Washington, and Sabine Hall, built in 1730.

A few of the best known places open in the Richmond district are Reveille, Virginia house which was brought from England in its entirety; Wilton, home of the Virginia Randolphs, and St. John's Church.

Restored Town on List.

The James River plantations as well as the restored town of Williamsburg, former colonial capital, are included. The Governor's Palace, capitol building, tavern and homes are among the most interesting in the State. Not far from Williamsburg are the towns of Jamestown, of which only a tower remains, and Yorktown with is caves famed in history and fiction.

Inland are the homes and gardens around Charlottesville, including Monticello, Ash Lawn and the University of Virginia. Lynchburg is the center of a district which will open Sweet Briar, Poplar Forest and many modern gardens. North of Charlottesville is the Orange district with Montpelier, Monticello and Barboursville. The latter district, with hostess from the Dolly Madison Garden Club, was visited by a large number on the first day.

Governor Nice Likes This Plan

The Maryland Chief Executive said he believed the new design for remodeling the mansion at Annapolis, shown above, offered a better balanced and more attractive appearance than an earlier plan. The Governor said he was inclined to adopt the new one unless it drew adverse comment.

Probers Claim Youth Admits Mystery Death

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., April 22.—Baffled for 19 months in their attempt to solve the strange death of Roy Britt, 22, Staunton police announced today Robert D. Harman, 21, had surrendered and made a voluntary statement clearing up the mystery.

Britt's unconscious and badly battered form was found between two tents on the fair grounds midway early in the morning of September 9, 1933. He was taken to a hospital, but died a short time later without regaining consciousness. In the investigation that followed a dozen or more persons were questioned, but each established an alibi. Harman was never questioned in connection with the case and no suspicion was ever attached to him. Walking up to an officer on the street, Harman said, "I killed Roy Britt and want to make a confession. I guess I should have told it long ago."

Harman is in jail here. Prosecuting authorities have not indicated what their next step in the case will be. To reporters Harman made this statement: "I was near the stables in the fair grounds in my car when I saw Britt coming toward me. He was drunk and had been picking on me all day. He jumped on the running board of my car and said he was going to kill me. I opened the door and knocked him off. I started to drive away when he got up and started toward me. I was heading toward the gate. Then he stumbled and fell on my bumper. I stopped and got out and carried him over by the tents where I left him. I didn't know he was hurt badly."

Trail of Pink Petals Plans Are Complete

Dr. Lewis M. Allen Again Will Lead Parade.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., April 22.—The last touch of color has been added to the "trail of the pink petals," feature parade of the second day of the Shenandoah Valley apple blossom festival here May 2-3. The gigantic parade, which will be more than two miles long, will again be led by Dr. Lewis M. Allen as Chief Marshal.

Mlle. Nella Veverka, who will be Queen Shenandoah, and her court of honor will follow in the midst of approximately 1,000 men who will march as her escort in the first division. Officials of the festival and four marshals will be in the division. The marshals are W. A. Baker, Edward C. Goss, George Grim and J. P. Hayley.

More than 20 bands and drum and bugle corps, headed by the Tarentum (Pa.) Drum and Bugle Corps of the American Legion, will be in the parade, in addition to scores of floats. On Gerrard street the parade will halt long enough for the queen and her court to ascend the reviewing stand. Then the march will be continued.

Frederick Mechanic Killed by Car Fumes

Frederick, Md., April 22 (AP).—Howard French, 50-year-old garage mechanic, came to his death by accident, victim of carbon monoxide poisoning, a coroner's jury ruled here today.

French was found early this morning on the floor of the garage where he worked. The body was lying beside a truck, the engine of which was running. French was found by a fellow employe, Thomas E. Keefer. Keefer had been asked to search for French when the latter's wife became worried at his failure to return home last night.

Chesapeake Bank Pays Dividend of $100,657

Baltimore, April 22 (AP).—Creditors of the Chesapeake Bank were mailed 24,000 checks aggregating $100,657 as the third distribution in the bank receivership.

John J. Ghinger, State bank commissioner, said this makes a total of $1,409,199, or 35 per cent, paid to depositors and creditors.

Nice's Wife Discloses Plans For Remodeling of Mansion

Mid-Victorian Motif to Give Way to Cheery, Modern Trend.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 22.—The soft color of old ivory, sunny windows and bright flowers will surround the new executive mansion, when plans of Mrs. Harry W. Nice, wife of the Governor, for its remodeling are carried to completion.

Mrs. Nice sketched her views of the interior and grounds of the new mansion, based on the recent plan that has been prepared by the architect.

The dark-painted woodwork and dull-finished walls of the mid-Victorian era will be eliminated. In its place will be the sunniness of wide windows, unfettered by heavy curtains and the brightness of white and ivory paint. Work on the mansion will begin the early part of June. The building will be transformed into a typical colonial mansion.

New Driveway Planned.

First the grounds will be changed. There will be a formal garden to the west of the house, off the new ballroom. Then the trees, condemned by horticulturists of the University of Maryland, will have been removed and healthy young trees planted.

Mrs. Nice said the parting with the trees was the hardest thing she had to do. But when experts told her that they were in imminent danger of blowing down and would be dead in two years, she consented to their removal.

The present driveway will be torn up and flowers, shrubbery and grass planted. A new drive will be constructed to the northeast of the mansion.

The Governor's office will occupy the northeast wing, with its end wall abutting on Bladen street, across from the Court of Appeals Building. It will be connected with the house with a bright hallway that will be more of a sunporch or small conservatory.

The State ballroom will occupy the opposite wing, and will be connected with the house by another sun parlor. Windows of the ballroom will open on the formal garden.

The room used at present as an office by the Governor will be redecorated and transformed into a private reception room. The small reception room on the other side of the house and the drawing room back of it will remain as now, except the passage to the ballroom will open off the small reception room.

Other Changes.

Underneath the ballroom will be a working conservatory and on the opposite wing a garage.

The bay window effect of the drawing room will remain, as it would be too expensive to change, but the bay window in the state dining room will be taken out. The walls of the state dining room will be taken out. The walls of the dining room will be painted with historical Maryland scenes.

The Hepplewhite furniture in the main floor rooms will be retained, but the Victorian bedroom fittings will be discarded and copies of furniture of the Colonial period substituted.

An entrance from the driveway will be constructed downstairs on the ground floor and it is planned to build two cloak rooms on each side of this entrance for the benefit of guests at state receptions. An inside stairway will be provided.

On the ground floor will be the servants' quarters, laundry, kitchen and storeroom as at present.

On the third floor will be installed three additional bath rooms, convenient to each of the bedrooms, At present there are only two bath rooms, at the back of the mansion and the length of the building from the Governor's apartments.

The first three floors alone will have 40 rooms, counting the baths and pantries.

Doctors Weigh Fees for Care OfIndigentSick

Maryland Faculty Likely to Reverse Stand on State Payment.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., April 22.—The question of whether Maryland doctors shall accept Federal and State fees for care of indigent sick will be discussed and a decision is likely to be reached at the one-hundred-thirty-seventh annual meeting of the Medical Faculty of Maryland, which opens a two-day session here tomorrow.

The faculty went on record at its last meeting as opposing acceptance of these fees, although medical groups in some of the counties have favored acceptance.

The subject will be discussed at Wednesday morning's meeting, first at an open forum, when the present-day medical trend and a review of economic and legislative activities will be discussed by Walter D. Wise. The subject of "American Medicine and the Problem of Public Medicine" will be discussed by Harvey B. Stone, while Maurice Pincoffs will discuss the subject of "Medical Relief in Maryland."

Medical men in adjacent States, including West Virginia, have been receiving Federal and State fees for three years for care of indigent sick.

In Washington County, Md., however, the medical society opposed acceptance of fees and members have been caring for indigent sick themselves in cooperation with the county health department.

Maryland physicians have been apprehensive since Federal and State fees became operative, fearing them a step nearer State medicine. Under the fee plan now in operation, however, a patient has the right to name the physician he or she desires.

Kent Kidnap Case Issue Up Thursday

Virginian Appealing Term in Hastings Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

Fincastle, Va., April 22.—Edward T. Haynes, of Richmond, counsel for Maj. Robert C. Kent in the appeal from his 13-year sentence on a charge of kidnaping, and Commonwealth Attorney Philip Kohen, of Botetourt County, will appear before Judge A. C. Buchanan at Tazewell Thursday to discuss the question of which shall print the record of the case.

Kent was convicted last summer of kidnaping Mrs. Mary J. Hastings from Blue Ridge Springs. At the request of Judge Benjamin Haden, Judge A. C. Buchanan was appointed to hear the case. Since the accused has been granted a writ of error there has been some dispute as to what judge should attend to the appeal preliminaries.

Liquor Trial Jury Chosen; 4 Admit Guilt

Case Opens Tomorrow at Roanoke; 7, Firm File 'Nolo Contendere.'

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., April 22.—A jury to try 23 persons under a blanket indictment charging conspiracy to defraud the Government of the tax on thousands of gallons of liquor allegedly distilled in Franklin County was completed late this afternoon in United States District Court.

Sterling Hutcheson, United States attorney for Eastern Virginia and a special prosecutor in the case, had started to outline the Government's evidence when Judge John Paul ordered adjournment until 9:30 a. m. tomorrow. The court informed the jurors they would not be held together during the lengthy case, after admonishing them to refrain from discussion of it with anyone.

Four of the 34 persons named as conspirators in the indictment entered pleas of guilty, seven persons and a corporation entered pleas of nolo contendere and 23 replied not guilty to the 22-page indictment. Those pleading nolo contendere will be brought before the court at the end of the trial.

Statements Tomorrow.

Opening statements will be made tomorrow by Hutcheson for the Government and by several of the dozen or more attorneys for the defense.

The Government charges a conspiracy existed in Franklin County for several years and that officials of the county accepted protection money, removed blockades to assist rum runners in getting their cargoes over roads and that the sheriff had directed deputies not to serve warrants on liquor law violators.

Tom C. Cundiff, now serving a term in the State Penitentiary imposed in Franklin County Circuit Court, was among the four who pleaded guilty. Cundiff escaped from jail at Rocky Mount and later surrendered to Federal authorities and is said to have offered the Federal investigators information about alleged liquor activities in the county.

Others pleading guilty were former Sheriff D. Wilson Dodges, Leonard Fralin and H. J. Wright.

Pleas of nolo contendere were offered by the Ferrum Mercantile Co., which, the Government charges, supplied raw materials, and by Guy W. Nolen, C. Buford Nolen, Grover L. Martin, Herman Shiveley, Robert P. DeHart, Neck Prillaman and C. C. Greer.

To Face Trial.

Those pleading not guilty were Commonwealth's Attorney Charles Carter Lee, Samuel O. White, an agent of the Federal Alcohol Tax Unit at the time of his indictment; Edgar A. Beckett, former State prohibition agent; David A. Nicholson, former member of the State Legislature; Henry T. Abshire, Will Wray, Howard L. Maxie, Walter (Peg) Hatcher, T. Roosevelt Smith, Willard R. Hodges, John H. Turner, Walter Turner, Claude Shiveley, J. O. Shiveley, Jack Best, Tom Cooper, Leonard Davis, Earle Easter, Wilson Nicholson, Charles Quilliams, Posey Jones, Clifford Martin and C. P. (Cap) Griffith.

About 250 witnesses have been summoned and attorneys for both the Government and the defense stated this afternoon others might be called.

Miss Thornton Weds.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., April 22.—Edwin Harrison and Miss Essie Rosalind Thornton, both of Baltimore, were married at Amherst by the Rev. Lloyd C. Moore, of the Methodist Church. The bride is a daughter of T. E. Thornton, of Buena Vista, who formerly lived in Amherst. They will live in Baltimore.

'The Iron Duke' Offers a Vast Historical Pageant on Screen at the Belasco

George Arliss Offers an Odd Study of Hero

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE IRON DUKE." Gaumont-British picturization of a screen play by H. M. Harwood, starring George Arliss, supported by Gladys Cooper, Dame Edna Terriss, A. E. Mathews, Lesley Wareing, Norma Verden, Peter Gawthorne, Allan Aynesworth, Franklyn Dyall, Edmund Willard, Gibb McLaughlin, Frederick Leister, Gerald Lawrence and Farren Soutar and an ensemble of thousands. Directed by Victor Saville. Reviewed Sunday night.

It is less a personal character sketch of Arthur, Duke of Wellington, that Gaumont-British has undertaken in "The Iron Duke" than a sweeping, historical pageant of one of the most disturbed periods in European history.

Beginning with the Allied Congress in Vienna in 1815—a conclave that was precipitately disrupted by the startling news that Napoleon had escaped from Elba—coming down through the tense days before the Battle of Waterloo, depicting that brief but all-decisive struggle with a thundering realism that is so episodic that it conveys no concrete notion of the trend of battle until the very end, then carrying on through the trying months of 1816, when the avaricious war lords had it in their hearts to tear France to tatters in a sheer passion for plunder, and Wellington found it necessary to pit his power and his wit against the House of Bourbon to preserve the political and economic integrity of the world, "The Iron Duke" deals intelligently, forcefully and, at times, thrillingly, with known facts of history.

Humanizes Character.

In its—or Mr. Arliss'—conception of the true character of the Duke of Wellington it strays far afield from the usually accepted qualities of a man who was a fighter and a statesman, but not popularly believed to be one of the world's greatest sentimentalists and philanderers. Mr. Arliss, in this picture, makes of Wellington a character of oddly contrasted inclinations, humanizing the conqueror of Bonaparte, much as was done with the figure of George Washington in Maxwell Anderson's recent "Valley Forge."

We would be pleased to be able to recommend this as one of Arliss' and the screen's great revivifications of a famous and important figure of history. There is a little too much saccharine sentimentality in the Arliss performance, however, and a little too much consciousness of the requirements of "good theater" on the part of the producers to enable this picture, which opened Saturday at the Belasco, big as it is, to be catalogued among the cinema's achievements that are as authentic as they are ambitious.

There are moments in Mr. Arliss' portrayal of the title role—and it is a long and arduous task—when he falls victim to the same elfish and artifical method of action, expression and inflection that so often overtakes Will Rogers when he goes coy and quaint.

Arliss, as goes without saying, has scenes in "The Iron Duke" that are dramatic, sure and commanding—among them may be mentioned the beginning of the story's romatic trend at the Duchess of Richmond's ball, from which the gaily uniformed officers are forced to slip away a few at a time to march straight into the murderous maelstrom of Waterloo; the picturesque, but not altogether convincing, reproduction of the Duke's behavior on the battlefield and those moments of statesmanship in which he defeats both the Bourbon dynasty's lust for vengeance and all of Europe's greed for territory and monetary reparations.

An Efficient Actor.

In these periods of the play, Arless, although never fulfilling the physical qualifications of a driving, untiring, unconquerable fighting man, is supremely efficient.

The device of stepping up the sound reproduction to almost deafening volume is evidently a trick hit upon to make the heroic characters in the play seem more heroic than any of them is, or was, in actuality. Mr. Arliss last evening roared from the screen as he never has been known to roar before. So did all of the other members of the cast.

There are many fine supporting performances to lend a solid substance to this latest, if not greatest, of the Arliss vehicles. Foremost among them, Gladys Cooper, as the plotting and vengeful niece of weak, vacillating, misled King Louis XVIII of France; Lesley Wareing, as the susceptible Lady Frances Webster, used as a court tool to bring discredit upon Wellington; Norma Varden, as the Duchess of Richmond; Allan Aynesworth, as King Louis; Franklyn Dyall, as Blucher, who almost lost the day at Waterloo for Wellington, and Edmund Willard, as a grim and convincing Marshal Ney, contribute impersonations that are excellently well conceived and executed and perfectly sustained.

Story Has Humor.

The production, as I hope has been intimated, is one of colossal proportions that makes possible the visualization of a story of remarkable comprehensiveness and wealth of detail. The tale, far-flung as it is, is not by any means devoid of humor and those lighter touches that go to make up a rounded mass appeal.

Unfortunately, like so many of the British-made pictures that have found their way to American screens, "The Iron Duke" is lighted with practically complete imperfection! What might have been some gorgeously spectacular scenes are almost totally lost in the deep obscurity of the films impenetrable shadows.

—Silow, But Sure," an animated "Terry-Toon"; "Managed Money," a short juvenile comedy in which the screen's present idol, Shirley Temple, appears with Junior Coughlan, and the new issue of the Pathe News augment a feature in which one can not escape the occasional impression that the "Iron Duke," as a matter of cold fact, was largely made of tinfoil!

Corroborating statements made to this column upon the occasion of the opening in Baltimore recently of her production of John van Druten's new play, "Flowers of the Forest," Ray Henderson, most helpful of the theater's stentors, now makes the definite declaration in writing that Katharine Cornell will present "Romeo and Juliet" on tour next fall in the cities where she has not as yet acted the Shakespeare tragedy. She plans to open her season the middle of October and to appear in Boston and Springfield, Mass.; Hartford and New Haven, Conn.; Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Chicago, possibly followed by 10 or 12 one-night stands in the Midwest and East.

After this tour she will produce her first Ibsen drama, "Rosmersholm," first on the road and then in New York. To the best of my recollection this slightly morbid play has not been representatively acted on a Washington stage since Mrs. Fiske and Her Manhattan Company played it in the Belasco years ago, with Bruce McRae, Fuller Mellish and George Arliss leading the late Mrs. Fiske's supporting cast.

Miss Cornell also is preparing Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra" for the future, but will not be publicly seen in this drama for at least two years. In the meantime, says Mr. Henderson, "Flowers of the Forest" is attracting excellent audiences to the Martin Beck Theater in New York and will be continued there through the spring.

An Ibsen Play Here.

Speaking of Ibsen, for the first time in a number of years, Washington will have an opportunity to view "A Doll's House," when the Studio of Theater Arts presents this former Nazimova triumph in the Wardman Park Theater tomorrow and Wednesday nights. Constance Connor Brown, director of the Studio, also is directing the play, which concerns itself with a European family of 50 years ago.

In the role of Nora, the rebellious wife, will be seen Phoebe Steffey, who has gained prominence locally by her work with the Footlights Club of Maryland University. Harold Stepler will play Torvald Helmer, her husband. Both Mr. Stepler and Betty Rice, who is cast as Mrs. Linden, are well known for their work with the Cue and Curtain Club and the Roadside Theater. James Kelly is cast as the tragic Dr. Rank and Charles A. Bell, who has been seen in many parts with the Pierce Hall Players and the Shakespeare Society, will play Krogstad. The role of the nurse will be taken by Catherine McCord, who earlier in the season scored as the lead in the Studio's presentation of "The Silver Cord."

Margery Rice and Ralph Howenstein will have the other two adult parts, and the three Helmer children will be played by Barbara Shumann, Suzanne Shumann and Marion Westbrook.

She Knew Ibsen.

Incidentally, one of the most interested spectators at the play will be a lady who presented herself at the studio the other day and said she wanted tickets to the production because she knew personally the great Ibsen.

Now a Washingtonian, she spent her childhood in Oslo, which was then Christiania, and was one of a group of children whom Ibsen befriended.

The great Scandinavian dramatist, whom she remembers as "wearing whiskers and a high silk hat," enjoyed playing with the youngsters and would always stop and talk with them as he passed them on the street on their way to school.

I find a note on my desk from Paul E. Huettner, a Washington friend of long standing, reading in part as follows: "My wife and I witnessed 'Four Hours to Kill,' at the Fox, last evening. We were surprised to see our son, John, on the screen in full dress as companion of Mrs. Madison, dressed in white and with hair of the same color. He appears with her between the acts of the play going on within the play. Perhaps you will be interested in my inviting your attention to him, as he is a Washingtonian."

Upon reference to the cast of the film, I find that Mrs. Madison's escort, Stanley, is indeed, John Huettner. Mrs. Madison, if it matters, is the role played by Olive Tell. It is a matter of easy recollection when John lived in Washington with his parents. He went to Hollywood some years ago, if I remember correctly, as an assistant director. His present voice and bearing give promise of a considerable career as an actor. At one time, the name of Huettner was prominent in sandlot baseball. He was one of the best of the local amateur pitchers.

Adds New Specialist.

A new act was added to the George Olsen Revue occupying the stage at Loew's Fox Theater this week, when Alan Gale came down from New York yesterday to contribute a dash of tap dancing and a little burlesque broadcasting to the already wide variety of diversion offered by Mr. Olsen and His Orchestra, assisted by Ethel Shutta and Nita and Jack Carlton.

There is, it seems, no way of telling what this Olsen fellow will do next. I mean, after reviewing his Friday afternoon performance at the Fox and reporting it in these columns, I went back again Saturday night for a portion of his last stage appearance and discovered the routine to be extensively altered.

New Numbers Interpolated.

The band boys were singing new numbers, Miss Shutta was singing new numbers and the instrumentalists were playing new numbers. And now comes Mr. Gale to add his talents to the galaxy.

Apparently the only way to "catch" everything this versatile aggregation does is to attend every performance they give.

Incidentally, the Olsen band act is one of the most handsomely staged offerings of its kind ever to play a Washington stage. The drapes in canary, blue and green are gorgeous and are lent additional effectiveness by particularly clever and artistic lighting.

If Miss Katherine Smith will pardon the intrusion, the judges at Art Godfrey's Saturday evening broadcast from the rose room of the Washington Hotel, selected Yvonne Lewis as the winner among the six amateurs who participated. The judges, Mrs. Lillian Cutlip, Sol Taishoff and your reporter, were unanimous in their choice.

Miss Lewis is an Australian by birth, with a deep, true and melodious contralto voice that seems to me almost as good now as Libby Holman's was the first time I heard her.

Miss Lewis will appear at the last performance Thursday night on the stage at Loew's Fox. After that, she ought to be going places professionally. Picking wasn't so soft Saturday night. Every amateur act presented, had something to commend it.

Aside to That Groundhog.

After all, fella, what's the big idea? Your six weeks were up long ago, so whyn't you behave yourself?

The idea of an Easter like that! And with all those visitors in town!

Is Featured in Saucy New Film

This smiling young woman, peering out from among the costly blue fox, is Claire Dodd, gifted blonde actress on the First National-Warner Brothers lot, who evidently is much pleased by her assignment to an important role in "The Goose and the Gander," the forthcoming picture in which Kay Francis and George Brent are the co-stars. This will probably have something to do with "sauce" for one or the other of them, possibly including even Miss Dodd!

Gayety

"RACKET DEARS." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 17 scenes, with Mike Sachs, Harry Seymour, Cynsy Ryan, Eddie Green, Ray Parsons, Gertrude Mimi Reed, Alice Kennedy, Bubbles Yvonne, Joan Lee and the Carroll Sisters. Book by Gus Fiala; dances routined by Frank Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Any show in which Mike Sachs appears pretty nearly approaches a one-man performance. So it was the last time he was here, and so, again, it is this week, in "Racket Dears."

But good Mr. Sachs is not without active competition this week, in the person of Eddie Green, a colored comic whose particular style and smoothness of action place him at the forefront of his profession. When audible, Mr. Green is extremely funny, but when he does his poker game pantomime, he reaches back to the day of the late Bert Williams.

While these two alone are sufficient to carry the show, Harry Seymour, pint-size "Dutch" comic, is added to the line-up for better than good measure.

The Feminine Phalanx.

The distaff side of the company is amply populated with commendable performers, at the head of whom is Gertrude Mimi Reed, an acrobatic danseuse of rare grace and charm whose several numbers are among the best of their kind ever presented on the stage of Col. Lake's palace of pulchritude.

Jean and Joan—the Carroll Sisters—top the list of strictly display artists with a couple of routines amply justifying their position as the circuit's No. 1 sister act. Bubbles Yvonne and Joan Lee add their charms to the revelatory portion of the program.

Alice Kennedy works many of the sketches as soubrette and sings the special solos. Conny Ryan and Ray Parsons act as the straight men and tenors for the occasion with considerable effect. The Dancing Bryanettes are adequate.

Children's Theater

"ALADDIN AND HIS WONDERFUL LAMP." The Children's Theater of New York presents, as the last of its plays, the comedy-drama in three acts and seven scenes by Clare Tree Major. Settings by Irving Morrow; costumes by Marian DePew. At the National Theater. Reviewed Saturday morning by W. A. Whitney.

The Cast.

Slave of the Ring ..... Arthur Zwerling

Slave of the Lamp ..... Stephen Courtleigh

Following its policy of offering one fairy story in play form, the Children's Theater of New York, Saturday morning closed its 1934-35 season, presenting "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp," dramatized from "The Arabian Nights" by Clare Tree Major, before an almost capacity audience of very responsive and enthusiastic children of all ages.

Staged in seven scenes, with several narrative entr'actes, the play colorfully re-created and made real Scheherezade's tale of the tailor boy who, through the genii of the ring and the lamp, rises to great fortune and marries the princess.

Among others who pleased, James Connerton and John O'Conner played, respectively, the sultan who was quite willing to accept the fabulously valuable presents from Aladdin, and the sneering, slinking villain, Janet Burke tripped acceptably a number of Arabian dance fragments. The others did well by their respective assignments.

The more youthful segment of the audience immensely enjoyed the show—and so did the papas, mamas, and others who attended, for, perhaps for somewhat different reasons. The play, as such, was a creditable dramatization of the story.

Tentative plans for next season include the presentation of "Robin Hood," "Heidi," "Beauty and the Beast," and three others not yet selected.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

With European centers closed on account of the religious holiday, foreign exchanges were quiet and steady yesterday.

In New York the British pound sterling advanced ¼ of a cent to $4.85¾. French francs were .00¼ of a cent higher at 6.59¼, and other gold currencies were unchanged to a trifle higher.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, April 22 (AP). (U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—A few buyers recently showed a little keener interest in supplies of wool on the Boston market. They made bids under recent selling prices, but were unable to secure any sizable quantities of wool at their offers and consequently paid prices fully up to current quotations. A large part of the demand was on average French combing 64s and finer territory wools which sold in original bags at 58@60 cents scoured basis, and on short French combing and clothing lines at 55@57 cents.

GRETA GARBO is now working in "Anna Karenina," and despite the special policeman at the sound stage door I managed to get on the set and watch Greta. It was a ballroom sequence and Garbo and Frederic March are supposed to dance the Russian mazurka. Garbo looked fine in an evening gown of the period; she seemed more content than when I saw her working in "The Painted Veil." Perhaps she believes this a better picture . . . There were hundreds of extras on the set. It was immediately after lunch. Garbo drove up to the sound stage in a studio car with her colored maid. Walberg Checks Nats' Ninth-Inning Rally as Red Sox Win, 4-2

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

RIGHT in the face of the American League standings which show the Nats in undisputed possession of sixth place, this department makes so bold as to say the situation is encouraging. All of which calls for an explanation in view of the Nats' three consecutive defeats by the Red Sox which leaves them with the unimpressive record of two victories in their first five games of the season, but I am not going into this thing unprepared.

POVICH.

You may have noticed that the Nats' chief drawback thus far has been the team's hitting. In five games the Washington club has compiled only 16 runs. In the last three games with the Red Sox they were held to an average of two runs per game. There is no encouragement there.

But Manager Bucky Harris can take solace, however, in what his pitchers have accomplished. His pitching which he cheerfully admitted was his chief worry, has not been too bad, despite the fact that no Washington pitcher has lasted more than eight innings. There are definite signs that Earl Whitehill, Bump Hadley and Bob Burke are rounding to form. The average of five runs per game allowed by the Nats' pitchers is not alarming at this season of the year.

Unless the signs are awry, Harris' pitching is better than he dared to hope. Allowing for improvement with warmer weather and more work, Harris may find his pitching worries gone, which leaves matters strictly up to the hitters. And, what has happened to the contrary, notwithstanding, the Nats are a hitting ball club. The irrefutable law of averages says so. When the club starts to hit, as it undoubtedly will, the Nats will begin to climb.

BUCKY HARRIS demonstrated yesterday that he is not content to wait for the breaks. Irked by the failure of the team to hit consistently, he shuffled his batting order so violently only Heinie Manush, Lyn Lary and the pitcher hit in their accustomed positions. Johnny Stone was demoted from the clean-up role to sixth and Joe Kuhel, who had driven in more runs than any other fellow, was promoted to fourth place.

The only factor that kept Jake Powell in the line-up at all yesterday was Fred Schulte's leg injury. Powell's hitting has not been satisfactory to Harris, as his .190 average attests. Harris remembers the veteran Schulte for his spring hitting proclivities and unless Powell reforms, Schulte will regain the job he lost to the former Washington sandlotter in Biloxi.

Harris has hinted, too, that he will not trifle with any of his veteran pitchers who fail to produce. Lefty Pettit, Ed Linke and Henry Coppola are going to be shoved into starting roles at the first sign of consistent inconsistency by either Whitehill, Hadley, Burke or Weaver.

Harris has satisfied himself completely on one point, however. Cliff Bolton can catch for the Nats as long as the team needs a .300 hitter. With every succeeding game little Bolton is manifesting that he has graduated to the ranks of the regulars with honors. His receiving has left little to be desired, he has tagged all runners at the plate with deftness and surety and the only men who stole a base on him had a big lead on the pitcher.

THE Nats entrain this morning for a 25-game jaunt through the league with Philadelphia as the first point of call. They meet every club in the circuit in a three-game series with the exception of Cleveland, where the Indians will be hosts in four games. The Washington club is not scheduled to appear again on native soil until May 16.

Their trip takes them through the East before they head West. In succession they meet the Athletics, the Red Sox and the Yankees. Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit and Cleveland follow on the schedule. With the league seemingly better balanced than in recent years, it behooves the Nats to suffer few lapses against any club.

At this season of the year when the pitchers are supposed to be ahead of the hitters, the Red Sox and Indians are making capital on their brilliant hurling staffs. The Yankees, with a pitching staff rated second only to Cleveland's, are being handicapped by weak hitting, as are the Nats.

A poor road club during the regime of Walter Johnson, the Nats underwent a sensational reversal of form under Manager Joe Cronin two years ago. Last year they were no worse on the road than at home. They could hardly be. But, under Bucky Harris in 1924 and 1925, the Nats won two pennants chiefly by the victories on the road.

Ruth to Return to New York Today, Against Terry's Giants

By Jimmy Powers.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Note to Babe Ruth—Welcome to our city, kid . . . We want to take the liberty to slug out these few lines on our typewriter to tell you how glad we are to see you back in town even if your monkey suit has the enemy lettering . . . We are writing this on behalf of the New York fans . . . We know they feel this way and we are proud to have this chance to represent them . . . We hope you slap that apple into those right field stands tomorrow afternoon . . .

If you don't we will still be rooting for you . . . Single, home run, strike out or error, we're for you, you big mugg, and when you step up to that rubber dish in the first inning we've got a lot of hollers deep down in our chest all saved up to let loose . . . Kid, we're warning you, pull your cap down tight because if you don't the cheers will blast it clean off your noodle . . .

Phil Cavaretta, subbing for Charlie Grimm at first base for the Cubs, is only 17. . . . The 1935 base-stealing championship of the American League lies between Jo-Jo White of the Tigers (he has perfected a whirlwind dash and fade away hook) and Bill Werber, of the Red Sox (he specializes in a walking start, timing himself to break into a run to get the jump on the pitcher) . . . Strangler Lewis now wears a daily gardenia . . .

Schoolboy Rowe and Wes Ferrell, copying Diz Dean's '34 stunt of "wishing" themselves into victories, each predicts 25 . . . Diz drew 28,000 into Forbes Field Sunday and now Sam Breadon, his boss, will have no alibi for turning down a raise even if he fails to cop 30 . . . Manager Bill Terry asked a certain Yankee what Ruth's "weakness" was and was curtly told "Find out for yourself, you such and such!" Bill grinned and went to Manager Joe McCarthy's pal, Art Fletcher, who tipped off the Giant board of strategy . . .

Dolph Camilli bats from an open golf stance which explains his sensational powdering of that little whit rock . . . Walter Kozak, the Pomonok sensation who came a cropper at the Masters' tournament by three putting four greens, has now purchased 17 putters.

Brother Anselmo, of Manhattan, has booked his crew for a trip to Marietta, Ohio, June 1 (Centennial Regatta) and Halifax, Nova Scotia, July 15 (Sea Rodeo) . . . Johnny Forsman, winged-foot finalist, sails Friday to play in the British Amateur . . . Grant Powers, who hasn't been wrong since John L. Sullivan fought in prelims, thinks Tony Canzoneri's legs and wind are gone and that Lou Ambers will win . . . Promoter Mike Jacobs is selling tickets only for the Carnera-Louis go . . .

The Ross-McLarnin thing is a mild flopperoo, but there's still time, eh, Mike? . . . Col. John Reed Kilpatrick is the gent responsible for the move which permitted the hockey play-offs to come to New York . . . He induced pals with the circus to delay New York opening . . . Marty Brown, old lightweight whose last bout was with Mike Gibbons, died in Miami last week . . . Marty retired from the Brooklyn Fire Department seven years ago . . .

Are they going to take Patsy Haley and Kid McPartland out of camphor for the outdoor bouts? . . . Photographers have warned Gen. John Phelan that they will shoot all politicians, public enemies and similar bagmen who enter Deadhead's Ditch, the new super-super working press section at New York ringsides . . . Dumb Dan Morgan picks Braddock over Baer . . . Dan had 17 straight winners last year . . . They call Ellsworth Dahlgren, Joe Cronin's new first baseman, "Sis," because of that double-barrelled handle.

Boy Misses Warning, Is Killed by Javelin

Bowling Green, Ky., April 22 (AP).—J. C. Justice, 20, freshman student, was struck in the chest by a javelin and fatally wounded late today at Western Kentucky State Teachers College athletic field.

The youth, a candidate for the mile event on the freshman team, failed to hear in time the warning shouts of Clayton Hood, a junior, who had thrown the javelin in practice. Robert Bills, another student, who was crossing the field with Justice, jumped back in time to escape the javelin, which went 120 feet.

Boston, April 22 (AP).—The management of the Boston National League club today announced Frank Garrity, catcher, had been sent on option to the Albany club of the International League.

Wes Ferrell's 4 Hits Aid Boston

By Shirley Povich.

THE Nats accumulated their third straight defeat yesterday despite Manager Bucky Harris' attempt to disguise his club with a new batting order. The Red Sox recognized 'em as the same easy prey of the week-end and Joe Cronin's team slapped a 4-2 defeat on his father-in-law's ball club.

There was some doubt about it, however, in the eighth and ninth innings and the pessimistic fans who had started for the exits, conceding Boston's victory, were brought up sharply by rumblings of a Washington rally that threatened to tie the score.

Wes Ferrell, who had permitted the Nats only a single run in the first seven innings while the Red Sox compiled a 3-1 lead, encountered difficulties in the eighth when the Nats scored their second run and had the tying runs on base but he survived that inning only to run into another storm in the ninth which he failed to weather.

Fly Badly Muffed.

The Nats found themselves back in the ball game in the ninth, despite themselves. With one out, Julius Solters, in left field, made a grammar school muff of Jake Powell's long fly and it was a two-base error. When Pinch Hitter Fred Sington batted for Lary and walked, the Nats again had the tying run on base.

At this point, old Max Bishop, consigned to the has-beens by expert opinion last year as a result of failing legs, saved the ball game for Boston with a cat-like grab of Pinch Hitter Jack Redmond's scorching grounder between first and second base. Redmond was making his big league debut and his wallop appeared to be labeled hit from the moment it cracked off the bat, but Bishop scrambled to his left with new-found youth and converted it into a put-out at first.

Joe Cronin deduced, however, that Ferrell was losing his effectiveness and out of the bull pen shuffled the tall figure of Rube Walberg to pitch to Buddy Myer. Powell was on third and Pinch-Runner Bluege on second and a single by Myer would have tied the score, but after Myer had worked the pitcher for a 3-1 count, Walberg walked him as a precautionary measure.

Foul Stops Game.

Thus, with the winning run on first base, the issue was strictly up to Cecil Travis, who met it with one of the highest pop fouls to Bill Werber that Griffith Stadium has ever seen. It was the end.

In defeat, Earl Whitehill set a new endurance record for Washington pitchers this season, lasting through the eighth inning, but the three runs he permitted the Red Sox sufficed Ferrell and Walberg.

Wes Ferrell was no drawback to the Red Sox offensively, either. All he did at bat was to crack out four consecutive hits, one a double, one a triple, and figure in half of Boston's runs.

Whitehill and Ferrell were locked in a scoreless duel for four innings with double plays by each club helping the pitchers over the rough spots, but the Sox penetrated Whitehill's service in the fifth.

With two out, Wes Ferrell started it all in the fifth inning with a long double to left center. He had a 1-0 lead when Max Bishop's single through the box brought him home.

The Sox launched their most

Lary and Myer Collaborate on Brilliant Double Play

Tigers Blanked By Tribe, 5-0; Hudlin Stars

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, April 22.—The Detroit Tigers' inability to strike a hitting stride carried on into the final game of the series with Cleveland today as the Indians turned back the American League champions, 5 to 0.

Willis Hudlin was in fine form, holding the Tigers to three hits, two of which came in the seventh inning when Mickey Cochrane's men made their only serious threat, only to have a double play bring the budding rally to an abrupt halt.

Tommy Bridges, who pitched one of the two games the champions have won this season, was the victim of the Indians' 12-hit offensive. One of the blows was a home run by Joe Vosmik with two men on the bases in the third inning.

Berger Starts Rally.

Vosmik's circuit drive climaxed a five-hit, four-run attack. Bozie Berger opened with a double and in succession Myatt and Hudlin lashed out singles, the former's blow scoring the Indians' second baseman. After Hughes had fanned, Vosmik put the ball over the left field fence, scoring Myatt and Hudlin.

With the Tigers going hitless for the first five innings, Bridges settled down and kept the Indians away from the plate until the eighth. Then a double by Trosky and Hale's single accounted for the final run of the game.

Chisox Are Defeated by Bunched Bingles.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 22.—Zeke Bonura, Chicago first baseman, drove out two home runs today, but the St. Louis Browns bunched their hits to take the odd game of their series with the White Sox, 6 to 5, before a slim crowd of 1,000.

Bonura's circuit drives in the first and third innings brought in all the Chicago runs and sent Dick Coffman, St. Louis hurler, to the showers early.

Garden Deal Is Seen In Mike Jacobs' Hint

By Edward J. Neil.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Round one: Mike Jacobs, ticket broker turned fight promoter and already boasting two outdoor plums, the Louis-Carnera and Ross-McLarnin fights, promises an "important announcement" this week that has everyone, including Madison Square Garden, guessing.

One hot tip is that Mike, whose money backed Tex Rickard before the Garden ever was built, has arranged a deal whereby he will take over the boxing concession at the Garden next winter on a flat rental, percentage-plus basis. The Garden is known to be listening to offers.

Other surmises were that Jacobs had found some other indoor arena for indoor fights, and that he had come to an agreement with Max Baer for a heavyweight title defense in September against the winner of the Joe Louis-Primo Carnera match.

Braddock in Hiding.

Round two: Jimmy Braddock, who gets his heavyweight title chance against Baer here in June, slipped off to a secret rendezvous in the Catskill Mountains today to chop wood and rough it outdoors for three weeks. By the time he gets back his training camp will have been selected, probably in some other mountain retreat.

Round three: Max Baer, after two Western tune-ups this week, heads East but not, as might be expected, to settle down to preparations for the Braddock match. He will start a 26-week radio broadcast, which will go on through the entire training period for the Braddock duel, and after. He probably will train five weeks at Asbury Park, N. J.

Baer Is Rated 5 to 1.

Round four: First unofficial odds on Baer and Braddock were worked out by a squad of experts dodging raindrops in the soft chairs of the Garden offices, and they're painful to the challenger. The experts figure Baer should be a 5-to-1 favorite, but no bookmaker has offered that as yet. Few modern challengers have been held so lightly.

The experts agreed that Louis, the Negro sensation, should chop Carnera down within six rounds and figure him a 3-to-1 favorite. For the lightweight title match between Lew Ambers and Tony Canzoneri, May 10, the congress guesses 2 to 1 on Ambers and calls the third Ross-McLarnin battle an even-money affair.

$200,000 Is Estimate.

Round five: It was voted unanimously that Louis and Carnera will attract at least double the gate for the Baer-Braddock match, the consensus on the latter bringing forth an average estimate of $200,000. Such sums haven't been discussed with such freedom in heavyweight circles for several years.

Sixth and last round: Jimmy Johnston, who got away from all this by taking a cruise to Bermuda, gets back tomorrow to start worrying about his Ambers-Canzoneri fight May 10, a subject which has his assistant worriers in a lather during his absence.

Canzoneri boxes a tough puncher, Eddie Zivic, one of the many Zivic boys, in Pittsburgh Thursday. Zivic, with nine knockouts in his last 15 fights, may not beat Tony, but if he cuts him so the wounds couldn't heal by May 10 the Garden is in quite a spot.

Ruth, Wilson Have Run-in; Uninjured

Hack Trips Over Bambino's Leg; Babe Helps Him From Field.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 22.—Babe Ruth and Hack Wilson tangled at first base during an exhibition game today, and Ruth limped off the field supporting the former National League home run king.

During the last half of the first, Wilson, now playing with the Albany Senators, grounded out to short. On the throw to first base, Hack tripped over Ruth's leg and turned a complete somersault.

Ruth limped over to him as fast as he could, inquired if he was hurt, and assisted him from the field. Later both returned to the game. The Babe had his left foot on the bag, and Wilson tripped over the same leg that developed lameness and caused the Babe trouble in the Boston-Brooklyn game at Boston Saturday.

Utility Player Dies.

While the game was in progress, members of the Albany Club received word of the death of Malcolm A. Pickett, second-string first baseman and utility infielder. Pickett died in a hospital after an illness of five days.

Pickett, who appeared to be one of the best-conditioned members of the Albany Club at the spring training camp in Gulfport, Miss., this year, was married just before going to the spring base. Mrs. Pickett is in Albany. Pickett's home was in Montgomery, Ala.

Yankees, Without Ruth, Outdraw Ruth's Braves

In six championship games since the 1935 major league baseball season opened last Tuesday, the Yankees have played to 107,611 fans—good for an average of approximately 18,000 fans per game.

Johnson, Unworried by Hitting, Hails Hurlers as Best in Loop

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, April 22.—Once the Cleveland Indians find their batting eyes, Manager Walter Johnson said confidently today, they are going to make things mighty uncomfortable for every other club in the American League.

The "Big Train" isn't at all surprised at the performances of three members of his mound staff during the first few days of the season. Mel Harder won a 14-inning duel with Buck Newsom, of St. Louis, on the opening day, and then Oral Hildebrand and Monte Pearson performed brilliantly over the week-end in extra-inning contests against Detroit.

"I got 'em in shape down South and I think they will continue their work and become the best hurling staff in the league," Johnson said. "Of course, we haven't been hitting, but that doesn't worry me. When the boys start finding their batting eyes and giving the pitchers some help, we are going to win a lot of ball games. I believe we have a fine club this year—a club that will develop into a great outfit within a short time."

Asked what he thought of Roy Hughes, playing shortstop in place of Bill Knickerbocker, forced out in the spring training season by an attack of appendicitis, Johnson said:

"I don't care whether Hughes or Knickerbocker is playing short for us. Hughes is a great natural ball player, and so is Louis Berger, at second. Both are playing in the majors for the first time and both are making good.

"We've got a fine reserve this

Navy and Yale Crews Clash On May 18

Middies Accept Cornell's Bid to Vie in Events at Ithaca, N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Navy and Yale, leading contenders for the intercollegiate rowing supremacy of the East, will meet for the first time in a regular season regratta on May 18.

The occasion will be the Carnegie Cup race on Cayuga Lake at Ithaca, N. Y.—the feature of Cornell University's annual "spring day" celebration.

The United States Naval Academy today accepted the invitation of Cornell to send the midshipmen's varsity crew to Ithaca for the regatta to row against the senior eights of Yale, Cornell and Princeton.

Stock Is Boosted.

Navy, by virtue of a sweeping victory over Columbia in a three-race program last Saturday, already is being hailed as the East's "best bet" to recapture the Poughkeepsie championship from the West.

Navy was the first Eastern crew to finish in the four-mile regatta on the Hudson River last year after California and Washington.

Yale's smooth and powerful varsity broke the Worcester, Mass., course record in covering the Henley distance of a mile and five-sixteenths in defeating Massachusetts Institute of Technology last Saturday and continued its unbeaten record of 1934.

Hubbell Wins, 8-1; Phillies Get 4 Hits

Camilli's Fifth Home Run of Year Is Futile.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 22.—With Carl Hubbell hurling 4-hit ball for his second victory of the season, the New York Giants let loose a 15-hit attack today to defeat the Phillies, 8 to 1, and get an even break in the 4-game series.

Dolph Camilli, the Phils' young first baseman, cheated the Giants' screw-ball ace out of a shut out when he hammered the ball over the right-field wall in the fourth for his fifth home run of the season. He also connected with a single. "Blody" Ryan, a former Giant, and John Moore hit the other two safeties.

Bernard Wins Fight From Doherty

Miller Beats Manners on Technical K. O. in 6th Round.

By Bill McCormick.

ROGER BERNARD, an aggressive, heavy-punching featherweight from Flint, Mich., exploded a bunch of firecrackers in the midsection of Angular Joe Doherty to take a split 10-round decision from the Brooklyn Irishman in the feature bout at the Auditorium last night.

Seldom has such a body attack as that launched by Bernard been seen in a Washington ring. Like a dimunitive Dempsey he waded in to Doherty's dining-room department with both fists flying to convert Joe's midsection into an animated chopping block.

Baby Miller, Washington's miniature Joe Louis, scored a sixth-round technical knockout over one Angelo Manners, a New York featherweight, in a one-sided six-round semifinal. The southpaw Cuban-Seminole floored Manners for 8 in the first round; 5 outside the ropes in the second round and twice for 9 just before Referee Denny Hughes intervened in the sixth.

Bezenah Gets Verdict.

Elmer Bezenah, a bulldoggish Cincinnati welterweight, took a split decision over Honeyboy Snipes, a phantomlike boxer from Georgia, in an interesting six-round preliminary. Elmer provided the spectacular punching and Snipes the spectacular boxing to the great delight of the customers. Bezenah's punching was more spectacular even than Snipes' boxing and therein lies the story of the fight. The judges voted for Elmer and Referee Sullivan called it a draw.

Joe Teems, Florida Greek, pounded out a unanimous decision over Al Gillette, New York featherweight, in a six-round punchfest. Al floored Teems twice for no count in the opening round, but the Greek's heavier punches took their toll in the later rounds.

Mike Easter did a bit of egg-rolling at the expense of Young Firpo to take a unanimous decision in a four-round opener. Mike bowled the Filipino welterweight to the floor no less than three times and had the situation well under control throughout.

Hubbell's Brother, 24, Faces Tulsa Club's Ax

Tulsa, Okla., April 22 (AP).—Carl Hubbell's brother, Merritt, 24, is having trouble making the grade as a pitcher. The New York Giant star hurler has taught Merritt how to pitch the famous screwball and Merritt can make the ball do funny things—but he is never certain just what.

Manager Art Griggs of the Tulsa Oilers in the Texas League announced today that Merritt would be "farmed out" for the season. He has not decided where.

10,000 See Breckenridge Long's Legume Win Graw Feature

Colt, $5.00, First Choice To Score

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, Md., April 22.—Owned by Breckenridge Long, Ambassador to Italy; trained by colored Matt Smart; sired by the French Horse, Epinard; foaled by the Irish mare, Shenanigan, and ridden by the American jockey, Charley Kurtsinger, an ugly 3-year-old colt named Legume, which means vegetable in France, won today's feature race.

Answering Kurtsinger's call for speed at the head of the stretch, Legume moved up to pass Boston Brook and score by a margin of a head in a furious drive. Brown Twig was third in the field of five, which also included Thisway and Sun Erin.

The race marked the first victory of a favorite for the day, which drew a banner Monday crowd of 10,000. The customers showed an inclination to roll their bills into the mutuel machines while the kiddies were rolling eggs.

The feature field was away after little more than a curtsy at the barrier. Brown Twig was in front for a few moments at the beginning of the mile and 70 yards' trip, but Boston Brook set the pace after Legume and Brown Twig went wide at the clubhouse turn.

Boston Brook Tires.

Boston Brook and Legume battled it out for the remainder of the route. The former showed a tendency to tire approaching the finish, and Kurtsinger, by some hard riding, held Legume up to take the purse, named "The Page Brook."

Legume paid $5.

The C. V. Whitney combination of a first-time starter, Song, and Jockey Sonny Workman accounted for the first race, a test for maidens over the 6-furlong course. The son of Royal Minstrel ran head and head with Paradun to the top of the stretch, where he pulled away to win by three lengths. Paradun was a tiring second and Best Butter was third. The winner paid $7.90.

Sonny Workman made it two in a row, winning the second race with Hiatus, the property of J. U. Gratton. Deliberate, heavily played, was second and Seabiscuit third in the field of 13. Hiatus, running for her new trainer, Bill Irvine, was off poorly, but Workman soon rushed her up to run with Deliberate. The pair ran head and head to the eighth pole, where Workman shook up the filly and she gradually drew out to score by a half length. The mutuel was $35.70.

Favorite Players Hard Hit.

Bally Bay put a big dent in the pocketbooks of the favorite players in the third race when third was the best he could do. It was a banner event for the Christmas brothers of Upper Marlboro. The winner was Rough Party, the property of J. Y. Christmas, and Donald Christmas' Accolade was second. George Watson rode the ride of his life on the winner. The little filly broke sluggishly, but Watson broke her up on the rail like a streak, took the lead at the head of the stretch and bounced on to win by a half length. The winner was paired with Immune and paid an $8.80 mutuel. Bally Bay was odds-on.

Xandra Takes Fifth.

Xandra, in the best form of her career and a recent winner, surprised by taking the fifth race in a driving finish with Aladdin's Dream, Abbott's Last and Speedmore. As usual, Xandra came from far back. Joe Renick rode the winner, which paid $13.50. Abbott's Last might have been the best horse but was poorly ridden by Johnny Bejshak and lost ten lengths by going wide at the first turn of the mile and one-sixteenth race.

The lightly weighted Indian News, a hot paddock tip, won easily in the sixth race. Blind Brook was second and Popo third. The winner came from far back and scored handily by a length and a half to pay $14.10.

Dear Al, Havre de Grace Race Track, Md., April 22.

In the first place, it's none of my business, but it is interesting to note the ends to which some of the tipsters at this track will go to try to outsmart the public. A certain card sold here and known in Maryland for some years, could not be bought at the usual train shed before the races on a certain day last week. But those leaving the track were presented with copies of the card showing that it had the first five winners. By the use of a fast press after the fifth race, this card was printed in time to catch the crowd on the way out. Of course, the sixth and seventh picks were their guesses and they missed. This is not a new scheme and compares with that of having two or three cards and plugging one a certain day and selling the other. I'm not trying to drum up trade for Long Shot Riley, Jack's Green Card or the National Scratch Sheet, but the men behind those sheets and some others have never been known to misrepresent their selections. Those who resort to trickery are admitting that they have no confidence in picking by legitimate methods. BILL.

First race—Last Time seems ideally placed in this field. Has that fine Bowie race as a recommendation and Clocker Mike reports some good trials. Mr. Pete defeated cheap ones at the other track and will be a threat in this field. Dalmatia for the show end.

Second race—Flower Show came through with a brilliant effort here and would have to show but little improvement to take care of this field. Dixie Dora showed early speed last out and may go on tomorrow. Bright and Early is a well-bred young thing and may take it all.

Third race—Frederick did not like the soft going over at Bowie and should this track be fast tomorrow this one will be hard to beat. Acatauw favored the other course and I don't believe he can handle the top one on a fast track. Nightsprite has had a little too much racing.

Fourth race—Sun Monk was away slowly last out and the ground this one lost at the start cost him the victory. Joe Renick rides again and if he gets away alertly we might collect a big mutuel. Ladfield and Mister Gander for the place and show.

Fifth race—Leona G. was a nice second in her last outing and barely lost to the good Aegis. I expect no mistakes tomorrow. Teddy Carl appears to be the one to beat. This one packs a stretch punch. Ogle was kidding last out and may upset the works.

Sixth race—Lofty Lady and Brains, a couple of front runners, should battle it out here. The start may tell the story. Protractor for the show end.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SONG, $7.90, $4.90, $4.30; PARADUN, $4.10, $3.30; BEST BUTTER, $11.20.

SONG, away in the first flight and nicely handled, raced reserved while following PARADUN, took command without effort entering the home stretch, then drew out easily at the end. PARADUN, hurried into a slight lead in the early racing, saved ground but could not stay with the winner when pressed. BEST BUTTER raced in the first flight under strong urging, but tired fast approaching the finish. FLIGHT OF GOLD, in tight quarters until reaching the home stretch, finished strong when clear. FURLED FLAG lost ground for the entire trip. LONMEG broke slowly and ran far back throughout. JUBILARGO could not menace in the late stages. SUPER ULTRA broke slow and was outrun. GLYNDON BELLE stopped badly after reaching the home stretch after moving into a forward position. FRICTION was left.

SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:10. Winner, J. U. Gratton's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIATUS, $35.70, $10.70, $6.60; DELIBERATE, $3.80, $3.20; SEABISCUIT, $4.90.

HIATUS, rushed into a contending position in the early running, challenged strongly after reaching the home stretch, responded to punishment and wore down DELIBERATE inside the final furlong. DELIBERATE showed good speed while setting the pace and continued gamely when strongly ridden in the final drive. SEABISCUIT, in tight quarters in the first three furlongs, found racing room and closed resolutely. PARVA STELLA was forwardly placed and held on well when the real test came. BLACK BESS was under strong handling for the entire trip. TEDDY HASLAM closed fast after being slow to settle into his best stride.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:43½. Winner, J. Y. Christmas' ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—†ROUGH PARTY, $8.80, $4.30, $2.50; ACCOLADE, $12.40, $4.00; BALLY BAY, $2.30.

†ROUGH PARTY, prominent in the early running, came through on the inside of BALLY BAY when reaching the home stretch, then held on determinedly after gaining command to withstand ACCOLADE. Latter, a keen factor in the early stages, responded stoutly while coming to the outside of the pacemaker and fought it out gamely. BALLY BAY rushed hard to take command, had speed until reaching the home stretch, then tired steadily when challenged. MANTADOS was unable to make up any ground when put to strong urging. MEROVECH bettered his position slowly. IMMUNE lacked early speed and was never a factor. PARADE ON suffered interference soon after the break. MANUAL was done after a half-mile. LAST SIGNAL had early speed.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. The Page Brook. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:15. Off at 4:15½. Winner, Breckenridge Long's ch. c. (3), by Epinard—Shenanigan. Trained by M. Smart. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:13 2-5, 1:39 3-5, 1:45 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LEGUME, $5.00, $3.20, $2.30; BOSTON BROOK, $5.50, $2.90; BROWN TWIG, $2.50.

LEGUME, going in his best form, carried BROWN TWIG wide at the first turn, was raced close to BOSTON BROOK after being straightened into the back stretch, came willingly for the final drive and was up in the closing strides. BOSTON BROOK took command when reaching the back stretch, was steadied in front, and held on gamely when placed to a hard drive. BROWN TWIG, forced wide at the first turn, could not threaten the leaders after gaining his best stride. THISWAY showed a good effort. SUN ERIN was strongly restrained for six furlongs, then failed to rally when shaken up.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. Grade "C" Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:44. Off at 4:44½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—XANDRA, $13.50, $5.30, $3.00; ALADDIN'S DREAM, $6.60, $3.90; ABBOTT'S LAST, $2.70.

XANDRA, placed forwardly in the early running, responded stoutly after reaching the home stretch and, closing gamely, was up in the last sixteenth. ALADDIN'S DREAM, outrun for the first seven furlongs, settled in his stride and came with a bold rush in the last quarter-mile. ABBOTT'S LAST, permitted to rate along for six furlongs, challenged strongly when reaching the home stretch, wore SPEEDMORE down inside the closing furlong, but could not withstand the first two.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:15. Off at 5:19½. Winner, J. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INDIAN NEWS, $14.10, $5.60, $3.00; BLIND BROOK, $10.80, $5.00; POPO, $2.40.

INDIAN NEWS, under light weight, followed within striking distance of the leaders, responded nicely when placed to a drive and, finishing strongly, wore the leaders down inside the closing furlong. BLIND BROOK, outrun for the first six furlongs, came strongly in the last half-mile. POPO was made too much of under his weight setting the pace and he tired after saving much ground. DUNBAR made a strong effort when reaching the home stretch, but faltered in the closing sixteenth.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:51. Off at 5:53. Winner, J. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DANCING BOY, $9.10, $5.80, $4.10; KIBITZER, $24.80, $16.40; INFERNO LAD, $4.00.

DANCING BOY bettered his position rapidly to enter contention when reaching the back stretch, took command midway of the final turn, then held on well to outstay KIBITZER. Latter worked his way to the leaders stoutly on the outside, challenged strongly when entering the home stretch, and held on resolutely. INFERNO LAD, poorly handled and blocked repeatedly, finished with a rush after finding racing room in the last quarter-mile. JAMBALAYA, slugrish in the first six furlongs, closed strongly in the late stages.

Star List of 56 Is Named for Preakness

Plat Eye and Today Among Prominent Entries in $25,000 Race.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, April 22.—Greentree Stable's Plat Eye and C. T. Whitney's Today stood out prominently today among 56 choice 3-year-olds nominated for the Preakness, Pimlico's spring fixture, $25,000 added value.

Recent performances of these two black colts stamped them among the first rank contenders immediately upon announcement of the official list for the mile and three-sixteenths classic to be run Saturday, May 11, a week after the Kentucky Derby.

Plat Eye surged to the front by his triumph over some half a dozen other Derby eligibles in the Chesapeake stake Saturday at Havre de Grace. Hardly less convincing was Today's going away finish to show his heels to a smaller number of Derby hopefuls in the Edgewood at the same track two days earlier.

Commonwealth Listed.

Mentioned along with these two were Mrs. Walter M. Jefford's Commonwealth, regarded by some a good second choice for the Churchill Downs classic, and Elwood Sachsenmaier's Roman Soldier, winner of the recent Texas Derby.

For those desiring a wider field to make their choice there were other promising mounts. Col. Edward Riley Bradley's sturdy Black Helen was among the top ranks in the filly contingent.

Mrs. Dodge Sloan's Brookmeade Stable had Psychic Bid as a likely hope to duplicate High Quest's triumph last year and bring the stable its second consecutive Preakness victory. Young Native and Special Agent also were named from the same string.

Young Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt will put his reliance in Gum or Cold Shoulder, and among the other hopefuls were Willis Sharpe Kilmer's North Wales II, Braedelbane Stable's Weston, F. M. Alger, jr's. Supreme Court, the Belair stud Omaha, and Foxcatcher Farms' Rosemont.

Absent from the list was Joseph E. Widener's Chance Sun, ruling favorite for the Kentucky Derby. Widener did not name a horse for the Pimlico classic, but his absence from the list was not particularly conspicuous since he did not have a nominee last year.

35 Stables Represented.

Thirty-five stables were represented in the nominations.

Omaha, Derby Entry, Wins At Jamaica

Makes 3-Year-Old Debut; Appears to Retain Old Rankness.

By the Associated Press.

JAMAICA, N. Y., April 22.—William Woodward's Omaha, one of the select few advance favorites for the Kentucky Derby, made his 3-year-old debut here this afternoon.

Meeting three lesser lights of his age over the mile and 70 yards distance, the tall, thin-barreled son of Gallant Fox-Flambino won the South Shore purse by three lengths in the very creditable time of 1:43. Mrs. Dodge Sloan's Black Gift was second, a head before Buckley M. Byers' horson. G. H. Bostwick's Allen Z. was last in the small field.

Omaha was the first choice of the day to score, paying 11 to 20 under Willie Saunders.

There were mixed opinions regarding Omaha's performance. The colt gave the impression that he still has not learned what to do in the running. He seemed to retain the rankness that marked his juvenile efforts. Saunders got the lanky chestnut away well in a good start and dropped back to last place going to the first turn.

After entering the back stretch, Omaha moved up slowly but surely on the outside of the leaders, Thorson and Allen Z. The trio came to the stretch closely aligned. Omaha then appeared to drop back as if beaten at the eighth pole. Saunders gave him a flick of the whip and the favorite responded, moving to the front easily and drawing well clear. Black Gift, stealing through on the inside at the stretch turn and then coming out, just got up to beat the tired Thorson. Allen Z. stopped badly.

Omaha and Thorson are eligible for Saturday's Wood Stakes, while this pair and Allen Z. are Derby nominees.

Little Teams With Peacock, Cards 74, Bows to Pros, 2 Up

Champion's Bad Putting Is Costly

Diffenbaugh Steals Show With 70; Chip Shot on 17th Feature.

By Dave Herman.

USING the small English ball that is barred in competitive golf in America, Lawson Little, foremost amateur golfer in the world, demonstrated his cannonball driving yesterday in the 18-hole exhibition match at Indian Spring, but his putting game, which usually is equally as brilliant, failed to click.

An eleventh-hour change found the California clouter as Roger Peacock's partner, opposed to the professional team of George Diffenbaugh, of the host club, and Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional, and the pros defeated the amateur-pures, 2 up.

While Little, the British and American amateur champion, had some 800 spectators hanging on to every shot, whether it was good or bad, it remained for the little man, Diffenbaugh, to have the big day.

Diffenbaugh Has a 70.

Diffenbaugh, firing with unerring accuracy on 16 of the 18 holes, wound up with a 70, 1 under par, and was directly responsible for the downfall of his amateur opponents. His birdie 3 on the fourth hole, the result of a deadly pitch to within 3 feet of the pin, gave his team a 1-up lead, and his sensational eagle 3 on the 460-yard seventh, where he smacked his wood second to within 6 feet of the hole, enlarged the advantage to 2 up.

With the match all even, Diffenbaugh chipped in a 40-foot putt from the rough back of the green for a birdie deuce on the seventeenth—another spectacular blow that virtually settled the issue. It beat two pars. On the home hole he was the only man to land a par 4.

Little Shoots 37—37.

With several putts conceded to all four, Diffenbaugh finished with a 34—36—70; Peacock, with 36—36—72; Little, with 37—37—74, and Mackenzie, with 37—38—75.

After starting 5—5, Little settled down, and uncorked some of those amazing wood shots that had all Prestwick: Brookline and Augusta talking. On the fifth hole, a 430-yarder, the Californian was easily 310 yards down the fairway, using a niblick for his approach. On the par 5 seventh he banged out another 300-yarder. His shot on the 235-yard ninth, which was hard to reach yesterday, landed far back of the green, and he pitched dead for his par.

Another 300-Yarder.

Another example of his driving prowess—the eleventh, 370 yards. Here he had only a niblick pitch from 70 yards for his second shot. Another healthy wallop came on the thirteenth, while on the fifteenth, 483 yards, he used a No. 1 iron for his second and landed to the right of the green. On the sixteenth, 525 yards, Little used his wood club in the fairway for the first time—a brassie—and the ball finished 30 yards in front of the green. He pitched to within 15 feet of the pin, and sank his putt for a birdie 4 for his only real putt of the day. If it hadn't been for this putt, the day from a putting standpoint would have been a rout for the Californian, as he missed 'em from as close as 4 feet.

Peacock hit a great shot on the fifteenth, winging his spoon second out of the rough to within 10 feet of the pin, but missing his putt for an eagle. It was the same hole Mackenzie almost holed out from the rough from 75 feet—a clever out.

Best Ball of 68.

The winners had a best ball of 32-36—68, the losers, 34-35—69. Peacock had six 1-putt greens on the first nine, three on the second, and 27 putts for the 18. Peacock's 10-footer saved a half on the second hole, and his curling 15-footer for a birdie three on the eleventh was another putting gem.

Little Uses British Ball In Practice for Trip

While none in the gallery knew it, Lawson Little, British and American amateur golf champion, played the full 18 holes of his exhibition match at Indian Spring yesterday with the British ball that is 1.62 inches in diameter and is not permitted in American tournaments.

The American ball, 1.68 inches in diameter, looks large in comparison to the British sphere, but as a matter of fact the weight of both balls is the same—1.62 ounces.

Little explained that he is using the English ball in preference to the American in his tune-up rounds because he wants to familiarize himself with it in preparation for the British Amateur and British Open championships.

Terrapins Beat W. & M. With Rally, 6-5

Keller's Single With 2 On Provides Margin; Md. Outhit, 14 to 8.

SCORING two runs in the ninth inning, the University of Maryland erased a one-run deficit and won a 6-5 decision over William and Mary yesterday at College Park. A whistling single propelled by Ed Keller's bat accounted for the tying and winning runs and Maryland's eighth victory of the season.

The Indians outhit Maryland, 14-8, but until the seventh inning, when William and Mary scored four runs to tie the score at 4-all, Nick Merriman had them waving at the ozone in the clutch. Vic Willis, who succeeded Merriman, gave up another run in the eighth but blanked his rivals in the ninth.

A home run by "Dixie" Moore, scoring Stewart and Jester ahead of him, featured the visitors' seventh-inning splurge. William and Mary's fifth run looked like the winning marker, but "Preacher" Franklin lost control of his curve ball and the situation in the ninth and virtually handed the home team its victory.

Walks Two Men.

Chumbris, playing for Hartenstein, led off with a walk and was sacrificed to second. Stonebraker walked as Chumbris stole third, and Stonebreaker went down to second on the next pitch. Keller's clean hit to left center scored both.

Jim Thorpe Seeking to Regain Trophies He Annexed as Youth

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, April 22.—The "greatest athlete of all time," Jim Thorpe, one-time Carlisle star, wants the trophies he won when, as an Indian youth of 24 years, he triumphed in the decathlon and pentathlon at the Olympic games in Stockholm, Sweden.

When Thorpe stood before King Gustav V with the plaudits of the crowd in his ears, he was presented with two trophies—bronze bust of the King and a replica of a Viking ship inlaid with gold and precious stones.

But Thorpe, unwise in the technical ways of the white man, saw the two trophies taken from him in 1913 on the Amateur Athletic Union charge he had been a professional before the Olympic games. The trophies, so Thorpe said today, were returned to Sweden, where they have remained unclaimed in the palace of the King.

Thorpe yesterday called on P. N. Engblom, vice consul of Sweden at Los Angeles, and asked what steps he should take to get the trophies.

A few years ago Thorpe was discovered digging ditches in Los Angeles. Since then friends have found work for him as referee in athletic contests and at film studios.

profitable rally in the sixth, also with two out. Brother Rick Ferrell drew a walk from Whitehill and big Julius Solters scored him all the way from first base with a lengthy double to left center. Young Almada brought Solters home with a single to right and the Sox had a 3-0 lead.

Held to four hits in the first five innings, the Nats finally got a run in the sixth when Buddy Myer led off with a triple to deep center field, a ball that Almada dropped after a long run. Heinie Manush's fly scored Myer and the lead was cut to 3-1.

The Nats muffed an opportunity to tie the score in the eighth, although Joe Kuhel's single drove home Buddy Myer, who had singled and advanced on Manush's walk. With the potential tying and winning runs on base, Bolton lifted a long fly to left.

The Red Sox's 3-2 lead became 4-2 in the ninth when Jack Russell, the best fielding pitcher in the league, made a sad muff of a thrown ball. With two out, Wes Ferrell tripled to center and scored when Russell dropped a throw to first base after Joe Kuhel had fielded Max Bishop's easy grounder.

Thomas Released Outright by Nats

Alphonse ("Tommy") Thomas, veteran right-handed pitcher, was released by the Nats yesterday following his failure to regain the form that had stamped him a star with the White Sox a few years ago.

Owner Clark Griffith of the Nats said that Thomas had been released outright, but as yet had been assigned to no team. Griffith is endeavoring to place him with Minneapolis, of the American Association, or Albany, of the International League.

Bought by the Nats in 1932 for $7,500 after a sore arm had handicapped him with the White Sox, Thomas pitched well for Washington only in the waning weeks of that season. Since then he has been used mainly in relief roles.

Cunningham to Run In 4:05, Is Prediction

By the Associated Press.

Lawrence, Kans., April 22.—The flat prediction that Glenn Cunningham would drive the world record for the mile down to 4:04 or 4:05 at Princeton June 15 was made today by H. W. (Bill) Hargiss, track coach of the University of Kansas.

Hargiss' forecast that his protege would beat his mark of 4:06.7 made on the same Princeton track against Bill Bonthron last summer was an aftermath of the Kansas relays carnival in which Cunningham was beaten by Glen Dawson in a slow paced mile timed at 4:17.4.

"Glenn worked out yesterday before returning to his studies at the University of Iowa and felt much better than he did Saturday," Hargiss said.

Johnson sees a great race for the American League flag, with his own club, Detroit, New York and Boston having chances to win out. Detroit, he believes, after the opening Indian-Tiger series, hasn't changed much from last year, when he said it "hustled and fought" its way to the flag. His own club, he says, has improved and is "going places."

Longer Drills Are Planned By Gichner

Says Idea Will Improve Hitting; 2 Meetings Set Tonight.

HENRY GICHNER, manager, catcher and head strategist of the Gichner Iron Works baseball team, has hit upon a plan which he thinks will help considerably his team's chances in its fight for The Post Association title in the Industrial League. Whether the idea will be as popular with the player remains to be seen.

Beginning in a week or 10 days the whistle at the iron works will blow at 7:30, instead of 8 a. m., to start the day's toil. This suggestion seemed a likely solution for Henry's problem of getting individual game preparation, commonly described as batting practice. Under the new Gichner system, the squad can get away from the shop early and indulge in a bit of plain and fancy bat swinging; that is, if they can keep their eyes open after losing the extra half-hour's sleep the night before.

"It will improve our hitting 50 per cent," says Gichner.

Experienced Hurlers.

Despite the emphasis put on the team's offensive, the titular hopes of the "early birds" from the iron works rest in the muscular arms of an experienced pitching staff, comprising Dentist Ike Driefus, from Alexandria; Charlie Zimmerli, Joe Garvey and Ed Heim, lately of the Newark Club in the International League.

Wide-awake support will be expected from Joe Hamilton, Morty Wilner, Jack Mahaney, Gilbert Tribby and Gichner himself. The infield has class and ranks with the best combinations hereabouts.

Tommy Thompson, who earned a reputation as home-run king in the Western League, is counted upon to supply a potent batting "punch" in the team's run production. Thompson will be flanked in the outfield by Jessie Bowie and Red Miller, who learned his batting skill under Coach Charlie Guyon at Eastern High School.

An important Post Association meeting is listed for 8 o'clock tonight at The Post. The various league presidents will gather to discuss ways and means of solving problems now confronting sandlot baseball.

The Montgomery County League teams will meet at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Bethesda Courthouse.

W. & L. Rallies To Win From Va., 4 to 1

Held Hitless for 7 Frames, but Scores Three Runs in Eighth.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 22.—Held hitless for seven innings, Washington and Lee's nine rallied in the last two frames to defeat Virginia here this afternoon, 4 to 1.

The Generals scored three runs in the eighth on three errors, a walk and hits by Pette and Pullen. Pette started the rally with an infield hit and Moore was safe when Hooff at first had his foot off the bag. Both counted on Pullen's single to left field, which got away from MacFarlane. Dickman scored on Hall's bad peg to first base. In the ninth, Howerton registered on a squeeze play.

Virginia filled the bases in the eighth with only one out, but could not score. Male was forced at home and Dickman struck out Hall.

Score Run in First.

The lone run by the Cavaliers came in the first frame. Male opened with a single, advanced to second on a sacrifice and counted on Cowgill's long drive to center.

Spectacular catches were made by Rogers and Carter. The former made a leaping one-hand catch of Dickman's long fly, and Carter raced back of the Virginia bench to snag Howerton's foul. Fields made a beautiful stop of Hooff's sizzling bounder in the second inning and tossed out the runner at first.

Three of the four hits made by Virginia were credited to Male.

Stocks Steady In Busiest Day For 2 Months

Prime Utilities Reach New High Prices for the Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—Utilities and some specialties today held the spotlight in the most active stock trading in more than two months.

Shares of a number of the leading power and light and communications concerns advanced to new highs for 1935 including American Telephone, Public Service of New Jersey and Consolidated Gas, and the Associated Press average for 15 stocks in this group touched a new peak for the year at 27, up .6 of a point.

Other divisions of the list were generally moderately higher during most of the session, until profit-taking set in toward the close. Traders, realizing some of the profits of the price bulge of Saturday and today, offered stocks in sufficient volume to cause fractional recessions in a number of leaders at the final gong.

While the market was rising the pace of transactions was brisk, but the realizing flurries were in smaller volume. Turnover in the stock exchange was 1,370,220 shares. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks was .2 of a point higher at the finish at 39.8.

Further evidence of a breaking up of the ice on the long-term credit stream was seen in the rapidity with which the entire $73,000,000 bond issue of Southern California Edison refunding bonds was absorbed within a few hours of its offering today.

Some of the sugar stocks attracted a following during the day as refiners advanced the price of finished sugar to 5.10 cents a pound, up .20 of a cent. American Sugar Refining was 1¾ points higher at 61¾.

Selling Erases Rise in Grains

Cotton Reacts After Early Rise, Closing 5 to 7 Points Off.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 22.—Tumbling back from new peak prices, the corn market suffered a sudden drop today and practically wiped out gains that had been scored for wheat.

Extensive selling to realize profits dragged all deliveries of corn down to below 90 cents a bushel after May corn contracts had risen to 92 cents, the topmost point reached on the current upward movement. Wheat meanwhile established a new high price record for the season, but reacted when corn headed downhill.

Corn closed nervous, unchanged to ⅜ lower compared with Saturday's finish, May 90⅞ to 91, wheat unchanged to ½ up, May 101¾ to 102, oats at ⅛ decline to ⅜ advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

Reports of dust storms in North Dakota tended to rally the wheat market during the day's final transactions and indirectly helped corn prices to recover somewhat. There also were trade predictions that a repetition of last year's weather experience would result in a wheat crop collapse at least as rapid and complete as that of last year. Oats traders took their cue mainly from corn. Provisions responded to hog market strength.

Cotton Market

New York, April 22.—An opening advance in cotton was followed by reactions under near-month liquidation and scattered selling today.

July, after selling up to 11.70, eased off to 11.50 and was holding around 11.56 in the midafternoon market when active months were 6 to 10 points net lower.

Buyers showed little disposition to follow up the advances, being influenced apparently by uncertainties with reference to the future development of the Administration cotton program, and after the early demand had been supplied prices turned easier. The general market showed losses of 5 to 7 points at the close.

Mounting Deposits Cause Banks to Study Adequacy of Their Capital Resources Relative to Liabilities—Some May Seek to Check Deposit Rise.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 22.—The persistent expansion in the volume of bank deposits is creating a number of new problems for bankers. One that is being given particular study at the present time is the point at which a bank should seek to check the rise in its deposits, owing to the fact that the ratio of its capital and surplus to deposits threatens to fall too low.

At the present time, the capital, surplus and undivided profits of all commercial banks in the country are moderately below $6,000,000,000, of which almost $1,000,000,000 has been provided by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The deposits of all commercial banks aggregate some $38,000,000,000. Thus, it will be seen, that there are $633 of bank deposits for each $1 of capital, surplus and undivided profits for the country as a whole at the present time. For a number of individual banks, especially those that have written down their capital and surplus to absorb depression losses and have not sold much stock to the RFC, the ratio of deposits to capital is much higher.

Expansion of Deposits Expected to Continue.

Bankers generally feel that the upward trend in bank deposits may continue for a long period to come, especially if the banking bill of 1935 should be enacted into law without major changes. For the time being, this rise in deposits results from purchases of Government bonds by the commercial banks. Later, an expansion in other types of bank investments and in loans, especially if rediscount privileges are greatly broadened by new legislation, is held likely.

On the other hand, increases in bank capital, are going to be quite difficult to arrange in most cases, it is feared. Bank earnings have fallen to a relatively low ebb with the decline in all types of interest rates. A substantial portion of the deposits of numerous banks earns no return at all, being kept as surplus reserves with the Federal Reserve banks. As a result, investors are not particularly eager to buy bank stocks, while bankers themselves are quite doubtful in many cases about the wisdom of adding to their capital resources when the prospects of employing their present capital profitably are far from bright.

How Deposit Increases Can Be Discouraged.

Of course, the proper ratio of capital, surplus and undivided profits to the deposits of a bank depends in considerable part upon the nature of the assets of the institution. Where long-term bonds or other assets liable to substantial depreciation for a variety of causes are held, a higher ratio of capital resources is desirable. Hence, additions to a bank's long-term government bond holdings, such as have taken place in many institutions latterly, make the question of adequacy of bank capital all the more current.

Several methods of discouraging further increases in the deposits of a bank which does not wish to expand its liabilities further in relation to its capital have been considered. For one thing, bankers can refuse to hold as deposits for the account of the Federal Government the funds arising from new Treasury security issues. Institutions now have the option of retaining the proceeds of Government bond sales made to or through them in what is known as war loan deposit account, subject to call as needed, or of remitting these deposits to the Federal Reserve banks for the Treasury's account. The pending banking bill would impose a reserve requirement to be maintained against such Government deposits, which is not currently in effect, and would compel a bank to pay an annual premium of one-eighth of 1 per cent on Government, as on other deposits, to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Bankers indicate that, especially with these additional burdens, banks will no longer retain proceeds of new Government bond sales as deposits, while interest rates remain abnormally low.

Another means of reducing deposits would be the imposition of additional service charges by banks which are concerned by the steady growth in such liabilities. The rate of earnings by banks on their deposits is declining steadily. Thus, the drop in the call money rate from 1 to one-quarter of 1 per cent per annum last week meant a reduction of about $6,000,000 annually in the revenue of commercial banks from this source alone, the loss falling especially upon several of the large New York institutions that have made the bulk of such loans latterly.

$73,000,000 Edison Bond Issue All Taken by Dealers

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—The First Boston Corporation announced during the middle of the afternoon today that the offering to the Selling Syndicate of $73,000,000 Southern California Edison Co. 3¾ per cent refunding bonds had been completed and no bonds would be available for allotment on additional dealer subscriptions.

Dealers had until 11 o'clock (Eastern standard time) to file their acceptances, the corporation stated, adding that the three hours' difference in time between New York and the Pacific Coast was the principal reason for not completing the dealer offering earlier. It was understood that every dealer participating in the syndicate accepted the maximum amount of bonds available.

Savings bank deposits alone amouted to $199,649,011, registering a gain of $2,495,036 in three months, or approximately the same as that of the commercial banks. While above the 1929 level, savings bank deposits, however, did not equal the level reached at the end of 1931.

Deposits of all banks in the city aggregated $549,451,619, and were $4,947,313 higher than at the end of 1934. Compared with December 31, 1933, the increase was $25,069,414. Such deposits were also $29,218,820 above the level of December 31, 1932.

Solvent Industry Expanding By Synthetic Chemistry's Aid

Research Has Provided Greater Variety With New Fields of Application; Production Is Now 200,000,000 Gallons a Year.

New York, April 22.—The solvent industry in this country is expanding rapidly, H. C. Holden and A. K. Doolittle, of Carbide and Carbon Chemicals Corporation, report to the American Chemical Society, which is celebrating in New York this week the 300th anniversary of the founding of the nation's chemical industries. The volume now amounts to nearly 200,000,000 gallons annually.

The expansion, it was said, is due in a large measure to the recent contributions of synthetic chemistry, which have provided a variety of solvents and offer the possibility of price stabilization. With many new solvents which are available, the future expansion of the solvent market may be expected to occur from new applications rather than from increased consumption by industries that have heretofore been the largest users of solvents, it was declared.

"The use of solvents is expanding from the familiar applications of paints and lacquers, in lotions, polishes and cosmetics—the thousand and one uses familiar to each of us in our daily life—to applications in industrial production and chemical manufacture that challenge the imagination," the report pointed out.

"Tailor-Made" Solvents.

"A few years ago it was customary to endeavor to select a suitable solvent for a specific use from among the products available on the market, while today, with hundreds of solvents to choose from, it is not uncommon to have a solvent 'tailor-made' to fit a special application. This transition has been made possible by the comparatively recent introduction of synthetic chemical methods.

"The solvent industry in this country began with the distillation of gum from the pine tree, the fermentation of molasses and corn, and the destructive distillation of hardwood. All of these sources of raw material are limited in nature, and their annual replenishment is in a large measure dependent upon conditions beyond the control of man. It was natural, therefore, that the synthetic organic chemist should turn his attention to the solvent field, since only by eliminating uncertainty in the supply of raw materials could price stabilization be attained and the needs of the future industry guaranteed.

"New solvents are making available to industry new properties which open many fields for their application that were not thought of before the advent of these synthetic chemicals. The paint, varnish and lacquer industry is probably the largest consumer of solvents of any single group of industries. The solvents used include spirits of turpentine, hydrocarbon, distillates, alcohols, esters, ketones and ethers. Excluding petroleum hydrocarbons, the protective coatings industry consumes about 40 per cent of the American solvent production at the present time.

"The best lacquer year was 1929, when approximately 20,000,000 pounds of nitrocellulose were used in the manufacture of pyroxylin lacquers. In 1932, which was the worst year of the depression, the consumption of nitrocellulose fell to less than 50 per cent of the 1929 figure. This was before synthetic finishes had begun to invade the lacquer field.

"By 1933, the consumption of nitrocellulose in lacquers had risen to 67 per cent of the 1929 figure, and in 1934 to 80 per cent. Considering the general business conditions in 1934, it is safe to assume that 80 per cent of the 1929 consumption of nitrocellulose does not represent any loss of ground to the inroads of synthetic finishes. The next few years, however, are bound to see the picture altered, and, unless new outlets are established in the protective coatings field, the proportion of organic solvents consumed by this industry is apt to diminish.

"The next largest single outlet for solvents is for use in automobile radiators for antifreeze mixtures. At least 20 per cent of the output of the solvent industry is consumed in this manner, the materials used being ethyl alcohol, methyl alcohol, glycol, and glycerol. The antifreeze market may be considered relatively stable, the volume used from year to year depending principally on the duration of the cold weather. Over the period of the next few years, this market may be expected to expand moderately as the proportion of cars in use increases."

Du Pont Earns 85c Per Share

Net for First Quarter Compares With 90c in 1934 Period.

Wilmington, Del., April 22.—The pamphlet report of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. for the first quarter of 1935, issued today, shows earnings applicable to common stock were $9,372,733, or 85 cents a share on 11,048,507 average shares outstanding. This figure, which includes dividends from the company's General Motors investment equivalent to 22½ cents on each share of du Pont common stock, compares with $9,982,994, or 90 cents a share for the first quarter of 1934, on 10,062,168 average shares outstanding.

The 1934 figures included dividends from General Motors investment amounting to 22½ cents a share on du Pont common stock. In the fourth quarter of 1934, total earnings were 56 cents a share on du Pont common stock, which included dividends from General Motors investment equivalent to 22½ cents a share on du Pont common stock. Figures for all periods include du Pont Co.'s equity in undivided profits or losses of controlled companies not consolidated.

Income from operations for the first quarter of 1935, after provision for depreciation and obsolescence of plants and equipment, was $9,262,345 as compared with $8,813,345 for the same period of 1934. Income from investments for the first quarter of 1935 was $3,169,764, including $2,499,362 income from General Motors investment. For the first quarter of 1934, income from investments was $3,991,022, of which $2,499,362 was income from General Motors investment.

After making provision for Federal income taxes and interest on bonds of subsidiary company, net income for first quarter of 1935 was $11,097,142 as compared with $11,628,154 for the first quarter of 1934. Dividends paid on debenture stock for the first quarter of 1935 amounted to $1,639,396, and on the common stock to $7,184,410, being at the rate of $0.65 a share.

In accordance with the past custom, the value of du Pont Co.'s investment in General Motors Corporations common stock equivalent to 10,000,000 shares, was adjusted on the books of the company in March, 1935, to $162,000,000, or from $15.70 a share, the previous valuation, to $16.20 a share, which closely corresponded to its net asset value as shown by the balance sheet of General Motors Corporation at December 31, 1934. The surplus at March 31, 1935, was $188,002,733.

Wabash Railway Reduces Deficit

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 22.—A report of the Wabash Railway Co. for 1934, issued by Norman B. Pitcairn and Frank C. Nicodemus, receivers, shows a deficit of $3,107,620.54 after allowing for payment of bond interest and other fixed charges. Total railway operating revenue was $38,235,813.36, compared with $36,207,016.49 in 1933, an increase of $2,028,796.87 or 5.6 per cent.

Power Issues Are Favorites In Bond Rise

Rails, Industrials Are Strong; Governments Hold Steady.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—A good reception for the $73,000,000 refunding issue of the Southern California Edison Co. stimulated interest anew in utility loans on the bond market today and advances were general over a broad front. United States Governments were steady.

Yielding first place to the fast-stepping power and light bonds only after a lively tussle, railroad loans came in a strong second and industrials were not far behind. The Associated Press average of 10 utilities advanced to a new 1935 high at 91.3, up .8 of a point on the day, and that for 10 railroads was .3 higher at 79.5. The average of other groups was unchanged to .2 of a point higher.

In over-the-counter dealings of the California issue among the bond crowd a heavy turnover on a "when issued" basis was reported at prices ranging from 98¼ up to 98¾.

The Treasury's exchange offer to holders of the First Liberty Loan bonds was about in line with expectations, but brought about an unusually heavy turnover in various Liberty issues. The 3½s advanced 5-32s to 101.14 and the first 4¼s gained 9-32 at 101.19. The foreign department was slightly irregular. Transfers aggregated $11,454,000, par value, compared with $10,574,000 last Friday.

Utilities Lead Curb's Activity

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—Buying in specialties and some utility shares enlivened trading on the curb market today. The activity broadened to approximate 206,000 shares compared with 138,000 last Thursday.

Among the power and light issues, Commonwealth Edison closed 2½ points higher and American Gas & Electric gained 1. Electric Bond & Share, however, met considerable profit taking and ended a shade lower.

Safety Car Heating rose 6½ points in a light turnover. Pepperell Manufacturing and A. O. Smith advanced 2 and 3 points, respectively.

Issues finishing major fractions to a point or so higher included Newmont Mining, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Greyhound Corporation, Aluminum Co., of America, Montgomery Ward "A" and Sherwin Williams.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

BAKER.

EFFORTS to have the Civil Service Commission institute a transfer system throughout the Government service, to enable employes to shift readily into more congenial positions and localities were continued yesterday by E. Claude Babcock, president, American Federation of Government Employes.

The only system of this nature now operating is the unofficial service offered by the Federal Diary and the employe organizations.

Mr. Babcock answers the objections to establishment of such a system advanced by Lawson A. Moyer, chief examiner, Civil Service Commission, who held that such an innovation would mean considerable added expense.

The employe leader's letter follows:

"This federation is appreciative of the friendly attitude of the commission in the matter and submits for consideration the following procedure, which, it is believed, will not be unduly burdensome, and will be of considerable value both to the Government service and to the employes:

"That the commission accept Form 375 from persons desirous of transfer and that these forms be submitted (in appropriate cases), in addition to certificates of eligibles from the register when such certificates are requested by employing officers. This could be done without pre-determination of eligibility and with simple (perhaps mimeographed) statement by the commission that the Forms 375 are submitted to appointing officers for information only, to be followed by regular transfer procedure in cases in which the appointing officer would desire to take that action. While this would not bring about every possible transfer, it would bring together appointing officers and available, eligible, capable employes."

General Accounting Office Lodge No. 8, AFGE, will hold a dance at the National Press Club from 10 to 1 tonight. The lodge has been working on plans for this party for weeks.

Archivist to Reveal Plans.

Dr. R. D. W. Connor, United States Archivist, left last night for Columbus, Ohio, where tonight he will address the annual meeting of the Ohio Archeological Society on "The Preservation of National Archives." From Columbus he will proceed to Cincinnati, where Thursday night he will address the annual session of the Mississippi Valley Historical Society on "Plans for the National Archives Establishment."

WITH the membership campaign of the National Federation of Federal Employes in the District sending the rosters of local unions to new peaks, it is reported from national headquarters that unions throughout the country are achieving equally satisfactory results.

Miss Gertrude McNally, N. F. F. E. secretary-treasurer, announces the chartering of two new unions, No. 514, Boston Navy Yard, and No. 525 at Zanesville, Ohio. Although No. 514 has just been organized, Miss McNally said, its membership has been doubled in the last few days.

Indicative of the gains outside Washington, Miss McNally points out the following new members: No. 20, Omaha, 23; No. 122, Atlanta, 15; No. 66, Pittsburgh, 17; No. 221, Langley Field, 12; No. 121, Huntington, 15; No. 463, Chillicothe, Ohio, 14; No. 3, Milwaukee, 25; No. 23, Philadelphia, 44; No. 1, San Francisco, 156, and No. 28, San Antonio, 33.

The "get-together" party at the Hay-Adams House Saturday night was under auspices of employes of the Federal Communications Commission, and not the Federal Trade Commission, as we inadvertently reported yesterday. Sorry.

Miss Betty Rice, Bureau of Ordnance, Navy, will play Mrs. Linden in Ibsen's "A Doll House," to be presented tonight and tomorrow night at Wardman Park Theater under direction of Constance Connor Brown.

Housing Need Stressed.

"The Need for Public Housing" will be the subject of an illustrated lecture by Thomas Hibben, chief engineer of Works Division, FERA, at 8 p. m. today in the Powhatan Hotel, under auspices of FERA Lodge, No. 139, AFGE.

A short motion picture, "The Other Side of Washington," depicting slum conditions in the Capital will be exhibited. The film was made by the D. C. Council of the Student League for Industrial Democracy. A brief business meeting for members at which Miss Margaret Boulton, secretary, will preside, will conclude the program.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor today between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: (F) Loew's Fox (stage, George Olson and his orchestra with Ethel Shutta; screen, Richard Barthelmess in "Four Hours to Kill"); or to (P) Loew's Palace (Jean Harlow, William Powell, Franchot Tone and May Robson in "Reckless"); or to (C) Loew's Columbia (Mary Ellis, Carl Brisson and Edward E. Horton in "All the King's Horses").

All for What?

You grow old and weary, wrinkles line your face.
You don't buy this; you don't buy that;
Advanced study? You should say not.
You'd like to save for a rainy day;
For the time when your hair turns gray.
Alas! the landlord, his riches to augment,
Says "Nothing doing; all goes for rent."

M. L. W. (F),
General Accounting Office.

Interdepartmental Session.

Plans for the ninth annual tournament will be discussed at 6:30 p. m. today by representatives of the Interdepartmental Golf League at a dinner meeting at the Kennedy-Warren, according to Ralph A. Shepard (P), Internal Revenue, president. Other league officers include Frank Butler, War, vice president; C. P. Medley, Veterans Administration, secretary-treasurer, and Ralph R. Shay, Interstate Commerce Commission, chairman, handicap committee.

Adjutant General's Office Lodge, No. 2, AFGE, will hold a dance and card party at the Hay Loft, 1326 Massachusetts avenue northwest tonight. This affair will take place of the regular April meeting of the lodge. An especial welcome will be given to new members. Refreshments will be served.

SOUND of limb and in excellent spirits Miss Agnes Leverette (C), of Atlanta, came to Washington two weeks ago to take over her first Government job—that of stenographer in Navy Department. Stepping out of the automobile of a friend the other night she tripped, fell on the sidewalk and incurred a compound fracture of the right arm. The broken arm was set at Emergency Hospital. Miss Leverette is reported to be recuperating satisfactorily.

Mrs. Graham B. Nichol (C), widow of the director of Information of Internal Revenue, has recovered from an illness and is back at her desk in the Information Department, HOLC.

Arthur Stupka Returns.

Returning by popular demand, in the parlance of the theater, the youthful park naturalist of Acadia National Park, Maine, arrived in Washington yesterday and immediately began making arrangements for the 1935 series of nature hikes in the Capital.

His name is Arthur Stupka, and the park and trail jaunts he conducted here last summer, open to the general public, were so successful that he is being borrowed again by the Office of National Capital Parks. The new schedule will be announced in a few days and the hikes will begin this week-end, Superintendent C. Marshall Finnan said yesterday.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Tributes to William Shakespeare occupy first place in "special event" broadcasts today, with Ethel Barrymore and Otis Skinner appearing at 11 a. m. on N. B. C.-WJZ network assisted in celebration by Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, bibliophile and owner of several important Shakespeare folios, and Dr. James M. Beck, former Representative from Pennsylvania.

"Shakesperiana," a program of excerpts from better known works, is on WMAL at 2:15 a. m.

If you can get WJZ try it at 8:15 a. m. when Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, will be heard in an international broadcast from Stratford-on-Avon. The address will be given at a special birthday luncheon at Shakespeare's birthplace.

A premiere, please, with Jimmy, June and Jack, singing trio on WABC, New York, at 10:05 a. m. Not carried locally.

Beauty-Box Theater reaches into the realm of opera and puts on "Pagliacci" at 10 p. m., WRC. Francia White and John Barclay play leading roles.

Egg rolling was a great success. WMAL shoved their broadcast up an hour later yesterday, picked up hits and bits: WJSV boasted of a sound effect of an egg bumping against a blade of grass. Sorry about the rain Sunday. It spoiled a good parade review.

The rainy Sunday might have been almost unbearable without the Philharmonic's very fine Wagner program. It was outstanding among this season's radio offerings. As radio programs go, this Sunday series is one of the best, has a large following and brings a great deal of pleasure to many music-loving homes.

Prince Gustaf Adolphus, elder son of the Crown Prince of Sweden, speaks today from Stockholm to the Boy Scouts of the world. This address is heard on both networks, coming to you at 1:30 on WJSV.

Speeches.

Senator O'Mahoney on WRC, 5:15 p. m., on the "Congress Speaks" series.

Gov. Philip La Follette of Wisconsin, WRC, 7:45 p. m., "Social Insurance."

Dr. Joseph F. Wall, WMAL, 9:45 p. m., "Prevention of Diseases."

Dr. James M. Beck, WMAL, 11 a. m., on the local Shakespeare celebration.

Prof. James R. Winthrow is scheduled to speak on the American Chemical Industries program, WMAL, 3:30 p. m. His subject: "The Problems of Building Industry in the Future."

Senator Metcalf, WRC, 7 p. m., "The Plight of the Cotton Industry."

Other best bets:

"Welcome Valley," for those who like Edgar Guest, WMAL, 8:30 p. m.

Ben Bernie, with "Believe It or Not" Ripley as his guest, WRC, 9 p. m.

Bing Crosby, WJSV, 9 p. m.

Walter O'Keefe, WJSV, 10 p. m.

WJSV broadcasts the baseball game today—Washington and Philadelphia—at 3 p. m.

Pro Bono Publico, Constant Reader, and Taxpayer glared fiercely at the editor, who, surrounded by manuscripts, paste-pots and reference books, faced them bravely.

"Your newspaper," thundered Pro Bono, "is too . . . too danged frivolous, with editorials about Spring and the funny sayings of this here fellow H. I. Phillips! I won't——"

Constant Reader's jaw dropped from surprise. "Too frivolous?" he demanded. "Huh, I came up here to tell him it was too serious, talking about war scares and sewage plants and relief funds and literary prizes!"

The door opened and Old Subscriber tottered in. He surveyed the group calmly, filled his pipe with shag tobacco and struck a match on the editor's typewriter.

"Man and boy," he wheezed, "I've been reading your newspaper for forty years, an' Mirandy (that's the Missus) an' me think that it ain't ever been as good as it is right now. You give the ins and the outs just what's comin' to 'em, and you're puttin' out a right fine newspaper. Why, Mirandy says The Washington Post is the only newspaper she ever heard tell of what could show her a new way to cook eggs, an', 'course I ain't throwed a ball for nigh onto twenty years, but I shore like that feller Povich who writes about baseball. And that Post Impressionist, why, the day ain't started right fer me if I don't read his article on the editorial page. Yessir, you're doin' a right smart job!"

Of course, gentle reader, Pro Bono Publico and his friends do not always come down here to The Post to tell us these things . . . they write letters instead. In fact, we get so many letters that we're beginning to suspect that the "Letters to the Editor" idea was started by some Postmaster General with the scheme of wiping out the postal deficit, but we welcome them. We think that "Letters to the Editor," written by Post readers on a variety of subjects ranging from the starling menace to disarmament, is one of the brightest spots in the paper. These letters . . . intelligent . . . timely . . . provocative . . . are a true cross-section of public opinion.

The Post publishes the brickbats along with the bouquets, and if a citizen has something to say, he doesn't need a soap-box. A pen and paper will open this Forum to him, and it's better than writing a letter to his Congressman.

"Letters to the Editor," bearing the signatures of our friends, Pro Bono Publico, Old Subscriber and Constant Reader, can be found on the editorial page of The Washington Post each morning, and after you have studied the editorials and chuckled over Ed Reed's hilarious cartoon, we recommend that you turn to "Letters to the Editor" and find out what the Man in the Street thinks about this sad, worried world of ours.

The Washington Post.

Farmer Saves Boy From Fire In Truck Crash

Rolls Lad in Dirt; Driver of Oil Carrier Is Killed at Annapolis.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 22.—Quick thinking by John Connell, a farmer, probably saved the life of an 11-year-old boy who was thrown clear of a blazing oil truck after it struck a pole near here today. The driver was burned to death.

The boy, Douglas Jones, of Annapolis, was riding with his cousin, Parker M. Simpson, 32, on a truck carrying 200 gallons of kerosene for delivery at Woodland Beach. The vehicle missed a curve in the road, hit a telephone pole and burst into flames.

The Jones boy was thrown clear of the wreckage and started to run across a field, his clothes blazing. Connell, working nearby, rushed to the lad, threw him to the ground and extinguished the flames by rolling him in the soft earth.

The farmers hands were burned severely. Young Jones was badly burned about the legs and he suffered slight lacerations, but returned to his home after treatment at Annapolis Emergency Hospital.

Police Magistrate Thomas G. Basil issued a burial certificate for Simpson and said he would call an inquest later in the week. The truck was owned by J. G. Zindorf & Son, of Annapolis.

Simpson is survived by his father, T. F. Simpson, of Purcellville, Va., and his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Simpson, who is visiting in San Pedro, Calif. Douglas Jones is the son of Mr. and Mrs. V. G. Jones, of Annapolis.

Ledger Offered In Case Against Dutch Schultz

U. S. Must Link Cash Book to Income Indirectly, Court Rules.

By the Associated Press.

Syracuse, N. Y., April 22.—The big ledger seized in a raid on the headquarters of what once was the Bronx beer empire of Dutch Schultz went into the evidence of his income tax evasion trial today.

The figures in it, however, were kept for the present from directly showing Schultz's own gains.

Into the records of the trial also went the story of Police Detective Steven de Rosa, of New York, of how Schultz offered De Rosa and another officer $100,000 and two houses in bribes if they would give him a "break."

Can't Show Income.

Judge Frederick H. Bryant ruled that the ledger could not be used by the legal staff of the Government to show Schultz's income, but that it might be employed to adduce financial evidence against George Yarlas and Dick Wolf. Yarlas and Wolf have been described as Schultz bookkeepers.

Similarity Cited.

Leonard Kirchner, internal revenue agent, was placed on the stand in an attempt by Special Prosecutor Jacob J. Rosenblum to bring out the fact that entries in the ledger corresponded exactly with bank accounts of known Schultz associates.

Then, as foundation work, the witness was permitted to bring out that figures under Schultz aliases in the ledger tallied almost exactly with bank accounts the defense already has conceded.

Objection of Defense Counsel Chief James M. Noonan to admission of the ledger was based on a contention that it was seized illegally in the raid at 215 East 149th street in June, 1931. The book was described by an internal revenue agent as a "cash book" and "journal" for the period November 25, 1929, to May 30, 1931—the years of Schultz's skyrocketing into power.

Barker Link Offered In Bremer Plot Trial

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, April 22.—Fingerprint evidence linking Arthur (Doc) Barker, one of ten persons on trial for complicity in the $200,000 Edward G. Bremer kidnaping, with the automobile in which the Government charges Bremer was brought to Rochester, Minn., to be freed was presented in Federal court here late today.

Aaron Kohn, Bureau of Investigation fingerprint expert, testified he had found the print of Barker's index finger on a gasoline container found near Portage, Wis., February 7, 1934, a few hours before Bremer was released after a 21-day captivity.

The tin can was one of two introduced in evidence following testimony by Ruben Grossman, a Wisconsin farmer, who said he found four cans and funnel near his home February 7. Following that and the testimony of various officers to show how the tins were handled, marked and sent to Washington for examination, Barker's fingerprints, taken in Chicago at the time of his arrest, January 8, 1935, also were presented as evidence.

Byron Bolton, Chicago, who pleaded guilty as the trial started a week ago, had not been called to the stand late today. Government attorneys have indicated he will give important testimony.

Who is Taking Care of the Man of Quiet Manner and Simple Tastes?

Answer: We Are . . .

Men's clothes have gone "lively." Cheerful plaids. Spirited checks. Silver greys that sing. And stripes that are far from soft-spoken.

And the models. Are they sporty! They say "country club" . . . and mean it. The very youthful sport back that Clark Gable made famous in "It Happened One Night." And dozens of equally novel variations.

But we have been wondering what the conservative fellow is thinking. Does he think he is being left out of the fashion picture? It is not true. We can see his side. And we have prepared a fashion array that will prove that we have that gentleman's point-of-view.

We have the quiet blues . . . tailored with exquisite skill . . . and designed to show the new ideas in Men's clothing fashions. Even the man of quiet manner doesn't want whiskers on his style.

We have mild but "new edition" greys that will appeal to the judicial eye of a famous judge or the business-like taste of a financial officer.

We show the 1935 fashion refinements . . . with dignity and restraint. We are ready to please the man who wants modest patterns as well as the young blade who wants color.
